THE

READER.

HE Doctrine of Gods eternal Decrees, with their Execution in his works of Providence and Grace, is of great importance in it self, and was ever so esteemed in the Church. It is that Revelation which God has been pleased to make unto us in his Word, of those Counsels of his sovereign will and pleasure, with those actings of inA 2 finite

finite wisdom, power, goodness and grace in the pursuit of them which rife and iffue in Eternity. Hereby the whole feries of divine Operations is represented unto us, in their beauty Gorder, wherein God difpofes all things in this World, unto the final iffue of his eternal glory. An Enquiry therefore into these things is so far from being a needless and curious Speculation, as some fondly imagine, that without some diligence therein, we can never attain that distinct apprehension of divine Excellencies and their effects which is necessary unto the dire-Hion of our Faith and Obedience. The nature indeed of the things themselves, which is Sublime and mysterious, with that opposition which the pride of corrupted Reafor rifes up unto, against the Sovereignty and Wisdom of God, bath buth exposed the Truth concerning them unto great and fierce Contradiction in all Ages : But as God in the primitive times preserved the knowledge and interest of it in the Church, by the holy and learned endeavours of persons famous on that account in their feveral Generations, against the subtil affaults of men of corrupt minds; fo in these later Ages be has provided for its vindication and defence, by the faithful Labours of many worthy Instruments, against all that opposition which under various pretences and apprehenfions bath continually broken forth against it. And it bath fo fallen out, that among all those Digladiations which the Church hath been exercised withal about spiritual things, there are none which have been managed with more confidence and seeming Satisfaction, unto the parties at variance about them, than these concerning the Decrees and Grace of God : For whereas they procede on various Principles, each Party find such affurance in those they build upon, as they suppose is not capable of any reasonable contradiction. Those who judge it their safest course in heavenly Mysteries to captivate their Understandings unto the obedience of Faith, and to regulate their apprebensions about them by divine Revelation, with a due reverence of the infinite Wisdom and Sovereignty of God, can discern nothing in the reasoning contrary to what they have so learned, that is of weight with them or takes any impression on their minds; when others, who procede upon and make their own inclinations, desires and Reason the Rule

Rule and Measure of their Conception ons, forcing divine Revelation and Mysteries into compliance with them, have no valuation of those Anguments which are resolved purely into divine Revelation, as representing an Idea of God, his Excellency, his will and his Power, unswited unto what in themselves they conceive of them: but it will be found that as God, who alone perfectly knows himself, and all the effects of his Wisdom and Power, can alone give us true notices and apprehensions of them, so it will be found that it is our wisdom and understanding to confine our conceptions about them, and Faith concerning them unto divine Revelations. And whatever contradictions there may be therein unto the carnal Affections of men, there is none indeed unto right Reafon, when the infinite distance between God and us is once really admitted and acknowledged. Of these things treateth the ensuing Discourse, if I miftake not, in words of truth and foberness, for the substance of what is pleaded therein; and I could not but upon the first view judge it both useful and needful unto the present feason. For whereas the Truths bere declared and contended for, bave in former Ages been opposed with more subtilty, diligence and specious pretences, than of late by any; yet being never that I have obferved treated with more rage, contempt and scorn, the common way wbereby men supply their defects in Learning and Ability, to oppofe what they dislike and condemn, the worthy Author bath bandled them with that gravity and modesty, with that particular regard unto expres preß divine Testimonies, as is best fuited to rebuke unchristian Virulency about facred things, without taking any notice of them. And fundry things in perusal of his Difcourse I take no small satisfa-Etion in; as (first) that in handling of these mysterious and sacred Truths he chose briefly to state and folidly to affirm his affertions with Scripture and Reason, clearing pofitive Truths, and not handling them merely in a way of Controversie, though he awoid not the confideration of any material Objection against what he has afferted and prowed : for as this way of teaching diwine Truths is suited unto the nature, use and end of them, as also the manner of their Original Revelation; so the mind is therein preserved sedate and free from Inch disturbing or diverting provocations as we are commonly too incident unto, when engaged ewen in the defence of Truth by way of controversie. Again there appeared unto me that Vein of Piety and Spiritual Affection, Reverence unto God, and Satisfaction in the things themselves pleaded about, as bath given me a great esteem of the Author as well as of his Work, though he be otherwise utterly unknown to me; and this respect was increased, when I found be was no Minister or Church-man, whose businefs it is or ought to be to enquire diligently into these things; but a Gentleman acted by a voluntary concernment in Truth and Piety. It would not be to the disadvantage of the Nation, or the Church of God in it, if we had more of that rank and quality alike able and alike minded. The Modesty wherewith he be diffents from others or opposes their fentiments, without fewere reflections on Persons or Opinions, is also another thing which deserves both commendation and imitation; and the confideration thereof gives me the confidence in thefe few lines, defigned unto another end, to express my own dissent from some of bis apprehensions, especially about the Object and Extent of Redemption. Had I feen this discourse before it was wholly Printed, I should have communicated my thoughts unto him upon that Subject, and Some few other passages in it : but where there is an agreement in the Substance and design of any Doctrine, as there is between my judgment and what is here folidly dectared, it is our duty to bear with each other in things circumstantial, or different explanations of the Same Truth, when

when there is no incursion made upon the main Principles we own. The Argumentative part of this Book is generally suited unto the Genins of the Age paft, wherein accurdey and striciness of Reason bare fway; the Language of it unto this, conterning which every one may judg as he pleases, Truth islittle concerned therein; nor is it thereunto that I affign that perspicuity which appears in the main parts of this Discourse, but unto the clear and distinct stating of the things themfelves in the Authors mind, which alone enables any to Speak with evidence unto the understanding of others. And bence it is that although he be forced to make use Sometimes of Scholastick Notions, yet be bath so expressed the matter intended, as to make it obvious unto the meanest Capacity any #hit whit exercised in the knowledge of thefe things. Having faid thus much of this Discourse, which I hope God will bless unto good use and fruit, I shall not need to mind the Reader of how great importance it is to have the Truths here pleaded for, well windicated and established; the fulness and frequency of the Scriptures in the Revelation of them the great influence into our Faith, Obedience and due Reverence of God, with the eminent tendency unto the exaltation of his Glory, and the debasement of the pernicious Pride of corrupt Nature which they have, the Opposition made unto them by all forts of persons for saking the Truth, who, however differing and fiercely contending among themselves, as Papists, Socinians, Arminians, Quakers and others, yet all agree in contradiction unto the Sovereignty of God in his Decrees, the special fruits of eternal Redemption by the Blood of Christ and the infallible Prevalency of Divine Grace, do all sufficiently evince, both the weight of these Truths themselves, and the eminency of the Service which is done to the Church of God in their Vindication.

A Preface to the Reader, concerning the Author of the Tract enfuing.

I I may well be neckaned among Problems or hard Questions, whether it were better for those who write and print, to publish their Names or conceal them; because many things Pro and Con might be argued upon that Subject; especially about things Polemical, when they are handled. But when Causa Dei, the Cause of God (as our learned and famous Bradwardine intituled his Book, when be wrote against the Pelagians) comes to be treated of, all Circumstances are duly to be weighed. Quis, Quid, Quare, Quando, Quomodo, &c. Who, What, Why, When and How. Among those of this kind, it's very momentaneous to know for one, that this Gentleman is one of the Sages of the Law, an Oracle in the Country where be lives. An Eirenarches, well worthy of that Name and Place. A Justice of Peace and not of Trouble, according to the distinction which our unbappy times have made. Conformable himself; yet one who affects rather to be Orthodox, and to mind the Power of Godlines, more than the Form thereof. I write this Testimony of him (though be neither needs.

needs, defires or knowes of it) because I have bad knowledge of bim a teneris, from bis Childhood. and have been certified of his Domestical Piety, and Exemplariness in all which appertains to the Prathice of Piety. Concerning the Book, it needs not Patron or Advocate : Let it feak for it felf. Etatem habet. It quickly shews Arma Virumque, the Spirit of the Man and his Weapons. This pleases me above all the rest, that though it treats of most intricate and mysterious Consroversies, yet that is done bumbly reverently, freely and with Candor. I make not my felf his Hyperaspistes or Second, or a Party to his Opinion; but because his Habitation is remote in a Corner of the Land; bis Converse more with Books than with Men; he feldom fees London; and is not yet in thefe parts, any of our Anshe Shem, noted or famous Persons. Lest any Reader should cast bim off with a scornful Ignoramus, I know not the man, I have presumed to prepare this little Lenitive, that no offence should be taken in such respects as are berein mentioned. I shall not conclude with Ecce hominem, but ad rem.

That God is.

Hat God is, is a Primordial Verity, from whence all other Verities derive their Original. If God were not, (which is the highest Contradiction) there could be Nothing but perfect Nul-

there could be Nothing but perfect Nullity; because Nullity can never pass that infinite vast Gulf, which lies between it self and Being, without an infinite God. If God were not, he could not be; a mere possible God is utterly impossible: for a God he cannot be, unless he be supreme Persection, a pure Act, immoveable Eternity, and eternal Necessity, in suprema essenti vehementia. This glorious Truth, that God is, can no where be doubted of; not in Heaven, where his glorious glorious face is opened to the bleffed Spirits; not in Hell, where his righteous Breath, as a River of Brimstone, doth kindle the fire unquenchable; nor on Earth, whilest any glimples of Heaven irradiate the godly, or any sparks of Hell flame out in the guilty Consciences of the wicked; whilest the Candle of the Lord shines within men, or the Heavens and the Earth (those Natural Preachers) declare a Deity without, and wonderfully render the invisible Power and Godhead as it were visible unto Every Particle of being in heaven and earth leads us to the infinite Being of Beings; every Motion within the Sphear of Nature and Grace draws us to adore a first immoveable Mover; every breath of life in the old and new Creature tells us of the great Fountain of Life; every beam of Light in the natural and spiritual World owns the high Father of lights; every drop of Rain, natural on the earth, and spiritual on the heart, witnesses a Deity. This truth is so indubitable, that none but a fool in his greatest folly can deny it. Cur dixit stultus, non est Deus? cur, nisi quia stultus est ?

CHAP. II.

That God bath a Will.

Od's Being being laid down as a fure foundation, I proceed to prove that God hath a Will. Which may be evinced by these Reasons.

1. God is an immense Sea of infinite Perfections, or rather one infinite transcendent Persection; and a Will (the fountain of Liberty) cannot be wanting in him, but there will be a Maim in his perfection. Liberum Arbitrium (faith Luther) eft nomen plane divinum ; solum competit divina Majestati : si hominibus tribuitur, nibilo rectius tribuitur quam si Divinitas ipsa eis tribueretur, quo sacrilegio nullum esse majus possit. Sovereign and Supreme Liberty is a perfection too high for any Creature; for that, by natural and intrinsecal Justice, owes subjection to its Maker. This is one of God's Crown-jewels, who fitteth King for ever and ever, dwelling in that light, which no Creature can approach unto, and in that Liberty, which no Creature can attain unto.

2. God is bleffed for evermore, bleffed in all perfection, and perfect in all bleffedness in the fruition of himself: he is infinite Light, to see his own infinite Perfection; he is infinite Love, to embrace his own infinite Loveliness: As he cannot comprehensively know his own infinite Perfection, unless he have an infinite Understanding; so neither can he adequately embrace his own infinite Loveliness, unless he have an infinite Will. God hath but one simple Nature, and therefore but one simple Pleasure, which is no other than the intellectual and amatorious reflexion of the divine Understanding and Will, on the divine Goodness for ever.

3. If there be no divine Will at all in God, then the divine Arm must needs be shortned, so that it can produce no creature at all; for if it produce any thing, it must do it either freely, or necessarily: not freely, for want of a divine Will; nor yet necessarily; for then it must produce things ad extremum virium, and so must produce all the possible Worlds and Creatures lying in the bosom of Omnipotence (which would be infinite actual Beings) and produce them all as early as Eternity it self; and all those infinite actual Beings, so produced, should be necessary Beings, as well as God himself. In all which many great Contradictions are involved,

4. If there be no divine Will in God. then the Glass of the divine Prescience must needs be broken; because, as God knows all Essences in his own glorious Esfence, all Poffibles in his own wonderful Omnipotence, and all congruities and tendencies to his own Glory, in his own unfearchable Wisdom; so he knows all Futures in his own Will. For all things future were in their own nature but mere possibles, and could never of mere posfibles become futures without the Divine Will; and unless they become futures, they could never be known as fuch, no, not by the Divine Intellect it felf: For, as infinite Omnipotence cannot effect that which is not possible, and potenter non potest; so infinite Omniscience cannot know that which is not knowable; for this were to erre, and not to know, and confequently a blemish in the clarity of the Divine Intellect.

5. The Glory of God (which passes before the faith of his Children) is his Grace and Mercy; and the Glory of his Grace and Mercy is the Freeness and Selfmovingness of it; and this Freeness and Self-movingness can no where be found but in the Divine Will alone, into which all grace and mercy is resolved by God himself, who saith, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy to whom I will shew mercy, Exod.

33. 19.

6. God is a living God, and lives the most perfect life, because he is the most perfect Being; and this Divine Life doth not merely consist in the comprehension of his infinite Understanding, nor only in the exertion of his infinite power; but also in the volition of his Divine Will. With thee, (O Divine Will!) is the pure Fountain of Life, the precious Well-head of Grace and Glory, all the Saints and Angels must stand still and adore thee, in the embraces of free Election, and Crown of Eternal Glory, in every Drop of Christ's Redeeming Blood, and Gale of his gracious Spirit.

CHAP. III.

Of the Decrees of God in general.

Aving proved that God hath a Will, I proceed to the Acts thereof. The Divine Will (although one pure Act) is considerable under a double Notion; either as it is Voluntas Complacentia, or else as it is Voluntas Decreti. Voluntas Complacentiæ is that whereby God doth love himself and his own Image. Himself, for himself, as infinite Love doth by an Amatorious Reflexion embrace himself as infinite Goodness: And his own Image; for where-ever that is found, whether thining out in holy Laws, or living in holy Creatures, there is his delight. Voluntas Decreti is that whereby God doth foreordain Events. Both these are Acts of his Will, and free Acts; because they fpring out of his divine Knowledge. Even God himself, through the intuition of his own Beauty, loves himself, as well as he makes his Decrees out of the Treasury of his Wisdom: but herein they differ, that God's Act of loving himself is such as cannot be otherwise 3 but his Act of Decree-B 4 ing ing (if he had been so pleased) might have been otherwise framed than it is. Pretermitting his Complacential Will, I shall direct my Discourse to his Decretive.

The Decrees of God may be thus deferibed, viz. That they are the Wife, Eternal, Immutable, Immanent Acts of his Will, whereby for his own glory he decrees whatfoever comes to pass in time. Every Decree of God is an Act of his Wills hence 'tis called Alnua, the Will of God, Ads 21. 14. 'tis an Immanent Act; hence tis called ne boos a oura, a purpose in himself; Eph. 1. 9. 'tis a wise Act; hence 'tis called body to Dedinato, the counsel of bis Will, Eph. I. II. 'tis an eternal Act; hence tis called me gyvwors and megoellew, a foreknoming; and foredetermining, Rom, 8. 29. 'tis an immittable Act; hence 'tis called to amelabetor of Beings, the immutability of his Counsel, Heb. 6. 17. 'tis an Act definitive of Events; hence 'tis called de to usin bahn, the determinate counsel of God, Ads 2. 23. and the end of all is his own glory, whereby the whole Will o his Decrees circulates into that Will of his Complacence, whereby he loves himfelf himself being the ultimate end, all meet there there as in their true centre. Now in the Decrees of God there are four things to be chiefly considered.

1. That they are founded on infinite

Wildom.

2. That they are lituate in Eternity.

3. That they are cemented with Immu-

4. That they are crowned with Infallibility as to the Event.

1. The Decrees of God are founded on infinite Wisdom: God hath a Mass and Treasury of all Wisdom in himself, and from thence he draws out all those Orders and Series of things, which through his Decrees are poured forth into being. Extra Deum there is no Reason of his Decrees, but within there is Summa Ratio ; God, even as decreeing, dwells in Light, though to us unapproachable: every Decree is irradiated with infinite Wildom though our eyes cannot enter into it. The Apolile calls the World the Wildow of God, 1 Cor. 1.21. and no wonder; for all the rare Artifices and Harmonies in the Sphear of Nature, are but the Shadows and Pictures of his wife Decrees : all the excellent Shows in time, are but the Apocalyple or Revelation of the wife Con trivances in Eternity. God possessed Wisdom in the beginning of his way, even in the framing of his Eternal Decrees; not only when he prepared the Heavens in Creation, but also when he prepared all things in his Ideal Counsel; not only when he fet a compass on the face of the Depth, but also when he set the Compass of his Decrees upon the face of all Futuritions. Every one of his Decrees is most wise and rational; hence 'tis called his Counsel, and the Counsel of his Will. In the Eternal Rolls, Causes and Effects, Means and End, Modes and Methods of Being are all fet down, but not a tittle without the advice of an infinite Understanding; there is no such thing as mere Will in God; no cacus impetus, but a Bá.965, a depth of Knowledge in every one of his Decrees.

2. The Decrees of God are fituate in Eternity. Mutable Creatures and their Acts are measured by Time, which is a perpetual Flux; but God and his immanent Acts have no other Measure but Eternity, which is a perpetual Instant. Scripture and Reason will both affert this.

1. Scripture will do it. When that speaks of the Decree of Election, it saith that God hath chosen us neg nalacoxis, before the foundation of the World, Eph. 1.4. Heaven was made and nalagodus, at the founding of the World, Matth. 25.34. but God's chusing of us to it was long before, his mercies are from everlasting to everlasting, Ffal. 103. 17. reaching (as I may fay) from one end of Eternity to another. So also when it speaks of other pieces of Providence, it intimates an eternal Preordination of things before the great Hourglass of Time was set up. There were meoreasplio naigoi, foreappointed times, Acts. 17. 26. Not a Sand of Time but it runs out according to an Eternal Decree; not a member in the body, but it is written in the eternal Book, Pfal. 139.16.not a place of habitation, but it was eternally bounded, Alls 17. 26. not a Sparrow falls to the ground but by an eternal Will ; not an hair but it was numbred in Eternity; not a Particle of Being among all the hofts of Creatures but it was registred in Eternity. All God's works are known to him an' ciavos, eternally, Act. 15. 18. Known eternally as Essences they might be in the Divine Essence; known eternally as Poffibles they might be in the Divine Power: but known eternally, as Works to be done by

by God, they could not be, but only in his Eternal Decree, which is Rerum omnium amantissima Genetrix, & suavissima Nutrix.

2. Reason also will make out the Eternity of his Decrees; for

1. The Act of God's Will is all one with God's Will, and his Will is all one with his Essence, and his Essence is one pure Simple Act; God is Love, effentially Love: Amat Deus, nec aliunde boc habet, sed ipse est unde amat, & ideo vehementius, quia non amorem tam habet, quam ipse est. the Decrees of God are but Dens volens; and, as God being, and God knowing inbabit Eternity; so likewise doth God willing: the very Creatures willed, as they are in God in Esse Ideali, are Eternal. Notable is that of Anselm, Creature, prout funt in Deo, sunt Esfentia Creatrix. Sutable is that of S. Austin, who on those words (in ipso vita est) distinguishes between arca in arte & arca in opere; arca in opere non est vita, sed arca in arte est vita, quia vivit anima Artificis : Sapientia Dei, per quam facta sunt omnia, secundum artem, continet omnia, antequam fabricet omnia; terram vides, est in arte terra 3 celum vides, est in arte colum ; Solem & Lunam vides, wides, sunt & ista in arte; sed foris corpora sunt, in arte vita sunt. Videte, se quo modo potestis; magna enim res dicta est. Oh the Comprehensions of the Divine Essence, Wisdom, Power and Will! Essences are Life and Eternity in the Divine Essence; Congruities are Life and Eternity in the Divine Wisdom; Possibles are Life and Eternity in the Divine Power; and Futuritions are Life and Eternity in the Divine Will.

2. The Eternity of Futures doth demonstrate the Eternity of the Divine Decrees: 'tis impossible that any thing should begin to be future. Si aliquid nunc non futurum (saith Bradwardine) incipiet effe futurum, ergo post aliquod instans futurum erit, ergo erit, ergo est futurum, ergo aliquid non futurum est futurum. Now if it be impossible that any thing should begin to be future, then all futures must needs be Eternal; and if so, whence are they? Not from themselves, for in their own nature they were but mere possibles; and if one possible might by a self-motion become future, all the infinite possibles lying in the bosom of Omnipotence might also be-come such; Nor from any Creature; for that which is but temporal, cannot be the Caufe

Cause of that which is eternal. The Spring then of eternal futures cannot be sound any where but in the Eternal God, and where in him? not in the Divine Essence, for that in it self, and abstractively from the Divine Will worketh no Change in any thing at all; not in the Divine Prescience, for that doth suppose and not make its objects. And how then without eternal Decrees can there be any soundation of Futures? I may conclude with that of Anselm, Nihil est futurum nist in summa veritate. If then God should make any Decree in time, the thing decreed would begin to be future, which is impossible.

3. The Decrees of God are cemented with Immutability. Aristotle by the light of Nature saw the Simplicity of God's Nature, and from thence rationally concluded the Simplicity of God's pleasure. The Eternal and Immanent Acts of his Understanding and Will are ever immoveably the same, or else infinite Simplicity could not take pleasure in them. God saith of himself, Mal. 3. 6. I am the Lord, I change not. Should he change, he would lose his Name, I am that I am. I know (saith the wise Preacher) that whatsoever God doth, it shall be for ever, Eccl. 3. 14.

His Decrees are Unchangeable. The Apostle speaking of the Decree of Election, faith, The foundation of God Standeth Sure, baving this feal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Every word hath its weight: Election is not a structure upon Faith, but a foundation; humane foundations may be destroyed, but this is the foundation of God, laid by him, nay in him in the bosom of the divine Will; there is no ftanding, much less fure standing, in the flux of Time and Matter; but this foundation, because of God, and in God, standeth sure ; it standeth in God's Eternity, which is Nunc stans; it is fure in God's Immutability, which is ever the same; and the feal upon all this, is God's unerrable and infallible Knowledge, including within it unvariable and unchangeable Love to his people: God is the Father of lights, with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning, James I. 17. The visible corporeal Sun rides circuit round the World; but whilest he salutes one Hemisphear, in the turn he leaves a dark shadow on the other : but God is an immutable and supercelestial Sun, there can be no shadow in his eternal and unconvertible Light. Neither are the various changes among the Creatures, shadows cast by any turn in God or his Will, but events ordered and disposed by him. And because the Apostle speaks in this Verse of perfect gifts, and in the next of Regeneration by God's Will, therefore there is a further sence in it, That if the Father of Lights purpole to make the Day-star arise in any poor Soul, his gracious purpole never turns away from that Soul, nor leaves it in the dark shadow of Death. The Names of the Elect are all indelibly written in God's Book; and if the Scripture cannot be dissolved, Joh. 10. 35. furely the Book of life must be irrasible. Saint Austin on those words, Deleantur de libro viventium, & cum justis non scribantur, Pfal. 69. 28. raifes an Objection, si homo dixit, Quod scripsi, scripsi, Deus quemquam scribit & delet? quomodo isti inde delentur, ubi nunquam scripti sunt? To which he answers, Hoc dictum est secundum spem ipsorum, quia ibi se scriptos putabant. Quid eft, deleantur de libro viventium? O ipfis constet non illos ibi esfe. Deleantur ergo secundum spem ipsorum, secundum autem æquitatem tuam non scribantur. In a word ; whatfoever God doth in his Decrees is immutably the same, his Decrees are as Mountains

Mountains of Brass, Zach, 6. 1. unremoveable by any Creature, because situate in the Eternal Will. The strength or eternity of Ifrael will not lye or repent, 2 Sam. 15. 29. If God's Time cannot lye, but will infallibly shew forth the Verity of his Promises and Prophecies, surely God's Eternity cannot lye, wherein he decrees and knows all. The World is full of Vicifiitudes, Matter is in a perpetual Flux, the Glass of Time is running out, and Teoxos T γενέσεως, the Wheel of Nature is running round: but all the while, God's Will is immoveable; it doth not rowl about with the Heavens, rife or fet with the Sun, or ebb and flow with the Sea; but fits King for ever and ever upon the Throne of its own Immobility. Apud te, Domine, St. Auft. Conf. rerum omnium inflabilium Lib. 1. cap.6. Stant cause, & rerum omnium mutabilium immutabiles manent origines, & omnium irrationalium & temporalium sempiterne vivunt rationes. Now besides what hath been said out of Scripture, to prove the Immutability of his Decrees, these Reasons may be offered.

and Eternal Acts in God, therefore cannot but be Unchangeable. God in framing his Decrees non egreditur extra seipsum, goes not out from his own Eternity.

2. As the Eternity of Futures proves an Eternity in God's Decrees, so the Immutability of Futures proves an Immutability in his Decrees. If the Decrees (which are the Busis of Futurition) may be changed, then that, which was future by the Decree, may yet cease to be future, sine positione ejus in esse actuali, which is impossible. If a new Decree be made in succession after a former, then the thing decreed begins to be suture, which is also impossible.

3. If the divine Decrees should change, Oh! what amazing Changes? what an horrible Tempest must needs ensue? Must not God's own dwelling-house, even his glorious Eternity, sink and fall to the ground? Non enimest vera Eternitas, ubi oritur nova voluntas, nec est immertalis Voluntas, qua alia & alia est. Must not God's eternal Prescience sall a doubting and saltring about every Future? Seeing God cannot now know his own works, no, not a moment before their actual Existence; because even then their being may be prevented by a Change in his Will. May not eternal nal Grace and Truth lose their glorious light, and Jefus Chrift, the Sun of Righteoulnels, drop out of the Golpel-orb, and all the Starry Promises in the Word, and lightfom Comforts in the Saints go out in a moment, leaving all in darkness and confusion? May not the Evangelical Banquet let down to poor Worms be called back again into Heaven, and the precious Blood of Christ return again into its Veins, and his Humane Nature be cast away into nothing, and every Saint, instead of Grace and Peace in his heart, may have a Lye in his right hand, and lie down in forrow? Nay, in such a case, must there. not fall a Change upon the very Being of God himself? And seeing every Change is a kind of Death, must not the Deity fuffer, and as it were die in this Mutation? All which aftonishing Catastrophes being to be for ever abhorred, I conclude that God's Decrees must needs be Immutable. as long as there is any Stability in his E. ternity, Infallibility in his Prescience, Sureness in his Grace and Truth, or Immortality in his Life or Effence.

4. The Decrees of God are crowned with Infallibility as to the Event; the Event is fo certain, that the Spirit of God in Scripture speaks of future things as if they were already done. Behold! (faith Enoch in the morning of the World) the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his Saints, as if he had been then in the Clouds coming to Judgment. Jesus Christ cries out of God forsaking and men piercing him, Psal. 22. I. and 16. as if he had then been upon the Cross with all the wrath of God and fury of men upon him. Whom he did predestinate (faith St. Paul, Rom. 8. 30.)them. be called; whom he called them he justified; whom he justified, them he glorified; he speaks as if all the Elect were already in Heaven: Hence God is said to be (Isai. 45. 11. as the Sept. there hath it) ο ποιώσας τα επερχυρία, a Maker of things to come; the Event is as certain as if it were already done. Now for the understanding of this point, we must distinguish of Events; either they are good things, or else evil, viz. fins. Touching the first, the Decree of God is Effective; touching the last, the Decree of God is Permissive. The first come to pass, Deo efficiente; the last, Deo permittente; but both do fall out infallibly.

1. Those Events which fall under his Effective Decree do fall out infallibly.

This

This is clear upon a double Account.

1. The Will of God is Caufa Caufarum, an Universal Supreme Cause, having all things under it; It reigns over all the armies in heaven and the inhabitants of the earth, Dan. 4. 35. The poor Sparrow is no more forgotten by it, than the great Image of Worldly Monarchy. Natural Agents must be under it, as the primum Movens; Free Agents must be under it, as the primum Liberum : the Lot is the greatest Casualty, and yet wholly dispofed of by it: Sin is the most monstrous Ataxy, and yet it is reduced into order thereby. Now albeit Particular and Inferiour Causes may fail of the intended Issue; yet the Universal and Supreme Cause cannot be frustrated, because it governs all.

2. The Effective Decree of God is backed with his Omnipotence. Who ever refilted his Will? He that doth it must first grapple with Omnipotence. The Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disanulit? his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back? Isai. 14. 27. Can any Creature hinder the purpose of the Lord of hosts? All Creatures are ready prest for his Service. But if one Creature could C 2

fteal away all its Fellow-creatures from him, yet who shall turn back his Almighty Hand? None can stay his hand, nor say to him, What dost thou? Dan. 4. 45. His power is insuperable, therefore none can stay his hand; his Sovereignty is unaccountable, therefore none can say, What dost thou? He worketh all things after the Counsel of his own Will, Eph. 1. 11. and if he work, who can let it? Ijai. 43. 13. Surely none. When God's Hand and God's Counsel go together, the Effect cannot fail.

2. Those Events which fall under his Permissive Decree, do also fall out infallibly. As on the one hand, without God's permission, no fin can come into being; If God suffer it not, no man can wrong Ifrael, Pfal. 105. 14. and (which is less than an injurious act) Balaam cannot curse her, Numb. 22.38. and (which is yet less than a curfing word) the idolatrous Nations cannot so much as desire her land, Exod. 34.24. So on the other hand, upon God's permission sin doth follow. All Nations will walk in their own ways, Acts 14. 16. Nay, and the Israel of God (if but suffered) would do so too, Deut. 18. 14. If God permit it, the wicked will do wickedly, the Tems

Jews will fill up the measure of their sins, Mat: 23.32. wickedneß will build her an house in. Shinar, in the Reprobate world, there it will be established and set upon her own base, Zach. 5.11. And what would not a Saint do if but lest in manu consilii sui? Jeremy falls from praising his God, to curfing his Birthday, as it were in one breath, Jer. 20.14,15. Peter falls from his profession of Martyrdom, to the denial of his Master, Matth, 26. If God permit fin, fin follows upon it; I say, upon it, not from it, as an Effect from a Cause, but upon it, as a Consequent upon an Antecedent. To shut up this point; The Decrees of God, whether as effective of Good, or as permissive of Evil, are still infallible as to the Event.

CHAP: IV.

Of Gods Decree of Election, as touching Men.

Having spoken of God's Decrees in general, I pass on to his Decree of Election in particular; this is respective either of Angels or Men: pretermitting it in the first respect, I shall treat of it in the fecond. God's Decree of Election, as touching Men, is set forth in Scripture under various worde, which do not a little illustrate the nature of it: 'tis called ne 69 2015, because God's purpose; med Deois is sees, because his gracious purpose; caloyi, because he separates or singles out some to mercy, in a way of Choice; πεβγνωσις, because he knows them as his own, in a way of fingular love; "reme comos, because he infallibly predestinates them to Grace and Glory; and δίδοκία το Βελήμαίος, because all is out of the pure Self-motion of his own good Will. Election is that gracious Decree of God, whereby, out of the mere good pleasure of his own Will, he chuses some certain individual men out of the corrupt mass of Mankind, unto the infallible attainment of Grace and Glory, in and through Jesus Christ. Now in the opening of this Description, there are several things confiderable, viz.

1. Who is the Great Agent?

2. What are the things defigned?

3. To whom these things are designed?

4. What is the Impulsive Cause thereof?

3. In and through whom it is done?

i. Who is the great Agent? It is no other than God himself : He chuses us, Eph. 1. 4. be predestinates us, ver. 5. Hence the Elect are called God's Elect, Tit. 1.1. and Election is stiled God's Election, I Theff. I. 4. the Elect are faid to be God's own, John 17. 6. and Election is named God's own purpose and grace, 2 Tim. 1.9. He that frames this high Delign must be a God indeed, a Creator of Souls, and Infuser of Graces, one able to provide an infinite Ransom for the satisfaction of Justice, and a glorious Heaven for the patefaction of Mercy; no less than an Almighty Potter, able even out of the Mass of perdition to make Vessels of Mercy, and fill them with Glory. All Divines will at least in words confess God to be the great Agent; but how the Remonstrants according to their Principles can own him as fuch, is well worthy their confideration : for they affert that the Object of Gods Election is a Believer; and whether there shall be a Believer or not, after all the operations of Grace, ultimately depends upon the Will of Man; and if so, how can God chuse at all? feeing the Act of his Election depends upon the Object, and the Oject upon the Will of man. The Remonstrants will contend, That Man, with his petty created created Liberty, cannot chuse as a man, if he be under the Pre-determining Will of God; and can God, with his Soveraign Supreme Liberty, chuse as a God, if he be under the Pre-determining Will of Man? And what is he less than under it, when, whether he thall have an Election or not, depends upon the Object; and whether there will be an Object or not, depends upon the Will of Man? Man's Will must go before, and make the Object, or elfe for want of one, God's Will must stand still and not chuse at all. And is this for God to chuse like himself? Are not all Souls his own, and may he not chuse which he pleases? Is not all Grace and Glory his own, and may he not do with his own what he pleases? But how can he do fo, if as to the Act of Election he be underthe Pre- determining Will of Man? But you'l fay, God is not under it for all this: for he first, and antecedently to any foreseen Faith in Man, did decree in general to fave Believers, and Believers only, as appears in the Gospel 3. and thereby did, out of his mere good pleasure, set down this Law or Rule to himself, That Believers, and Believers only, should be the Object of particular Election ;

Election; and so he is not pre-determined by man's Will, but his own, and chuses particular persons in his own way: Unto which I answer two things.

1. That God hath fet fuch a Law or Rule unto himself, That Believers, and those only, should be the object of his Election, is utterly untrue : for then all Infants, dying such (because no Believers) must be out of the Sphear of Election, and by consequence, out of the Sphear of Salvation also; unless (which is very strange) we could imagine those to be actually faved, whom yet God never elected or decreed to fave. Neither is there any fuch Law or Rule manifested in the Gospel: there God's Will is thus fet forth, Whofoever believes shall be faved; which imports that Believers are the objects of Salvation, but not in the least that they are the objects of Election. It is written in the Gospel, Believe and thou shalt be faved; but in what Gospel is it written, Believe and thou shalt be Elected?

2. That Law or Rule (if supposed) doth not answer the Argument; for still (as to particular Election) God is under the pre-determining Will of Man: If that fay,

fay, Nay, God shall have never a chosen Vessel in all the World to fill with Grace and Glory; and how then is he the great Agent in Election? Solomon fet a Law or Rule to Shimei, That if he passed over Kidron, he should die for it; he passes over, and dies: What now was the chief cause of his death? Solomon's Law or Execution, or else shimei's passage? Clearly, it was Shimei's own Act; Solomon was but as a Legislator. Pariratione; If God fet a Law or Rule, that Believers should be elected, if a man believe and be elected, that which chiefly determines the business is not God's first Law or after Choice, but Man's Faith; God is no Agent therein, but as a mere Legislator. So naturally do the Remonstrant Principles run out into that of Theophylact, 'Tis God's part to call, but Man's to be elect or not; which Principles must be renounced, or else God cannot be owned as the Great Agent in Election. And here a three-fold Enquiry offers it self.

1. What the things themselves are?

2. In what Order these are defigned?

3. In what manner these are designed?

1. What the things themselves are?
These are Grace and Glory, or Faith and Salvation.

I Grace is defigned: hence we are faid to be called according to purpose, Rom. 8. 28. and chosen that we should be holy, Eph. T. 4. Do we fee a Saint in his spiritual Glory, clothed with Humility, arrayed with Righteousness, girt with Truth; his Eyes flowing with repentant Tears, his Heart burning with holy Love, and his Hands laden with good Works? All these were prepared in Eternal Election, as well as wrought by the Holy Spirit in Time; there was Decretum Dei in the forcordaining, as well as Digitus Dei in the forming of them. Thus shall it be done to the man whom the King of Heaven will honour. In Election there is a deligning of Grace, nay all Grace; Faith it self not excepted. The Remonstrants shut out Faith from this defign, in as much as they pre-require Faith thereunto. But how unfcriptural is this? Paul was shosen to know God's will, Acts 22. 14. not to a bare notional Knowledge, but to a faving practical one, fuch as justifies, Isai. 53. 11. fuch as is Eternal life, Joh. 17. 3. which must needs include Faith. The Apostle calls Faith, the faith of Gods elect, Tit. I. I. If Faith had been precedent to Election, he would have told us, that Election is of Believers; but because it is consequent, he saith, that Faith is of the Elect. And how irrational is it also? Election is a design of secretion ; it is onlown, a chusing or singling out of some to Grace and Glory; the Elect are said to be chosen out of the world, Job. 15. 19. and chofen unto God, Acts 9. 15. ool now, (faith Christ) thine they were, Joh. 17. 6. thine in a felect peculiar manner: and Faith is the choice and prime Grace of fecretion, it is not motion, of all, 2 Theff. 2.2. If all men did believe without any διαςολή, or difference, the Righteousness of God would be upon them all, Rom. 3. 22. the Rivers of living Water would flow in them all, Joh. 7. 38. but Faith is not of all, whereby it appears, that of all inherent Graces, Faith firstly and properly makes the secretion. Now that such a prime Grace of fecretion as Faith should not be decreed, in such a great design of fecretion as Election, feems to me incongruous even to absurdity. If Faith go before Election, then how doth God chuse them out of the World, who by Faith are out of it already? How doth he chuse them them unto himself, who by Faith are his own before? If Man's Will in believing make the first and proper secretion, then God's Will hath no room to make one by electing; wherefore, if we will allow God his choice indeed, we must confess Faith it self to be designed in Election.

2. Glory is designed in Election; we are chosen to Salvation, 2 Thess. 2. 13. and before prepared to glory, Rom. 9. 23. the Names of the Elect are written in heaven, and registred in the Book of life. All the glory above rayes out of the bosom of Election, and every Crown of bliss is set on by God's good pleasure.

figned? No doubt, by one pure simple Act in God. But what is our most congruous conception thereof? Some Divines affert, that God first decreed Salvation and then Faith. Salvation is the end, and therefore first; Faith the means, and therefore last in God's intention. But this Reason is not cogent; for neither can any thing in the Creature, no, not its utmost perfection (such as Salvation is) be God's end, all whose Decrees do circulate into himself: Neither (if it were such) should God therefore will it in the first place, place, and in order before Faith; for he wills the End and Means with one simple Act. Excellent is that of Aquinas; Sicut

Pars prima quast. Deus uno actu omnia in essen-19. Art. 3. Deus uno actu omnia in essen-19. Art. 3.

Onde sicut in Deo intelligere vausam, non est causa intelligendi effectus, sed ipse intelligit effectus in causa; ita velle finem, non est ei causa volendi ea que sunt ad finem, sed tamen vult ea que sunt ad finem ordinari ad finem: Vult ergo boc effe propter boc 3 sed non propter boc welt boc. Other Divines conceive thus; That God first decrees Faith and then Salvation, and that upon this account: Such and in such order as God in time doth fave, fuch, and in the very same order, doth God in Eternity decree to fave : But God in time doth fave only Believers, therefore God in Eternity did decree to fave only Believers, that is, fuch as were so considered by him ; and so considered by him they could not be, without a precedent Decree of giving Faith unto them. Wherefore Faith is fult decreed, and then Salvation; and thus the Decree and its Execution harmonize, and both fute with the Gospel Method, which lets Faith in order before Salvation. But neither neither hath this colourable Reason any Nerves in it: For that Proposition, Such, and in such order, as God saves, such, and in the very fame order, he decrees to fave, may be taken two ways: Either thus; God decrees to fave in the very fame order as he faves, that is, as in time Faith goes before Salvation, so in Eternity he decreed that Faith should go before Salvation; and this is true. Thus the Decree harmonizes with the execution, and both with the Gospel; but thus Faith is not made first in the Decree, but first in the execution according to the Decree. Or else thus: there is the very same order observed in God's decreeing as in his faving; that is, as Faith is first in time, fo it was first in God's Decree; and thus it is untrue: for it stands upon this falle bottom in general; There is the very same order in God's internal Intention, as there is in the external Production, that which is first in the one is first also in the other. This bottom is fuch, as neither the harmony between the Decree and the Execution, nor yet the Gospel-way and Method doth require. The harmony between the Decree and the Execution doth not require it; for that only requires that that, which is decreed to be and exist first, should accordingly be and exist first; but it requires not that that, which is first in Production, should be first in Intention. In production the Sun was first before the Beams; but was it first also in intention? then God decreed a Sun, and in that instant meant no Beams. In production, the Chaos was first before the complete World, but was it so in intention? then God decreed a Chaos, and in that instant meant not a complete World. Neither can it avail to fay, that these instances are in Naturals; for the harmony between the Decree and the Execution is as accurate in Naturals as in Spirituals. Neither doth the Gospel-way or Method require it; for that only requires, that Faith be and exist first, but not that it be first intended or decreed. In order of nature, Faith is first before Adoption; but was it first also in intention? then God decreed Faith to some persons, and in that instant meant not their Adoption, which yet by the Gospel is a necessary resultance from their Faith. In order of existence, Faith is first before Salvation; but was it first also in intention? then God decreed Faith to some persons, and in

in that instant meant not their Salvation. which yet by the Gospel is a necessary consequence of their Faith. And this is the rather to be marked, because the Remonstrants affert, That God first, and antecedently to his Decree of giving Faith, did decree in general to adopt and fave all Believers; and if so, then how doth God decree Faith to a person, and not in and by the same Decree, decree Adoption and Salvation to him? These are a Conclusion naturally flowing from Faith, by vertue of the general Decree; and therefore that Decree, which designs Faith to a person, cannot but defign these also to him. In order of nature Faith is before Perseverance, yet both are by one and the same Decree : for God in decreeing Faith, decrees the duration thereof, which is but Mora in effe a kind of stay in Being; else his Decree would be very imperfect. In point of existence, Perseverance is not simultaneous or all at once, but successive, one fand as it were dropping after another, and one instant drawing on another : yet all Perseverance is in one and the same Decree. To imagine a succession of Decrees in Eternity, fuiting with the succossi-OR .

on of instants in Time, were strangely to Metamorphose Eternity into Time. Thus it evidently appears, that there is not the fame order in the internal Intention, as in the external Production; that which is first in existence here, is not first in contrivance there. Wherefore the Argument for Faiths firstness in the Decree, because of its firstness in the Execution, falls to the ground. In brief; waving both these opinions, as built on sandy foundations, I conceive it is most congruous to fay, That God decreed Faith and Salvation in the very same Decree, yet so, as that withal he intended, that in the execution, Faith should go before Salvation. As in Naturals, God decrees the Sowing and Harvest in the very same Decree, yet so, as that in actual existence the Sowing shall precede the Harvest : So in Spirituals God decrees Grace and Glory, the fowing to the Spirit and reaping of Life eternal, in the same Decree ; yet so, as that in actual existence, first there is Grace and then Glory; first fowing to the Spirit, and then reaping Life Eternal. Wherefore in God's Decree Faith is not before Salvation, nor Salvation before Faith, but both are simultaneous :

neous: nevertheless, in time, Faith comes forth first, according to the Gospel-method, and afterwards Salvation crowns it.

3. In what manner are these things defigued? I answer, in an Infallible way, fuch as never fails: Hence Election is called πείσιε μοίς, an infallible Predestination, or Predestination of Grace and Glory to the Elect. Thus the Apostle: Whom he did predestinate, them be called; whom be called, them be justified; whom be justified, them he glorified, Rom. 8. 30. The first link of Predestination and the last of Glorification are furely joined by the middle links of Vocation and Justification. The Remonstrants to decline the force of this golden place, tell us, that the Apostle here speaks only of Believers, such as love God, Ver.29. and of a predestination and vocation to the Cross, and of a justification and glorification after it patiently endured. Bur what is this interpretation but mere a perverting of Scripture? The Apostle speaks of Believers, such as love God; but did they believe and love antecedently to God's Election or confequently, and as the fruit thereof? If antecedently, What is the Calling according to purpole? What purpole is this but the purpole Crace purpose according to Election, Rom. 9.118 the purpose according to which God seves and calls us, 2 Tim, 1.9? What Calling is this, but that efficacious one which makes a man hear and learn of the Father, fo as to come to Christ by Faith and Love, 906. 6. 45? Wherefore Faith and Love Thream out of the fountain of Vocation, and Vocation comes down out of the bofom of God's Purpole. To fay, that the called according to purpole, are those which are ready to obey all the Will of God, is against the usage of Scripture, towen God's Call into man's Obedience, and God's Purpole (which is the measure of his own acting) into his Command (which is the measure of man's.) Again, if antecedently, what becomes of the se meseryra, Ver. 29? How could God foreknow, that is, fore love them who loved him before? If they loved first, the me must out, it is not Pre-dilection, but Post-dilection. It remains then that they did believe and love confequently to God's Election, and by a divine influence from thence. But to go on ; What is the Predestination here, but to a Conformity to the Image of Christ? And are Sufferings all the Image of Christ? Are Grace and Glory no part thereof? What Divine will not blush to say so? And how then is not Predestination to these? But if Sufferings were all Christ's Image, yet are all Sufferings his Image? What if they be mere Sufferings, such as have no tincture of Faith and Holiness upon them? Are these his Image also? If not, the Predestination to his Image must include in it a Predestination to Faith and Holines, And what is the Calling following upon Predestination? Is it a Calling to Sufferings? Such a Calling uses to be particularly expreffed ; Hereunto were you called, futh St. Peter, V Pet, 2. 21. and We are appointed bereunto, faith S. Paul, I The 17.3.3. But where in all the Scripture doth the word [Calling being put absolutely, and without such addition, ever lignifie a Call to Sufferings? κλητοίς αγίοις, we meet with therein, but not whaters shie perfore the Calling is to Faith and Holiness. And what is the Justification which hangs upon Calling? If the Calling be to Sufferings, are they not justified before that Calling? No doubt they are in the instant of be-lieving; and how then is Calling set first and Justification last? You'l say, this place speaks not of the Justification of their their persons, but of the Approbation of their cause. And where in all this Epistle is the word [justifie] so taken? And why fo here? Lastly, the Called are Justified, and the Justified Glorified, saith the Apostle. And are all those which are called to Sufferings Justified and Glorified? The experience of thoulands denies it. You'l fay, they are all justified and glorified, if they bear the Cross with Faith and Patience. But who dares add an [if] to Gods Word, and in this Text to the two links and not to the former? The Apostle faith exprelly, whom he did Predestinate, them he also Called, and whom he Called, them he also Justified, and whom he Justified, them he also Glorified. In the Original, the words TETES & fatten every link to its precedent, and that with appropriation to the very same perfons; & fastens Calling to Predestination, and Justification to Calling, and Glorification to Justification, and the TETES appropriates all throughout the whole chain to the same persons. If therefore any person predestinated or called within this Text, be not also justified and glorified, the chain is broken, and the truth of the Text cannot (for ought I see) be salved. Where-

Wherefore I conclude that this Text doth not treat of Predestination and Calling to Sufferings, notwithstanding which many fall thort of Justification and Glorification 5 but of Predestination and Calling to Grace and Glory, such as doth in-fallibly bring them to Justification and Glorification. God's Electing mercy towards his chosen ones is sure and unfailable; before they had any being, free Grace embraced them in an Eternal Decree, and laid them in its bosom, and when they left the Common Nullity, and in the first moment of their Being, lay in the blood of their natural enmity and iniquity, free Grace would not pass them by, but there must be naies xalahubitar, (as the Sept. hath it, Ezek. 16.8.) a time for love to let out and diffolve it felf in gracious operations; to cast its skirt over them, wash them in the blood of the Covenant, anoint them with the holy Spirit, and put a Chain of Graces about their necks. And after all this, when their Faith wavers like a Wave of the Sea, his Faithfulness is as a Mountain of Brass; when their Love cools and flacks, his Love is ever the same, and inflames theirs afresh; when their Holiness is full of Creature-weakness and imperfection, there are with him To ona To msa, holy Mercies and Compassions which never fail; when they fin and go on frowardly in the way of their hearts, yet he will fee their way and heal them, as the Expression is, Isai. 57. 18. How many millions of times, after their Conversion, might he have seen their way and damned them? but because of his unchangeable Love he will see their way and heal them. His Covenant is as the Waters of Noah, Isai, 54. 9. they fin again and again, yet his pardoning Mercy and healing Grace will never fuffer them to lie under water, nor the deluge of fin to overwhelm them for ever. In a word; his Electing Love never leaves off till it hath lodged them fafe in Heaven. Thus the Foundation of God standeth fure, and the Election infallibly obteineth Grace and Glory.

3. To whom are these things designed?

I answer in two things.

1. These are designed to some certain individual persons.

2. These certain individual persons are considered as lying in the Mass of perdition.

1. These are designed to some certain individual individual persons. The Lard knoweth them that are bis, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Their names are all down in the Book of life, Phil. 4. 9. he called them nor ovona, by name, Joh. 10. 3. STOS (faith God to Ananias) this individual persons, this very Paul, who but now was breathing our blood against the Church, this is a veffel of Election, Ads 9.15. The Elect are a determinate number; What elle were the 7000. which bowed nat to Baal, I Kings 19, 18; What the 144000. which were fealed in their foreheads, Rev. 7.4? If there were no fet number, why are they called a remnant according to the election of Grace, Rom. 11. 501, What remnant can there be unles made up of individual persons? What Election but of fuch? A chuling or lingling out, if not of individuals, is no chusing or singling out at all. this is one remarkable difference between the Will of God's Complacence, and the Will of his Benevolence: the Will of his Complacence is properly respective of Graces, and that where-ever those Graces are, without any distinction of persons, in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, feith St. Peter, Act. 10. 35. If Cain do mell, prof well, shall be not be accepted ? If a Judas believe, shall he not be justified? Without any diason, the righteonsness of God is upon all them that believe, Rom. 3.

22. His pleasure is in them that fear him, Pfal. 147.11. A good man (where-ever he be) 1127 Par draws out favour or complacence from the Lord, Prov. 12.2. And the reason is, because this Will of Complacence, issuing out of his persect Sanctity, cannot but embrace his Image where-ever he finds it; but the Will of Benevolence (fuch as Election is in the supreme degree) is distinctive of persons : for this is decretive of certain bleffings, and (unless the persons, to whom those blessings shall be given, be designed also) the Decree is very imperfect : and this is decrerive of certain bleflings out of supreme and fovereign liberty; and to this as a flower of its Crown, it appertains to define all persons as well as bleffings. Wherefore, in Election, not only Grace and Glory, but the very individual persons, who shall have and receive the fame, are punctually deligned. In Heaven there are many Mansions, and the Elect Vesiels must fill them up; or else there might be a Vacuum in that bleffed place : Wherefore fore those Elect Vessels are all numbred in God's Decree.

2. These certain individual persons are considered as lying in the Mass of perdition: this (as I conceive) is most congruous to Scripture. There Election is stiled Voluntas miserendi, a will of shewing mercy, Rom. Q. 18. and the Elect are called vessels of mercy, Rom. 9. 23. there we are said to be chosen in Christ, and chesen that we should be holy, Eph. 1.4. there we are said to be appointed to obtain falvation, and that in and by fefus Christ, 1Thef. 5.9. But if God electing did not confider men as sinnerslying in the corrupt mass, what need was there of Mercy where there was no misery? What room for a Chrift, a Mediator, where there was no Transgreffor? Why fhould Holiness be designed, which was yet in being and unforfeited? Why should Salvation be appointed, when as yet there was none loft, or in the state of perdition? Wherefore I conceive, that in Election Men are confidered as finners lying in an undone condition 3 such only are objects capable for Mercy to embrace, Christ to redeem, Holiness to sanctific, and Salvation to crown. The Remonstrants affert, that Men in Election are considered not merely as Sinners, but as Believers; but the Scripture doth pregnantly contradict them: for Predeltination is fet before Vocation, Rom. 8.30. and yet Vocation goes before Faith. Christ calls the Elect his sheep, before their bringing home, Joh. 10.16. and yet that bringing goes be-fore believing. Again, Christ tells us, Thine they were, and thou gavest them me, Joh. 17. 6. which passage, is compared with that other, All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, Joh. 6.37. doth evidently point out to us the true Method of these things: Election, imported in that phrase [thine they were] is antecedent to giving, and giving to coming or believing. Whence it appears clearly, that Faith is not antecedent to Election as a Condition prerequisite in its object, but consequent thereunto, as a stream flowing out of its fountain. Wherefore I conclude, that in Election men are confidered not as Believers, but as Sinners.

4. What is the impulsive Cause of Election? I answer, There is no other impulsive Cause but his own good pleasure. It was the saying of Plato, That the first Mover moves himself. God in the volition of himself, doth as it were move himself:

felf; the divine Essence, as volent, being ravished with it self as infinite Goodness. But in other volitions he moves other things, himself remaining unmoveable. Learned Bradwardine distinguishes the objects of God's Will into Volita priora & posteriora; priora ut Deum esse, posteriora ut Mundum esse: Volita priora sunt aliqua causa divina volitionis, volita autem posteriora non sunt causa ejus; Voluntas Dei eft causa omnium posteriorum : si ergo aliquid effet causa Volitionis divina, illud effet causa fui ipfius. But to speak in particular ; the Decree of Election hath no other Cause but the divine pleasure only. This is evident in Scripture; we are predestinated according to the good pleasure of his will, Eph. 1. Ver. 5. To the praise of the glory of his grace, Ver. 6. According to the purpose of him who worketh allthings according to the counsel of his own will, Ver. 11. If we ask, why God will call a Church out of the common Mass, samuel will tell us, It hath pleased the Lord to make him a people, I Sam. 12. 22. But if we ask, why it pleased him so to do, Moses will tell us, Godloves his people because he loves them, Deut. 7. 8. When God will fet forth the Self beingness of his Effence, he stiles himfelf felf by that wonderful Name, I am that I am. When he will magnifie the Selfmovingness of his Grace, he gives a wonderful Reason, I love because I love. God is an immense Sea of Being and Love; let the Elect vessels sail by the Plerophories of Faith and holy Contemplation, as far as they can still there will be a boundless Sea of Being and Love before them. He that will presume to spie out the Cause of either of these, must first pass over Immenfity, and through Eternity. When Moses desired to see God's Glory, God proclaims the absolute sovereignty of his Will, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious. Methinks these words, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, import a perfect Absoluteness and Incausability in Gods Will; even as that Name, I am that Iam, imports a perfect absoluteness and Incausability in God's Essence. Some have grounded Election on good Works foreseen; but this is utterly exploded by the Apostle, who tells us, that God bath faved and called us, not according to our works, but his own purpose, 2 Tim. 1. 9. and that there is a remnant according to the election of grace, and if it be by grace, it is no more of works; otherwise grace is no more of Promise and type of Glory, was di-vided by Lot, and suitably the Apostle faith, that cannedounder, me inherit by lot; Eph. 1. 11. Now in the disposal of a Lot, what reason or cause can be assigned, ex parte creature? Is not the whole disposing thereof of the Lord, Prov. 16. 33? Can a-ny thing in the World hang more purely on the Will of God than a Lot? Why have such and such Worms a lot in light, and not in utter darkness? The Apoltle answers in that place, ἐκληςώ Απρίου προοει-DEVILES, Predestination lots them in, the Lord shews whom he hath chosen by giving Grace and Glory, according to his good pleasure. When Abasuerus could not rest, he calls for the Records, and reading there of Mordecai's service, he thereupon resolves to honour him, Esth. 6. this was done like a man: But it is not for with God, who doth not bonour after the manner of men, 2 Sam. 7. 19. but in a way becoming his glorious fovereignty and bounty, he purposes in himself, Eph.

1. 9. Perinde valet (saith Calvin) ac si diceretur, nihil extra se considerasse, cujus rationem in decernendo baberet; he rests in his love, Zeph. 3. 17. and unless that complacential placential rest, which he takes in his own Will, could be broken, we cannot imagine, that he should fall a searching the Records of his Prescience; and for the good Works written therein, make a Decree of Election unto glory; for fuch an Election would not be an Election of grace but of works; and the Elect Veffels would be vasa Meritorum, and not vasa Misericordie. But where is the holiness and obedience of the Saints recorded, but in the very Decree of Election ? Therein God doth not only chuse men to glory, as the end, but also unto faith and holiness, as the way leading thereunto. God hath chosen us that we should be holy, Eph. 1. 4: Non quia futuri eramus, sed ut effemus I have chosen you (faith Christ) Sandi. that you should go and bring forth fruit, Joh. 15. 16. and happy are ye if you do these things, faith he, Joh. 13.17. But would all the Apostles bring forth fruit? would they all do so and be happy? Our Saviour answers plainly, Ver.18. I speak not of you all, I know whom I have chosen. He fpeaks not of Election to the Apostleship, but of Election to Grace and Glory ; for it is fuch an Election as shuts Judas out of the number. Neither doth he fay, I Work know which of you will be holy and obedient, but I know whom I have chosen, because all the holiness and obedience of the Saints is built upon free Election. Inter gratiam & prædestinatio-De Prad. Cap. 10. nem boc tantum interest (saith St. Auftin) quod prædestinatio est gratiæ praparatio, gratia verò est ipsa donatio. Quod ait Apostolus, Ipsius sumus figmentum creati in Christo Jesu in operibus bonis, gratia est; quod autem sequitur, que preparavit Deus ut in illis ambulemus, prædestinatio est. Others build Election on foreseen Faith and Perseverance, as if these were the moving Causes, or at least the antecedent Conditions thereof. Thus the Remonstrants, herein outstripping the Jesuits themselves. Prædestinatio, (saith Ruiz.) tota est ex voluntate Dei, & quantum ad merita, & quantum ad retributionem. And in ano-

ut faciamus, and withal gives an instance in Faith and Perseverance. Bellar-De Grat. & Lib. in proving this Thesis, Pra-Arb. Li. 2. destinationis nulla est causa in nobis: Electio (saith he) non pendet ex ulla prævisione operum nostrorum, sed ex mero beneplacito Dei. Si spectes (saith Gregory de Valentia) præde-De Pred. cap. 1. stinationis rationem, nibil est in prædestinato, sed potius in ipso Deo ; imò est ipse Deus, à quo (que sua est infinita perfectio) nulla ejus operatio reipsa distinguitur. And, Prædestinationi sunt ascriben-da omnia Dei dona quibus salus nostra continetur. Deus suos electos Opufc. 346. (faith Suarez) ante pravisa merita suà gratuità voluntate elegit, non tantum ad unum vel alind beneficium gratia, sed ad totamseriem Mediorum, quibus infallibiliter perducuntur ad regnum. And again, Electio non est ex prascientia perseverantiæ futuræ, sed est origo illius. Who can but blush at these passages, wherein the Jesuits themselves attribute more to free Grace, than the Remonstrants? But for the thing it self; the very same Scriptures, which overthrow Election as founded on foreseen Works, do overthrow it as founded on foreseen Faith. That place, Rom. 11. 5. is very pregnant against it; There is (faith the Apostle) a remnant according to the Election of grace: the reservation there spoken of is not man's act but God's, κατέλιπον εμαυτώ, faith the holy Oracle, Ver. 4. Non dixit (saith Austin) relicta sunt mibi, aut reliquerunt se mihi, sed reliqui mihi. The word in the Old Testament is very emphatical והשארתו faciam remanere, I will cause or make to remain, 1 Kings 19.18. And how doth God referve or make men to remain unto himself? how, but by giving of Faith unto them? This is that which puts them into the Ark of Salvation, neither is there any other way of reserve found in the Gospel. Now this reserva-tion (which imports in it the giving of Faith) is (faith the Apostle) according to the Election of grace: Election therefore is not according to Faith, but Faith according to Election. But as if the Apostle had not yet spoken enough in calling it the Election of grace, he goes on, and if by grace, then it is no more of works, otherwise grace is no more grace; where he doth include Faith within the word [works.] Indeed in other places treating E 3 of Justification, he opposes Faith to Works, but here speaking of Election he includes Faith within them; and the reason is evident, Faith hath a peculiar Organicalness or Receptivity to receive the free Grace of God, that the Believer may be justified, Gal. 2. 16. but it hath no Organicalness or Receptivity to receive the free Grace of God, that the Believer may be elected: Wherefore, as to Justification it is opposed to Works, but as to Election it is included within them. It is written in the Gospel, Believe and thou shalt be justified; but in what Gospel is it written, Believe and thou shalt be elected? Now that Election is not bottomed on foreseen Faith and Perseverance, I shall demonstrate divers ways.

r. From the glory of Election, which breaks forth in its Eternity, Sovereignty, Grace and Efficacy. If Election be founded on foreseen Faith and Perseverance, where is the Eternity of it? No man, according to the Remonstrants Doctrine, is completely Elect until he believe, nay, not until the last instant of Perseverance, wherein he ceases to believe. But if this may be salved by the Divine Prescience, yet where is the Sovereignty of it? Hath not the Potter power over the clay, of the Same lump to make one veffel to honour, and another to dishonour, Rom. 9. 21 ? To order different Vessels out of the same lump to different ends is glorious power; but to fever out Believers from Unbelievers is not so much power as skill. Whether God in Predestination look on men in statu integro, or in statu lapso, it is out of the same lump still; but if he elect out of foreseen Faith, it is not out of the same lump with the unbelieving World; for he looks on them in statu reparato. To elect out of skill, according to the goodness of the object, becomes a Rational Creature; but to elect out of Sovereignty and supreme Liberty becomes the great God, who can make and meliorate the object as he pleafeth. But if this also might be satisfied, yet where is the Grace of it? If God do but eligere eligentes, if Man's Faith be earlier than God's Grace, then we chuse God before he chuseth us, contrary to that of our Saviour, Job. 15. 16. then we loved God before he loved us, contrary to that of the Apostle, 1 Job. 4. 19. To love, as moved by the attractive goodness of the Object, is to love like a man; but to love Blackamores, & then give them them beauty; to love enemies, and then overcome them with love, is to love like God, whose Grace is pure Grace, whose Love is all from himself; which is emphatically implied in that remarkable reduplication, Mark 13.20. The elect whom he hath chosen; as if our Saviour should have faid, In Election there is nothing but pure Election; like that speech of God, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, in which there is nothing but Will and Grace, Will and Grace doubled, as the only reason of it self. But if all the rest might consist, yet where is the Effi-cacy of it? If Election be founded on foreseen Faith and Perseverance, then it affords no help at all to any man in the way to Heaven. How can that (faith a Learned Bilhop) be the cause leading infallibly in the way to Eternal Life, which cometh not fo much as into confideration, untill a man have run out his race in Faith and Godliness, and be arrived at Heavens Gates? Such a falfly named Predestination might more truly be called Postdestination : but call it as they please, it enacteth only, per modum legis, that men thus living and dying shall be received into Heaven; but it doth not, per modum modum decreti operantis, infallibly work those Graces whereby men are brought unto Heaven. If Election take its rife from the last gasp of persevering Faith and Holiness, then how came the poor Church by the Chain of Graces on her neck, the Bracelets on her hands, the Crown of Gold on her head? Whence had she her fine Linnen, Wedding-garment, Gold tried in the fire? These are not Natures Riches, but Pearls of Grace ; common Providence gives no fuch gifts ; wherefore they are the love-tokens of Election, sent indeed in time unto the Church, but prepared for her in Eternity. O how much better were it that the Sun should be inatched out of the World, than that the Influences of electing Love should be fuspended from the Church! All her light and life, holiness and comfort comes down from God in these precious Beams. But the Remonstrants (instead of these heavenly influences) have framed fuch an Election, as hath no more influence on the Faith and Holiness of the Church, than a Sun set up at Domesday would have upon the World that was before it: it is fo far from working, that it presupposes all the Faith and Holiness of the Church, even to the last minute of Perseve-

on of Jesus Christ, who was God's chosen fervant, Matth. 12. 18. The Lamb foreordained, I Pet. 1.20. and (as St. Auftin Stiles him) Prodarissimum lumen pradestinationis & gratie, he was, as man, predestinated unto the superlative glory of the Hypostatical Union; and this high Predestination was not out of any foreseen holiness in his Humane nature, for all that did flow out of the Hypostatical Union, but it was ex mera gratia. The Members were not elected to the beatifical vision out of foreseen Faith and Perseverance, when the Head was elected to the Hypoltatical Union out of mere Grace. The elect Stones in Zion were not laid for their orient lustre and beauty, when the precious Corner-stone (who bears up all the building) was laid with a Behold, in a wonder of Grace and Love.

3. 'Tis utterly impossible that Faith and

and Perseverance should be the causes or antecedents to Election, when these are the fruits and effects thereof. If we fearch the Scripture for the Well-head of these, we shall find it to be in the Decree of Election. Therefore when the Apostle blesses God for the work of Faith in the Theffalonians, he elevates his praises as high as Election it self, knowing brethren beloved your Election of God, I Theff. 1. 4. And in the very same strain of praise, blessing God for blessing the Ephesians with all spiritual bleffings in Christ, (amongst which Faith cannot but be a prime bleffing) he fets forth the eternal Rule of dispensing them, he hath bleffed us with all spiritual bleffings, καθώς έξελέξα Το, according as be hath chosen us, Eph. 1. 3, and 4. Where it is plain, that those whom God blesseth with Faith and Perseverance, he chuseth unto Faith and Perseverance, because he blesses according as he chuses. The Remonstrants strangely interpret these words, he hath chosen us in Christ, that is, say they, being in him in the divine Prescience. But this Interpretation cannot stand; the Apostle saith not, he hath chosen us oviac en autal, or tes en autal, but be hath chosen us en away, in him, that is, in Christ; now where in all the Scripture do the words [in Christ] import our being in Christ in the divine Prescience? The words [in Christ] in such Scriptures as relate to Justification or Adoption. do import our being in Christ by actual Faith; but in fuch Scriptures as relate to Election, they do import that all the Grace and Glory, prepared in Election, is conferred in and through Christ: this appears in that famous place, 2 Tim. 1.9. Who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began: here the words [in Christ] relating to Election, do not import our being in Christ; for the Text saith, that he called us according to his Grace given us in Christ, and Calling goes before Faith or being in Christ, and is the immediate cause or fountain thereof: but they import that Vocation and Salvation, with all the bleffings thereof, are communicated unto us in and through Christ, and that the eternal Decree or Defign was so to communicate them. Neither doth the Apostle simply say, he hath chosen us in him, but he hath chosen us in him

Eval, that we should be holy; thereby pointing out unto us Christ as the designed Fountain of all the holines in the Elect. Moreover, the Apostle saith, that he hath chosen us in him, that we should be boly, and Faith is a choice part of holines; and that he hath bleffed us in him with all spiritual bleffings, and Faith is a prime spiritual bleffing; and that he hath bleffed us according as he bath chosen us, and therefore he chuses us to Faith as well as bleffes us with Faith: but if he chuse us for Faith, and bless us with Faith, he doth not bless us according as he chuses us. By all which it appears that the Remonstrants Interpretation is an Arrow shot besides the Text. But to go on to other Scriptures; Bleffed is the man (faith the Pfalmift, Pfal. 65. 4.) whom thou chusest and causest to approach unto thee; and what approach can a finful worm have to the holy one, what but by the Faith of Christ? and whence is this approach but from God and God electing? He chuseth and eauseth to approach unto him. If Faith were antecedent to Election, the approach must have been before the chufing, the contrary whereof appears in the Text. As many as were ordained to eternal life, beleived?

lieved, Ads 13.48. The Apostle faith not as many as believed were ordained to Eternal Life, but as many as were ordained to Eternal life believed. But here the Remonstrants tell us, that in the Textitis not restaypolos but silaypolos, and that imports not God's eternal preordination, but man's present condition or disposition; for that the meaning is, as manyous were disposed or well-affected to Eternal Life, believed. Should it (fay they) import God's preordination, then all of that Affembly (which were elected) did believe at that one Sermon, and all the west were absolutely reprobated ; for the [soot] in the Text is an universal particle : now that all the Elect of that Affembly did believe that day, or that all the reft were Reprobates, is not imaginable. I answer; first, as to the word wayulvor, the import thereof will belt appear by taking no-tice in what sence St. Lake doth we this word, in the Book of the Acts, Acts 45. 2. Tagav, They decreed or appointed that Paul should go up. Acts 28. 23. Tagaparos, baving appointed him a day. Acts 22.10. God promifes Paul that it should be wold him of all things an Hranday, which are appointed or ordained for him to do; and what what these were Ananias sets forth by προεχαρίσαίο, God hath chosen thee to such and fuch things, Ver. 14. Now in all these places of the Ads, the word fignifying appointing or ordaining, why should it be taken otherwise in this controverted Text? Nay, where in all the Scripture doth this word import an inward quality or disposition? In that place (which seems most of any to speak that way) ἔταξαν έautes, they additted themselves to the ministry of the faints, I Cor. 16. 15. there this word imports no less than a certain purpose of mind in them to do that work. Wherefore I conceive that the Telay meyor, in the Text, doth import an ordination, and that of God: neither doth the abfence of med at all hinder it; for the ageσμένη βελη, Acts 2. 23. doth without a med import God's eternal counsel, and the Taypelou hour deligns an antecedent ordination, and that ordination must be God's; unless (which is the groffest Pelagianism) it be said that they were ordained by themselves to Eternal life. But to pass over the word; the Remonstrants take the Text thus, As many as were difposed to Eternal Life, believed : but can a man without Faith, who neither lays hold on Christ the Prince of life, nor yet hath any thing of the Spirit of life, can fuch a man be disposed to Eternal life? Every disposition to Eternal life must be fuch, either because it hath some intrinfecal dignity meriting Eternal life, or elfe because it hath some Evangelical congruity, to which Eternal life is annexed by Promise. As to the former, the Remonstrants as Protestants cannot own it; and as to the latter, they cannot in all the Gospel shew forth one Promise of Eternal life made to a man void of Faith; and how then can a man void of Faith be disposed to Eternal life ? But if he could, the Remonstrants of all others must not say so, for they affert that none but a Believer can be the object of Election; because (say they) God cannot will Eternal life to any but to a Believer, to a man in Christ; and how then can an Unbeliever, a man out of Christ be disposed to Eternal life? Such a mans dispolition to Eternal life, if it be not such by its meriting condignity, must be such divina ordinatione; and if so, what is that but to fay, this is the man to whom God wills Eternal life sand if before Faith God may will Eternal life to him, why may may not he before Faith elect him? Again; This disposition to Eternal life must be either some moral Virtuousness, or else some better Grace of the Spirit; if but a moral Virtuousness, how can it dispose to Eternal life? if a better Grace of the Spirit, how can it precede such a Mother-grace as Faith? But let us hear how the Remonstrants paint out this difpolition in words of Scripture. These difposed ones (say they) are the sheep of Christ, Joh. 10.4. the drawn of the Father, Joh. 6. 44. such as do the truth, Joh. 3. 21. such as will do God's will, Joh. 7. 17. fuch as have honest and humble hearts, apt and idoneous to embrace the Gospel. But what a perplexed Labyrinth of words is here? To be the theep of Christ, argues a being in the state of Election, which is antecedent to all good dispositions in us; they are called sheep before their bringing home to God, Joh. 10.16. and their bringing home goes before all gracious dispositions. The Fathers drawing imports God's action, and not man's difposition; the doing of the Truth is man's action, and not his disposition; the willing to do God's will is a gracious dispofition, but such as goes not before Faith. Indeed Indeed the young man (who yet had no true Faith) had some kind of will to walk in God's Commandments, Mark 10. 20. but it was not of the true stamp; but with a referve of his darling Covetouineis. To have a right Will to do God's Will is to be one spirit with the Lord, which without Faith is unimaginable. to be conceived that an heart can indeed be either honest to God, which is not purified by Faith, or humble before him, which is not irradiated by Faith. As for the last objection, That if these words import God's Preordination, then all the Elect of that Assembly did believe at that one Sermon, and all the rest were reprobated, it is built upon two false hypotheses; The one as if the Evangelist spake only of one Sermon, whenas the Apostle had now preached two Sabbath-days there; fo that these words are most properly to be understood of the continued fuccess of the Gospel, according to that, Acts 2. 47. The Lord daily added to the Church such as should be saved; which continued success is also hinted out in the διεφέρετο, immediately following after the words, Ver. 49. The other as if the word [600] were always an universal Particle; whenwhenas in some Scriptures, as Acts 4. 6. it doth not delign universality, (for all the High Priest's kindred were not at that meeting) but quality : also in the Text in question, the fooi rather points out the condition of Believers than their number. Wherefore I conclude, that this famous Text holds out such an Eternal Preordination of God, as is the very Wellhead of Faith in men. Every Believer is an Isaac, a child of Promise, wonderfully begotten, begotten of God's own will, faith St. James, Chap. 1. 18. and begotten according to his abundant mercy, faith St. Peter, I Pet. 1. 3. And what is this Will and Mercy but God's gratuitous defign of Grace and Glory to his Elect? The Will in St. James is such a Will as designs Grace and Confecration to God in holiness, even as the first fruits were holy; and the Mercy in St. Peter is such a Mercy as defigns Glory, even an incorruptible and undefiled Inheritance in Heaven: and both places demonstrate that the Believer is generated out of Electing Love. And as Faith is an effect of Election, so also is Perseverance, which is no other than Fides continuata, Faith standing in the power of God, I Cor. 2.5. and fulfilled by the

the same power, 2 Theff. 1.11. God (saith the Apostle) shall confirm you unto the end, 1 Cor. 1.8. and as a Reason, he subjoyns, God is faithful, Ver. 9. Faithful, as in his gracious Promises, so in his gratuitous Election; therefore he confirms his own unto the end. There are Rivers of living Water in the Godly, but the eternal Spring thereof is Election; there is the Seed of God in them, but the vital Root of it is Election. Hence the false Christs and false Prophets cannot seduce them, Mark 13. 22. The canker of Hymenaus and Philetus cannot eat into them, 2 Tim. 2.19. Now if Faith and Perseverance are the fruits of Election, they cannot be the causes or antecedents thereof. Let me shut up this Reason with that of Fulgentius: Deus pradestinatione sua & donum illuminationis ad credendum, & donum perseveraniia ad proficiendum & permanendum, & donum glorificationis ad regnandum, quibus dare voluit, praparavit; nec aliter perficit in opere, quam in sua sempiterna & incommutabili voluntate habet dispositum.

4. My last Reason shall be taken from the grand Scope and Design of the Scriptures, which is to exalt God and abase the Creature. There God's glory is revealed, and all flesh is but grass; there God is all in all, and all men are nothing; the willer and runner are nothing, and Gods mercy is all; the planter and waterer are nothing, and Gods giving the encrease is all. There all men lie very low in a Dungeon of Darkness, Grave of Sin, and miserable Chains of Hardness and Unbelief; and God fits very high, and out of the fovereign Self-motion of his own Will, shines into one Heart and not into another; opens one Grave and not another; frees one spiritual Prisoner and not another. There Zions dust, I mean the Creatureweakness, and desectibility of the Church and all her inherent Graces, appear on the one hand, and the sureness of God's Mercy, and the everlafting immutability of his Love and Counsel thines forth on the other: and what's the meaning of all this, but to cut off boafting and stain pride, abase the Creature and exalt God? In nullo nobis gloriandum quando nostrum nibileft. But if (as the Remonstrants asfert) Election be built on Faith and Perfeverance, and this Faith and Perseverance be wrought by God in a superable way only, so as men may believe or not, or believing, may persevere or not; then then the Crown is plucked off from-Free Grace and clapt upon Free Will; God is dethroned and man is exalted, and fo may fall a boafting in fome fuch language as that of Theophylact; 'Tis God's part to call, but mine to be elect or not; tis God's part to reveal Gospel, but mine either to believe and persevere, and so found the Decree of Election, or else not to believe and persevere, and so to impede it. And if, to silence such swelling words of vanity, God should put forth such astonishing questions to him about the Spiritual World, as he did to fob about the Natural, yet might man return an answer to his Maker. Should God ask, Where wast thou when I laid the foundation of my Church in my divine Decrees? when I laid the measures of her Graces in my Eternal purpose? Man may fay, My Faith was there stretching out the Line, and fastning the Corner-stone of Election. Should he ask, Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Predestination, that it shall not cause a Spring of Faith and Holiness in my Church? Man may fay, I can so bind them up, that (if I please) God shall have never an Elect Vessel to fill with Mercy, nor Christ any where to lay his Merits F 4 among among all the fons of men. Should he yetask, Who hath known the mind of the Lord, or been his Counfeller? Man may answer, My Free Will was consulted with from time to time, even to the last gasp of Perseverance, before the Decree of Election was concluded in Heaven. Should he ask on, Who made thee to differ from another? The Believer may anfwer, Adam did not difference me, for he left me in the common Mass; neither did God difference me, for he gave me only the Common Grace: but I my self have made the difference, by freely embracing the very same Grace which others freely rejected. In a word; should he expostulate with his Church as with Jerusalem, Ezek. 15.2, 3. What is the vine-tree more than any tree ? Will men take a pin of it to hang a vessel thereon? The Church may anfwer, My own Free Will is such a pin, that my Faith and Perseverance chiefly hang upon it, and my Faith & Perseverance are fuch pins, that God himself hangs up the eternal Rolls of his Election upon them. Thus and much more may the Will of man by the Remonstrants Principles, sit as a Queen glorifying her felf, and opening her mouth in Blasphemies against the Sovereignty of God's Will, and the freeness ness and power of his Grace. But all this while a deaf Ear is turned to the Scriptures, which cry aloud, No flesh must glory in it self; he that glorieth must glory in the Lord; 'tis not of the runner or willer, but of God who sheweth mercy; he hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardneth: And if any man reply to this, he must hear his own nullity; Nay but 0 man who art thou? and God's fovereignty, hath not the potter power over the clay? that so he may fall down astonied at the Glory of God, and cry out, a Baso, Oh the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! Indeed according to the Remonstrants Doctrine (which bottoms God's Election on mans Faith and Perseverance) there is no 66,905 at all in it, all is ultimately resolved into the shallow Will of man; there is no unfearchableness or untraceable difficulty at all in it, all is plain and easie, every jot of it carries a clearness and visible equity. Election being only God's Decree to fave Believers, there is no more scruple or intricacy in it, than there will be in the Judicial proceeding at the last Judgment, ment, when all things shall be as obvious to every eye, as if they were represented in a Sea of Glass. But if, according to the Apostles Scope, we do confider the absolute Sovereignty of God's Will in that Expression, He will have mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardneth, there is a very glorious abyss in it, such as may justly astonish us into eternal admiration. Oh the heights and depths of divine Love! All the Elect of God may here lose themselves in holy Mazes and trances, My God! my God! (may every one of them fay) Why hast thou chosen me? I know, and not without wondring, that Heaven is mine through Christ, and Christ is mine through Faith, and Faith is mine through the Election of Grace: but my God! my God! why hast thou chosen me? I know that thy blood was shed for me, and thy Spirit is fhed into me, and thy Glory is reserved for me; and all this out of love: but my God! my God! why hast thou loved me? Oh that I could adore Calling, Justifying, Glorifying Grace, from the top of Predestination! Thou hast loved me because thou hast loved me; thou hast chosen me because thou hast chosen chosen me: Even so (holy Father!) because so it seemeth good in thy sight.

5. Having dispatched the Impulsive Cause of Election, I proceed to the last thing, viz. in whom God doth Elect us; I answer with the Apostle, God chuseth us in Christ, Eph. 1. 4. But because these words are variously taken, it is to be considered how Christ may be stilled the purchaser of Election; whether only quoad res in Electione volitas & praparatas, or also quoad assum volentis: to which I answer.

1. Affirmatively; Jesus Christ as Godman our glorious Mediator did purchase Election, quoad res in Electione volitas. All the Churches Grace and Glory, Sanctity and Salvation, Faith and Fruition must sing Hosannahs and Hallelujahs to him, whose precious Blood (more worth than a thousand Worlds) is the glorious price of all these. God, in the Decree of Election, did not only design the communication of these to his own Elect, but also he did design that communication to be in and through Christ.

2. Negatively; I conceive that Jesus Christ as God-man our Mediator did not purchase Election, quoad actum volen-

1. That phrase [chosen in Christ, Eph.
1. 4.] doth not evince Christ to be the Cause of Election; for in another place we are said to be chosen to Salvation en αγιασμώ πνουμαίος, in the sanctification of the Spirit, 2 Thess. 2. 13. Which sanctification is for all that not a Cause but an Effect of Election.

2. Christ was delivered up to death ecoulin Body, by the determinate counsel of God, Acts 2. 23. First, he was delivered Bon, by a Counsel or Decree of God; and if being delivered by God's Decree, he merited the Decree of Election, then God made one Decree, that Christ should come and merit the making of another. Christ our Mediator stands in the midst between God and man; but that he should stand so between the two Decrees God, as a fruit of the one and a cause of the other, feems very incongruous. But further, he was delivered age of plin poly, by the determinate counsel of God, that is, by a Decree perfectly designative of his Death and the fruits thereof, and in a special manner perfectly designative of those individual persons, who should have Grace and Glory in and through him. If it it be not so persectly designative, how is it a determinate Counsel? If it be so persectly designative, is not the Decree of Election at least included therein? Undoubtedly it is. Now this determinate Counsel (which is inclusive of the Decree of Election) was not merited by Christ; for he was delivered by it, and did not merit that by which he was delivered.

3. Christ came to do his Fathers will. Heb. 10.7. all that he did and suffered was a faithfulnes τω ποιήσαντι αυτόν, to him that made him a Mediator to do and suffer the same, Heb. 3. 2. Now alind est facere voluntatem Deo, alind facere voluntatem Dei. Christ did not make a new Will in God, but do the Will of God: if he had made a new Will in God, then at his death there was not only a passion in the slesh of God, but (as it may feem) in the very Will of God too; wherefore he not making a new will in God, did not merit the Decree of Election. But further; how did he do the Will of God? Did he not do it by laying down his life for his sheep, Joh. 10. 15? By redeeming a people out of every nation, Revel. 5.9? By purifying to himself a peculiar people, Tit. 2. 14?
By bringing many sons unto glory, Heb. 2. 10? And

And what is all this but the executing of the Decree of Election? And if Christ's errand into the World was to execute Election, then how did he merit it?

4. God might have exacted satisfaction from poor finners in their own persons, he was not bound to accept payment from another; wherefore Christ's Blood and Righteousness are meritorious as for us, not merely by their intrinsecal dignity, but by the divine acceptation; God receiving them as on our behalf. Whence it clearly appears that the divine Will doth guide the Merit of Christ in all its procurements; and how then doth the Merit of Christ guide the divine Will in its eternal Election? Can it guide its Guide? Can it go before its Leader? Surely that divine Will which goes before those meritorious procurements by its Acceptation, doth not follow after them in its eternal Decrees.

5. The Father is the first Person in the sacred Trinity, and works from himself; the Son is the second and works from the Father. Thus he tells us, that he can do nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father do, Joh. 5. 19. And in his Prayer to his Father, he saith; Thine they were and and thou gavest them me, Joh. 17. 6. Thine they were by Election, and thou gavest them me, as the peculiar purchase of my Paffion. But now if Christ by his Merits do found the very Decree of Election, is not the Order of working in the facred Trinity inverted? Is not the Son the first Origine of our Salvation? Doth not the Father, even in his Eternal Election, work from the Son? Might not the Scripture rather have faid, that the Elect were given by the Son to the Father, than by the Father to the Son ? Wherefore to me it feems most congruous to say, That the Fathers Love laid the first plot of our Salvation, and then the Sons Blood purchased Grace and Glory for us.

I shall shut up all with an Answer to an Objection. This Theses [that Christ did not merit the Decree of Election] seems to abase Christ, as if he were a mere medium for the executing of Election; nay, to nullisse his Merits; for it supposes, that God doth amare peccatores ad salutem etiam extra Christum, that God doth destinate eternal Life to them, even without a Mediator; and then what necessity is there at all of Christ's Me-

I answer: Far be it from every Christian to abase and hullifie the Merits of Christ; but (as I take it) the Thesis aforesaid doth neither of these. Not abase Christ as a mere medium under the Decree of Election: for though he merited not the Decree of Election, yet must his praise be ever glorious, and his Name above every name; in that he is both the glorious Head of the Elect, and the meritorious Fountain of all the bleffings and good things of Election. In Eternity the Elect are predestinated to be conformed to his Image, as the first-born of all, and in time they are called, justified, fanctified and glorified in and through him, as the purchafer of all. Neither doth he vilifie Christ, who calls him the grand Medium for the executing of Election: the Apostle cries up Christ by those glorious Titles, The bead of the Church, the beginning, the firstborn from the dead, one who hath the primacy for preeminence in all things, Col. 1. 18.yet immediatly after puts all under the Father's Eudonnoe, Ver. 19. His Decree or good pleasure did preordain and direct all. Neither doth this Thesis nullifie the Merits of Christ; for these consist not in procuring the Decree of Election, but in procuring procuring Grace and Glory; and these he procured, though not the Decree it felf. Neither doth it at all follow, that, if Christ merited not the very Decree, then God doth amare peccatores ad Salutem extra Christum, or destinate Eternal life to them without a Mediator. For feeing Christ is predestinated to be the Head of the Elect, and Fountain of all Grace and Glory unto them; and the Elect are predestinated to be the Body of Christ, and to receive all Grace and Glory in and through him; and both these Predestinations are simultaneous in the heart of God, and framed together in the same instant of Eternity: There is not, nor cannot be any colour at all to fay, that God doth love sinners extra Christum, or destinate Eternal life to them without a Mediator. When God in free Election refolves with himself, such individual perfons shall by an effectual Call be united to Christ as members of his Body, and being fuch, shall be washed in his blood, filled with his Spirit, and at last crowned with his everlafting Salvation; when he resolves, every grain shall come through Joseph's hands, every particle of Grace, every income of the holy Spirit, every glimple glimpse of Divine Favour, every beam of glory in Heaven, shall pass through Jesus Christ's hands; nay, through his very Heart-blood and crucified Flesh unto the Elect, Doth he now love them extra Christum? Doth he yet destinate them to Eternal life without a Mediator? Undoubtedly he doth not. If therefore you ask me, what necessity there is of Christs merits, I must answer, That all Grace and Glory, Sanctity and Salvation, Faith and Fruition are thereby purchased and procured for the Elect. The pure sountain of Election rises of it self in the Will of God, but the gracious streams thereof issue forth through the bleeding Wounds of Christ.

CHAP. V.

Of Gods Decree of Reprobation, as touching Men.

Aving treated of the Decree of Election, as respective of men; I proceed to the Decree of Reprobation, as it relates to them. In the Old Testament we find the which is opposite to me in

the Septuagint rendred by anoscrupaçe, and importing as much as reprobare, to reprobate or reject. In the New Testament we have adding importing a rejectaneous or disallowed person, and rather pointing out man's State than God's Act. But to pass over the word; Reprobation is that Eternal Decree of God whereby he purposes in himself not to give Grace and Glory to some individual persons lying in the Mass of Humane Corruption, but to leave them to final sin, and for the same to punish them with Eternal Damination. In this Decree the Divine Will hath (as I may so say) a Triple Act: For

1. It purposes, not to give Grace and Glory to some persons, and this is called among Divines Preterition or Non-electrion; and is of all other the most proper act of Reprobation, as it stands in opposition to Election. Hence Reprobates are called the οἱ λοιποὶ, rest or residue, in opposition to the Elect, Rom. 11. 7. the nunquam noti, or never known, Matth. 7.23. in opposition to the foreknown, and the not written in the book of life, Revel. 13.8. in opposition to the written ones, whose names are enrolled in Heaven.

2. It purpoles to leave them to final G 2

fin. I say final sin; for God permits sin even in the Elect, but final sin only in the Reprobate. Thus God suffered the Nations to walk in their own ways, Acts 14. 16. and thereby gave them pereundi licentiam. Thus he hardneth whom he will, Rom.9.18. and hardening in that place imports a not giving the mollifying Graces of Faith and Repentance, and withal a permission of final sin in the Reprobate; for it is set in opposition to that mercy which bestows those mollifying Graces, and thereby prevents final fin in the Elect.

3. It purposes to punish them with Eternal Damnation for their fin; and this is stiled among Divines Pre-damnation, of Politive Reprobation. And hence Reprobates are said to be vesfels of wrath, Rom. 9. 22. made for the day of Evil, Prov. 16. 4. and of old ordained to condemnation, Jude, Ver. 4. in the Original we have, οι πάλαι προγεyeauphoi eis Teto to neina, of old forewritten or registred to this condemnation; forewritten, not (as some would have it) in Scripture prophecies, but in the Eternal Decree of God; the ordained Event whereof is notably pointed out by the is in the Text. To fay that men are forewritten written in aDecree to condemnation is very proper, but to fay that they are forewritten in a Prophecy to condemnation, is very incongruous; for a prophecy is of an Event, and not to it as a Decree is. In that place where 'tis said that Christ meoεγεάφη, Gal. 3. 1. πεσεγεσίση imports not a Decree, but a fetting forth or lively painting out of Christ; for there is no els at all as in the former Text, but οίς κατ' ὑφθαλμές, to whom before the eyes Jesus Christ was set forth. But the plain meaning of the former Text is, they were decreed to this condemnation, viz. to spiritual Judgments (which the 7870 specially points at) and by consequence to Eternal Damnation also.

Now touching this Triple act of Reprobation I shall enquire

1. Who is the Author thereof?

2. What are the things decreed therein ?

3. To whom those things are decreed?

4. What is the Impulsive Cause thereof?

1. Who is the Author thereof? Even the same great God who is the Author of Election; he, who chuses some, passes by others; he, who hath mercy on fome, hardens hardens others. Grace and Glory are at his dispose; the Keys of Heaven and Hell are in his hands alone. In some he prevents final fin, by the mollifying Graces of Faith and Repentance; others he leaves to final fin, actual or at least original. Some he raises up out of the Hell of their Corruption into an Heaven of Glory; others he tumbles down from one Hell to another, from the Hell of Iniquity to the Hell of Misery. This is the Almighty Potter, who, out of the same lump of corrupted Mankind, makes one Vessel to honour, and another to dishonour; and all the while, the earthen Pitcher must not strive with his Maker, or say, Why hast thou made me thus? but rather hasten down into the Abyss of his own Nullity and Pravity, and from thence adore the infinite heights of Sovereignty and Equity in the Divine Decrees.

2. What are the things decreed therein? These I shall consider according to the Triple Act thereof?

1. As for the first Act of Preterition or Non-election, the thing decreed is the not giving of Grace and Glory to the Reprobates.

1. Tis the not giving of Grace unto them. Not that there is a preterition of them as to all kind of Grace; for Reprobates may be Children of the kingdom, Matth. 8. 12. called to the marriage-supper, Matth. 22. 12. and coming may eat and drink in Christ's presence, Luk. 13. 26. they may be enlightned and partakers of the holy Ghost, and taste the good word of God and the powers of the world to come, Hebr. 6. 4, 5. and (which is a very high expression)they may be faid misd'en eis to ovoma, to believe in the name of Jesus, Joh. 2. 23. But that there is a preterition of them as to the τα κρείτονα η εχέμενα σωτηρίας, those better things which accompany, and by a near contiguity touch upon Salvation, Heb. 6. 9. as to such a precious Faith, Love in incorruption, Holiness of truth, Repentance unto life, real and thorough Conversion, as are found in the Elect. There is not then a preterition as to all kind of Grace, no, nor all kind of preterition as to faving Grace; for God doth will the Conversion of Reprobates in a double manner.

1. God wills their Conversion, Voluntate simplicis complacentia; Conversion even in a Reprobate would make joy in Heaven, it would be to suagesto, grateful and well-pleasing to God; if we believe him swearing by his life, his pleasure or delight is in the wicked mans turning, Ezek. 33. 11. God delights in his Image where-ever it be.

2. God wills their Conversion Voluntate virtuali vel ordinativa Mediorum; for the right understanding whereof I shall lay down four things.

1. The proper end and tendency of all means is to turn men unto God: within the Sphere of the Church, such is the end and tendency thereof. Why did Christ come but to turn every one from his iniquities, Acts 3.26? Why did he preach, but that his hearers might be saved, Joh. 5.34? Why did the Apostle warn and teach every man, but to present every man perfect in Christ, Col. 1. 28? John's Baptism was eis pelavoiav, Matth. 3. 11. Churchcensures were eis oinodouni, 2 Cor. 10.8. Even the delivering to Satan was for the destruction of the flesh, I Cor. 5. 5. Conversion is the true Centre of the Means. Nay, without the Sphere of the Church, the true end and tendency of things is fuch, that God might be seen in every creature, Rom. 1. 20. Sought and felt in every place, Ads 17.27. Witneffed in every showre, Acts Acts 14.17. Feared in the Sea-bounding Sand, Jer. 5. 22. Humbled under in every abasing providence, Dan. 5. 22. Turned to in every judgment, Amos 4. 11. In a word, the end and tendency of all God's works is that men might fear before him, Eccl. 3. 14. The whole World is a great Ordinance, at it is in it felf, preaching forth the power and goodness of God who made it; and as it is the unconfumed Stage of fo many crying fins, preaching forth the clemency and mercy of God who spares it, and dashes it not down about the sinners ears. All the goodness and forbearance of God leads men to repentance, Rom. 2. 4. That piece of Gospel [Whoso confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall have mercy] seems legible in his patience; for it may be naturally and rationally concluded, That that God, who in his clemency spares men though sinners, will in his mercy pardon them when repenting and returning. This is the true duct and tendency of his patience, even that men might turn and repent.

2. The tendency of the Means to Conversion is such, that if men under the administration thereof turn not unto God, the only reason lies within themselves, in their own corrupt hearts. If God purge and men are not purged, 'tis because there is lemdness in their filthiness, Ezek. 24. 12. If he would gather, and men are not gathered, 'tis because they will not, Matth. 23. 37. If he spread out his hands, and men come not in, 'tis because they are rebellious, Isai. 65. 2. If he be patient and long-suffering, and they repent not, 'tis because of their hardness and impenitent beart, Rom. 2. 5. The Apostle calls the heretical Seducers in his time melati अर्गेहडू, such as did turn or transfer the grace of God from its true end or scope, Jud. ver. 4. And what those Seducers did doctrinally, that do all finners practically; fo far forth as they live under the means and turn not, they do thereby transfer and remove the means from their genuine end.

3. God doth by a formal Decree will the Means with their tendencies. All Ordinances are sealed by the Divine Will, and go out in its name, and are what they are from its Ordination. Without this, Means are no longer Means, but mere empty names and vain shadows.

4. Out of God's formal Decree of the Means doth result his Virtual Will of mens

Con-

Conversion. That God, who doth formally will the means with their tendencies even unto Reprobates, doth virtually will their Conversion as the true scope and end of those Means. Hence 'tis faid, that Christ would have gathered the unbelieving Jews, Matth. 23. 37. and God would have all mento be saved, I Tim. 2. 4. viz. in respect of his Virtual or Ordinative Will. Hence God is brought in, wishing, Oh! that there were such an heart in them, Deut. 5. 29. Oh! that thou hadst bearkened to my commandments, Isai. 48. 18. And what are these wishes? Surely all the diffusions of Light, promulgations of Laws, expansions of Gospel Grace, waitings of divine Patience, and strivings of the holy Spirit are (as I may fo fay) God's O's after Conversion, in as much as they have a tendency thereunto; and God in willing that tendency, doth virtually will mens return also. Excellent is that of learned Ames; Deus eminenter & virtuali quadam ratione eatenus vult salutem hominum, quatenus vocat ipsos ad salutem. Thus with this Virtual Will God doth will the Conversion of Reprobates. But then you'l fay, If so, God's Will is frustrated; for Reprobates are never adually ctually converted. I answer, That God's Formal Decree is only of the Means with their tendencies; and therefore is not frustrated but fulfilled in the actual exhibition of fuch Means, And God's Virtual Will (though it be of the Conversion of Reprobates) yet in their Non-conversion is not frustrated, because it is not an absolute but conditional Will, nist per ipsos steerit, unless their own voluntary corruption do impede the Effect; which in Reprobates it always doth. But you'l yet reply, Then God's Will is conditional, and by consequence imperfect. To which I answer with the Judicious Bishop Davenant, That Volitions merely conditional agree not with the perfection of the Divine Nature; for that were to suspend God's Will for a time, and then, post purificatam conditionem, to make it become absolute. But mixtly-conditional Volitions, that is, such as are grounded on some absolute Decree, may be allowed: As for Example, that mixt conditional Decree, That if Cair or Judas believe they shall be saved, is grounded on that absolute Decree, that whosoever believes shall be faved. Now this Virtual Will of the Conversion of Re-

probates is not purely conditional, but mixtly conditional; for it results out of God's absolute Decree of the Means with their tendencies. Wherefore (notwithstanding these Objections) I conclude, That God doth virtually will the Conversion of Reprobates, so far forth as the Means have a tendency thereunto.

These things being thus laid down; I conceive that the thing decreed in Preterition or Non-election, is the not giving or working faving Grace or thorough Conversion in Reprobates, in such a sure and insuperable way as in the Elect. Reprobates have not such intimate in-shining, efficacious drawing, Law-engraving, and heart-opening and melting Grace as the Elect. And this not giving or working Conversion in such a way, clashes with neither of the aforesaid Wills. Not with the Will of Complacence; for still if a Reprobate did turn or convert, he should be accepted with God: nor yet with the Virtual or Ordinative Will of God; for still Means are Means, and Ordinances are Ordinances, and their true end and tendency is to turn men unto God: I say their true end; for there is a vaft difference between an infallible Ordination of means for the working of Conversion in men, and a true Ordination of Means for the same purpose. As to the Elect, there is an infallible Ordination of Means thereunto; and as to the Reprobate, there is a true (though not infallible) Ordination of the same. The perfection of the Non-elect Angels was truly ordinated to their Perseverance, but not infallibly. The integrity of Adam in innocency was truly ordinated to his continuance in Obedience, but not infallibly. Wherefore Non-election or Preterition, though it stand not in conjunction with an infallible Ordination, yet it carries no contradiction to a true Ordination of the Means. Notwithstanding the Decree of Non-election or Preterition, God may still expostulate with a Reprobate, as the Apostle did with the Galatians, Quis te impedivit? Who hindred you from obeying the truth, Gal. 5. 7? Have you not had many awakenings of Conscience, thundrings from the fiery Law, woocings from the gracious Gospel, strivings from the holy Spirit, and long waitings of infinite Patience and Forbeance; and all these to draw you to Repentance? And what, bindred hindred you from turning unto me? What, but your own perverse rebellious heart How often have I called and you would not hear? knocked and you would not open? moved and you would not ftir? offered Christ and Heaven and you would not accept? And why would you not?

Let Conscience say, if it were not for some base indulged lust; which, when I had searched after, you have hid it in the secret of your heart; when I have stript and laid it naked before you, you have sowed Fire I would and account it. have fewed Fig-leaves and covered it 5 when I would have flain and crucified it, you have spared it and laid it in your bofom. Well, I can truly fay, Perditio tua ex te, thy destruction is from thy self alone; 'tis not because thou hadst no means of Grace; 'tis not because those Means were not ordinated to thy Conversion; 'tis not because thy Conversion should not have been accepted with me; no, 'tis merely from thy voluntary corruption.

2. Another thing decreed in preterition is the not-giving of Glory unto Reprobates. But this is not such a not-giving, as if God would upon no terms at all give Glory unto them: No; for the Promise [Who-foever believeth shall be saved] doth both import God's Will, and extend in general to all, Reprobates as well as others; but it is a not-giving Glory to them in fuch a sure infallible way as to the Elect. Heaven is seriously offered to the Reprobates, and offered upon the very same terms as to the Elect; but here lies the difference: God gives special Effectual Grace to the Elect, cloaths them in the fine linnen of righteousness, makes them meet for the inheritance in light, Col. 1.12. works them for this very thing, 2 Cor. 5.5. and at last causes them to arrive safe at Heaven. But thus he deals not with Reprobates; for he leaves them without that Effectual Grace which infallibly leads to Glory.

2. As to the second Act of Reprobation, viz. the permission of final sin, the thing decreed is double.

1. The permission of sin in Reprobates.

2. The permission of the Finality of fin.

1. The permission of sin in them is decreed. Now what is this permission? Tis not an Ethical permission, as if they might fin by a Law; for this were to unfin fin. 'Tis not a mere dreaming Speculation, as the fleeper fuffered Tares among the Wheat; for divine Providence never flumbers nor sleeps. 'Tis neither a simple Volition, for then God would hinder finful actions from coming into being; nor yet a simple Volition, for then God should be the Cause and Author of fine Tis not fuch a permission of sin, as if Reprobates had no remora's at all in their finning; for every beam of Light, item in Conscience, rod of Affliction, striving of the holy Spirit, and particle of holy Means is a kind of impediment cast in their perverse way. But Permission is an Act of Providence issuing forth from God, not as he is a righteous Legislator, but as he is the supreme Rector and Provisor, moderating in all Events. Hence the Scripture owns God's mission in Joseph's Sale, Gen. 45. 5. Gods commission in Abab's set duction, I Kings 22. 22. God's bidding in Shimei's Curfing, 2 Sam. 16.11, and God's band and counsel in Christ's crucifixion, Alls 4. 28. More particularly; 'tis fuch an Act of Providence as carries with it. First, an Administration of such objects and circumstances, which are good in themselves; yet occasionally like Achan's golden Wedge draw out mens corruption into act; Then a suspension or nondonation 5 he donation of such Grace and Means as would effectually and de fallo prevent the commission of sin; Next, an actual concurrence of the Holy One to the Mate. rial Act or Entity of fin, though not in the least Measure to the anomy or sinfulness thereof; And withal a bounding sin in its measure and duration, and ordering fin to his own Glory. Thus God permits fin, and permits it Volent: for none will fay that he doth it Nolent; therefore all must say, that he doth it Volent. And in all this, neither can the Reprobate ery out of hard measure; for in the same manner God permits the fins of the Elect : Nor can the least blot light upon the holy One; for which of all these may he not justly do? May not he marshal objects? Then he may do nothing in his own World. Not so much as proclaim his Law; for sin will take occasion thereby: No, nor his Gospel neither; for Grace will be turned into wantonnels. May not he suspend his Efficacious Grace? Then Grace is not his own; but if it be, by what Law is he bound to give it? If there be no fuch Law, why may he not fulpend it? But if there be, how can he permit fin, seeing he is bound to give Such fuch Grace as will actually prevent it? But you'l fay, Permission is no such suspension of Grace, but a leaving a man in manu consilir sui, a dimission of him to his own Genius and free Will; if so, then how doth God hinder sin? Doth he in hindring sin offer violence to man's Liberty, as in permitting it he leaves, him thereun-to? Surely, if God hinder it, it must be by some kind of Grace or other 3 and therefore if he permit it, it must be by some suspension of Grace, or not at all. But to go on. May not he concurr to the Material Act of fin? Then how much Motion is there independent from the first Mover? How much Entity is there independent from the Being of Beings? May not also the great Clock of the World fland alone without the Everlasting Arms, and all the Creature-wheels therein go alone, without any touch of Providence?

Lastly; If God did not bound sin, would not that Moral Monster soon devour all Religiou and Humanity? And if he did not order it to his own Glory, how thould Light come out of Darkness, and Order out of Consustons? In a word: God in great Wildom permits the folly of sin; in providential power the weakness the in providential power the weakness there-H a of a of; and in unspotted purity the pollutions thereof.

2. The second thing decreed is the permission of sins Finality; and this is the Critical difference between the Elect and Reprobate. God permits sin in the Elect, but sins Finality only in the Reprobate. Now how doth God permit sin's Finality, but by that blinding and hardning of Reprobates, which is so frequent in Scripture? But how doth he blind and harden them? Not by infusing the least drop of malice into their hearts: No, darkness may sooner issue from the Sun, than blindness from the Father of Lights; and drought may sooner issue from the Sea, than hardness from the Father of Mercies: but he doth it in a double manner.

Dicitur Deus (saith St Austin) excecare quando non illuminat, indurare quando non emollit. Every Reprobate is born with a Veil upon his Eyes, and a Stone in his heart; and in that condition God leaves him, not imparting to him such enlightning and mollisying Grace as he doth unto the Elect. Not such enlightning Grace; and hence Reprobates are called blinded ones, Rom. 11. 7. nor fuch mollifying Grace, and hence they are called bardened ones, Rom. 9.18. In this Negative blinding and hardening, doth properly and formally confift the Permission of final sin. For as God doth impede Final sin in the Elect, by irradiating and foftning them by his Grace; fo he doth permit Final fin in the Reprobate by not irradiating and foftning them

2. Judicando; or by way of penal infliction. After many rebellions against light, God at last gives men up to a reprobate mind, void of all spiritual judgment; to a fat heart, void of all spiritual fense ; to a spirit of sumber, such as wakes not under the loud calls and roaring judgments of Heaven; to a πύρωσις, a brawny hardness and sensless obduration, such as feels nothing, no not the weighty mountains of fin and wrath lying on the foul. And this he doth partly by a tradition to Satan, who rules in darkness and hardness, and hath a wonderful art to promote and aggrawate both these in the children of disobedience; partly by a giving them up to their own lusts, which are the most in-H 3 timate timate Devils of all, and by degrees put out the eyes, and obstinate the hearts of men; partly by presenting such objects as occasionally prove snares and stumbling blocks to them. Hence we, find in Scripture an ensnaring table, Pfal. 69. 22. a destroying prosperity, Prou-1. 32. a fin-irritating Lam, Rom. 7. 8. a death-savouring Gospel, 2 Cor. 2.16. an enraging advertity, such as makes them like a wild bull in a net, Isai. 51. 20. with many more like providences, which occasionally harden and blind men into further degrees of fin and wickedness. Now this Judicial hardning and blinding is neither to be found in all Reprobates, but in the grand Rebels ; nor yet only in Reprobates, but in the Elect, at least fome of them. Hence that out-cry, Q Lord! Why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our hearts from thy fear? Isai. 63. 17. Only here is the difference; this Judicial blinding and hardning in the Elect is but partial ; all the holy light is not out, all spiritual ten-derness is not gone. Wherefore in that place they groan after a return; but in the Reprobate it is more total. Again, in the Elect it is but for a time; through auxiliary pen again, the stony heart will melt again: but in the Reprobate it is final, the darkness is upon them till they come to utter darkness, the stone is in them till they come to hellish obstinacy. Wherefore in them 'tis a kind of sealing up of Damnation. Negative blinding and hardning suffices to the permission of final sin, but Judicial is an earnest of final perdition.

3. As to the third Act of Reprobation, the thing decreed is Eternal Damnation 5 hence Reprobates are faid to be made for the day of evil. Neither can any man doubt that there is such a Decree; for God doth actually condemn them in time, and both Reason tells us, that whatsoever God doth, even in his judgments, he doth it Volent; and Scripture tells us, that what soever he doth, he doth it according to the counfel of his own Will; wherefore both affure us that there is fuch a Decree. But you'l say, Doth not that Promise [who-Soever believeth shall be saved] both import God's Will, and extend even to Reprobates, and how then can God decree their Damnation? Which way can both these Wills stand together in the heart H A heart of God? I answer; 'Tis true that the Promise doth both import God's Will, and extend to Reprobates; nevertheless it very well consists with the Decree of Damnation, and this will appear

by a double distinction.

1. Let us distinguish the Decrees of God: Some of them are merely productive of Truths, others are definitive of Things which shall actually exist. The first are accomplished in connexions, the last in events. To clear it by Scripture instances: The Decree, that David should be King of Israel, was definitive of a thing; but the Decree, that if Saul obeyed, his Kingdom should have continued, 18am. 13. 13. is but productive of a truth. The Decree that David should not be delivered up by the men of Keilah, was definitive of a thing; but the Decree, that if he had staid there they would have delivered him up, I Sam. 23. 12. was but productive of a truth. The Decree, that Jerusalem should be burnt with fire, was definitive of a thing; but the Decree, that if Zedekiah did go forth to the King of Babylon it (hould not be burnt, Fer. 38. 17. was but productive of a truth. Moreover, that there are Decrees definitive tive of things, is proved by the events; that there are Decrees productive of truths, is proved by the connexions ; if there be no fuch connexions, how is the Scripture verified? but if there be, how are these things connected? There is no natural connexion between Saul's Obedience and his Crown, David's stay and the Keilites treachery, Zedekiah's out-going and Jerufalems firing: wherefore these connexions do flow out of God's Decrees as productive of truths. Now to apply this distinction to our present purpose: The Decree of damning the Reprobate for final fin is definitive of a thing; but the Decree imported in the general Promife, is but productive of a truth, viz. That there is an universal connexion between Faith and Salvation; such a connexion, that Reprobates themselves, if Believers, should be faved. Now these two Decrees may very well stand together; for Decrees definitive of events contradict not Decrees productive of truths; unless the event in the one Decree contradict the truth in the other. Wherefore if (which is not) there were a Decree of damning Reprobates, whether they did believe or not, it could not frand with

with the general Promise; for the event of that Decree would contradict the truth of the Promise. But the Decree (such as indeed it is) of damning Reprobates for final sin, may well consist with the general Promise; for the event of that Decree no way crosses the truth of the Promise. Reprobates are damned for final sin, that's the event of one Decree; and Reprobates, if Believers, shall be saved, that's the truth of another; both which may well consist together.

2. Let us distinguish the objects of these Decrees; the objects stand not under the same qualifications as to both of them. The Decree of Salvation upon Gospel terms respects men as lapsed sinners; but the Decree of everlasting damnation respects them as final sinners; and so there is no inconsistency between them.

Thus much by way of Answer to the Objection: Yet withal, before I pass on to the next thing, suffer me a little to stand and adore the stupendious Abyss of the Divine Decrees. The Electarrive at Heaven, yet by the way see Hell slaming in the Threatning; the Reprobate sink to Hell, yet by the way see Heaven opening in the Promise. The Elect cannot live live and die in fin, but they will be fut gladio; the Reprobates cannot repent and return, but they will be jub corona. Tremble, work and watch, O Saints, for the holy One thunders out from Heaven in that facred Sentence, If you live after the flesh you shall die. Repent, return and believe, O Sinners, for the Divine Philanthropy wooes you in those real undiffembled Offers of Mercy, Whofoever believes shall be saved; Whosoever for-Sakes his sins shall find mercy. Here, O here, is πολυποίνιλο σοφία, the manifold wisdom of God; a fit reserve for the Apocalypse of the Judgment day, whose clear light will display these wonderful consistencies before men and Angels.

3. Having dispatched the things decreed in Reprobation, I procede to speak of the persons to whom these things are decreed; and here I shall consider,

1. What they are for Quantity.

2. What they are for Quality.

are certain individual Persons. As some certain individual persons are chosen, so others are passed by; as some are by name in the Book of Life, so others are by name left out of it. There is a great difference ference between the Reprobation of fin and the Reprobation of finners: the Reprobation of fin issues from the Sandity and Holiness of God's Will; but the Reprobation of finners issues from the Sovereignty and Justice thereof. The Reprobation of fin is universal, and without any distinction of persons; God hates sin where-ever it be, be it in his own beloved fedidiahs, 'tis an abominable thing such as his foul abhorrs: but the Reprobation offinners is particular ; Esau and not Jacob was hated; Judas and not Peter was a Son of perdition. Indeed he that denies particular Reprobation, must by necessary consequence deny particular Election; and he that asserts an Election of some individual persons, doth, in eodem rationis figno, affert a Reprobation of others.

2. What are they for Quality? I answer in two particulars.

1. Reprobation, as to the first and second Acts thereof, viz. Preterition, and Permission of final sin, respects them as lying in the corrupt Mais. This appears by those Names and Titles whereby Reprobation is fet forth and described in Scripture: there 'tis batred, and God hates none but finners ; 'tis hardening , and God hardens none but such as are in a corrupt estate; 'the abjection or casting amay, and God doth not cast away an upright one, or a man standing in integrity; 'tis, not knowing, and God knows and approves every sinless creature; 'tis, not specific mercy, and that supposes men to see in a state of misery, or else they are not capable of mercy, or the denial thereof. Wherefore I conceive that in Preterition, and Permission of final sin, men are considered as lying in a corrupt and undone Condition.

2. Reprobation, as to its third Act, viz. the decreeing of Damnation, respects them as final sinners. Tis true, every sin, as sin, is in it self intrinsecally meritorious of Damnation; but through Gospel Grace in Jesus Christ, no sin but such as is final, doth actually produce Damnation. God condemns none but for sinnal sin, and decrees to condemn none but for it. Those vessels of wrath respective, some six and heavy, fitted to destruction, Rom. 9.22, are (as I take it) final sinners only. Great sinners may be vessels of Mercy, and repent unto Life Eternal; but final sinners are vessels of Wrath and site ted to destruction. God swears by his life, life, that he hath no pleasure in the death of the wicked, Ezek. 33. 11. not unless he be a final sinner, in whom there is no true turning or repenting: not in luch a way as to leave no place or room at all for Conversion 5 for the sinners turn is in the Text opposed to his death, and opposed as a thing more destrable to God than his death. Should the Decree of Damnation objectively terminate on a finner, merely as a finner, there could be no place or room for Repentance; but if it terminate on him as a final finner, there is no fuch obstruction at all, Wherefore I conceive, that as God condemns none but for final fin, to he decrees to condemn none but for the same; and by confequence, that Decree respects them as final finners, that is, they are first considered as final finners, and then the Decree of Damnation terminates on object. But here an Objection meets me; God condemns none but final finners, and decrees to condemn none but fuch; yet hence it follows not, that the Decree of Damnation respects them as, final Sinners, or that they were considered as such antecedently to that Decree: for God

faves none but final believers, and decrees to fave none but fuch; yet from thence it follows not, that the Decree of Salvation respects them as final Believers, or that they were considered as such antecedently to that Decree: for (as hath been laid down before) Faith and Salvation are comprized in one and the same Decree; and therefore there is no antecedency of Faith to Salvation in the very Decree, but only in the execution thereof.

Answ. To which Objection I answer, That between the two Cases there is a triple difference, which (if confidered) will make it appear, that the consequence which fails in the one case, doth hold good in the other.

r. These two Propositions [God decrees to save none but final Believers, and, God decrees to damn none but final Sinners] must be taken in a different meaning. When we say, God decrees to save none but final Believers, the meaning is not, final Believers so preconsidered antecedently to that Decree; for Faith and Salvation are comprized in one Decree; but final Believers so to be made by some of that Decree. But when we say,

112 Of Gods Decree of Reprobations

God decrees to damn none but final Sinners, the meaning is not, final Sinners for to be made by force of that Decree; for God's Decree makes no man a final Sinner; but final Sinners so preconsidered antecedently to that Decree. Wherefore, from that Proposition, [God decrees to save none but final Believers] it cannot be concluded that the Decree of Salvation respects them as final Believers: but (because of the different meaning) from that other Proposition, [God decrees to damn none but final Sinners] it may be rightly concluded, that the Decree of Damnation respects them as final Sinners.

2. There is an immediate contact between Grace and Glory; hence these two may very aptly be comprized in one Decree, and if fo, final Faith is not preconsidered to the Deerce of Salvation. But between Preterition or Permission of fin and Damnation there is no immediate contact; for the Act of the Creature, even his final fin, comes between : hence Preterition or Permission and Damnation cannot (according to our understanding) be congruously comprized in one Decree, but in distinct Decrees; and if so, final fin is preconfidered to the Decree of Damnation ; God nation. For no fooner doth the Decree of Preterition and Permission pass in the divine Will, but therein, as in a Glass, there is a Prescience of final Sin; and thereupon passes the Decree of Damnation. But you'l fay ; Neither is there fuch an immediate contact between Grace and Glory, as you affert; for between the donation of Grace and Glory the act of the Creature, vize final Faith, doth intervene. I answer; 'Tis true, it doth intervene, but as a fruit or effect of that Donation; it doth intervene, but that Donation hath a Causal influence and attingency into the Creatures Act, and its Perseverance: wherefore it so intervenes as not to break the immediate contact in the least measure. But between Preterition of Permission and Damnation the Creatures Act, viz. final Sin, doth intervene, not as an effect of Preterition or Permission, but as a fruit of man's corrupted and depraved Will; and that intervention cannot stand with an immediate contact. Wherefore there being distinct Decrees, first Preterition and Pormission are decreed, and then (upon the prescience of final Sin) Damnation.

3. The third difference is that of the Apostle,

Apostle, The mages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through fefus Christ our Lord, Rom. 6.23. Eternal Life is a gift freely given; therefore the confideration of final Faith is not a prerequifite to the Decree of Salvation : But Death is wages exacted by the intrinsecal merit of Sin, and paid only to a final Sinner; therefore the confideration of final fin is a prerequisite to the Decree of Damnation & without that confideration I fee not how it can be decreed as Wages. But you'l fay, Is not Eternal Life also a Reward of Faith and Holiness? and how then can that be decreed as a Reward without a preconfideration of these? I answer; Eternal Life is a Reward, but 'tis a Reward of pure Grace, 'tis Grace upon Grace, glorifying Grace upon fanctifying; therefore to the Decreeing thereof, as a Reward, it suffices that it be decreed to Believers and Saints. Not Believers and Saints so preconsidered to that Decree; for Grace and Glory (being both mere gifts, and gifts of immediate contact) are comprized in one Decree; but Behevers and Saints fo to be made by force of that Decree, and so to be made before they wear the Crown. This is enough in the decree-

lng of a Reward fo purely gratuitous. But in Eternal Death there is nothing at all gratuitous; all is mere wages and pay for Sin, Sin doth really and intrinsecally merit it. Wherefore Eternal death, as such wages, is decreed only to final Sinners. Not final Sinners so to be made by sorce of God's Decree, for that makes no man a final Sinner; but final Sinners so preconsidered to the Decree of Damnation: for, without that preconsideration, it is not, as I conceive, decreeable as wages or pay due unto them.

To shut up this point in a word. Reprobation, as to the Decree of Preterition and Permission, respects men as sapsed Sinners; and as to the Decree of Damnation, respects them as final Sinners.

4. What is the Impulsive Cause of Reprobation? To which I make answer.

1. As for the Decree of Preterition and Permission of final Sin, it is from God's Will, as cloathed with supreme Sovereignty. God passeth by and hardneth whom he will. This appears in two particulars.

1. First, God doth not give so much as the Gospel-means unto some men. He suffered all nations to walk in their own ways, Acts 14.16. Some sin and perish with out Law or Gospel; all the Law they have is the dark glimmering of Nature, and all the Gospel they have is the patience and goodness of God seading to Repentance. The Sun, Moon and Stars are divided to all nations, Dent. 4. 19. but Jefus Christ, a Sun of infinite light and lustre, shines in a narrower compass on the earth than the finite Sun; the Moon is leffer than the Earth, the visible Church than the World of Men. The Apostles, those Stars of light, must not shine in Asia and Bithynia, Ads 16. 6,7. By what way is this Evangelical Light parted? Surely by the divine Will alone; the difference is not from the worthiness or unworthiness of men : for those in Asia and Bithynia were as good as others. Christ was manifested to a Thief, and not to a socrates or Plato. Rebellious Israel hath the light of the Word in it, and a more flexible. Nation, which would hearken thereunto, wants it, Ezek, 3. 6,7. Impenitont Corazin and Bethsaida have a visible Deity before them in Christ's Miracles, when poor Tyre and Sidon, much nearer to Repentance, hath it not, Matth. 11. 21. In all which the fovereign Will of God is to beadored; for that is it which divideth between 200 between the Light and the Darkness.

2. In the Visible Church, the Orb of Gospel-light, God doth not give faving Grace unto all. 'Tis true, the mercy of God is fo immense, that all the fins of men are but as the drop of the bucket to it; the Blood of God is so meritorious, that all the crimfon Crimes in the World are as nothing to it; and the Spirit of God is so almighty, that all the chains of hardness and unbelief fall off before his converting Grace. Nevertheless this immense Mercy doth not pardon all ; this meritorious Blood doth not wash all ; nor this almighty Spirit doth not convert all unto God. Oh the wonderful Abyss of the divine Counsel! All men naturally lie in bloody pollution, and God faith to one, Live, and not to another; all are as it were one entire Rock of obstinacy against God, and he calls Abraham's children out of one part of the Rock, and leaves all the rest to be Rock still. All are dead in fins and trespasses, nay, and sealed up in their Graves with a stone of hardness and unbelief; and one Grave-stone is rolled away, and the dead under it raised up by almighty Grace, and not another. External Revelation is all over the Church, why is not the inward holy Unction to too? The Gospel sounds in every Ear, why do not all hear and learn of the Father? The Gospel calls and knocks at every door, why are not the Demonstrations of the Spirit, and the drawings of the Father in every heart? The Gospel fays in general, Whosoever will, may take the Water of Life freely, why doth not God work the Will in all? Why are any dimissi libero arbitrio, left to the miserable fervitude of their own free Will? Here there is no other resolution but that of the Apoltle, He will have mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardneth; and beyond this we can only wonder, and in quodam mentis excessu cry out, Ob the Hypognoft. Li. 3. depth! Cur hac illi operetur (faith St. Austin) illi non oper retur, metuentem me & trementem judicia ejus inscrutabilia & incomprehensibilia nolo interroges, quia quod lego credo & re-vereor, non autem discutio. And, Ne dicas Deo interrogando, Que est voluntas tua? sed tremendo, Fiat voluntas tua. And again 3 Poffet Deus (faith he of wicked men) ipsorum voluntatem in bonum convertere, quoniam Omnipotens est; posset plane, cur ergo non fecit? quia noluit; cur nolnerit? penes penes, ipsum est. If there were any thing extra Denm moving him to the Decree of Preterition and Permission, it must needs be fin, either Original or Actual, or final Impenitency and Infidelity therein; but none of all these moved God thereunto: Not Original fin; for this is the common blood wherein all men, Elect as well as Reprobate, lie by nature. And this is St. Ambrofe's Mirum, touching Infants; Ubi actie non offendit, ubi

dem miseria, similis imbecilli-

tas, causa communis est, non unum esse de tanta parilitate judicem; quales reprobat abdicatio, tales adoptat Electio. Indeed Original Sin makes all men reprobable; for all are by nature Children of wrath, Transgressors from the womb, an unclean and corrupt Seed, lying in bloody and abominable pollution; fit and worthy to be put away from the holy One as drofs, and for ever to be east out into utter darkness: but it makes no man a Reprobate; for the Elect are as deep in this filthy mire as others. Nor yet doth Actual fin do it; for Jacob was loved and Esan hated before they had done good or evil: Artaxerxes -decreed that Jerusalem should not be built again, because upon search of his Records he found that it had been a rebellious City, Ezra 4. 19, 21. Should God have founded his Decree of Preterition and Non-election on a Prescience of humane Rebellion, the holy City of the Church had never been built, nor the divine Image ever repaired therein: All men had eternally lay as sodom and Gomorrab in the dust and rubbish of Adam's Fall, with a line of spiritual confusion stretched upon them. Who is there that lives and fins not? What man on earth hath not rebelled, and vexed God's holy Spirit? Even little Infants rebelled in voluntate Ade; and besides, Imbecillitus membrorum infantilium innocens est, non animus infantium. Neither yet doth final Impenitency and Infidelity doit; for there is no final Impenitency and Infidelity but fuch as is permitted; and permitted it is not, but out of the Decree of Preterition and Permission; wherefore that Decree cannot be caused thereby. Final Impenitency and Infidelity may be confidered two ways; either as being in actual existence, or else as foreseen by the divine Prescience: but neither way doth it cause the Decree of Preterition and Permission.

mission, but presuppose the same. Not as it is in actual existence; for final Impenitency & Infidelity come into being after Permiffion, and Permission flows out of the Decrees wherefore final Impenitency and Infidelity coming after Permission, are not the Cause of the Decree out of which Permisfion doth iffue. Nor yet as it is foreseen by the divine Prescience; for the Decree of Preterition and Permission is that very Glass wherein final Impenitency and Infidelity are foreseen: for had God made no Decree of Preterition and Permission, he had feen all men repenting and believing, as the fruit of his effectual Grace unto all; had he made that Decree univerfally touching all, he had feen no man repenting and believing. Wherefore final Impenitency and Infidelity, as foreseen, do not cause but presuppose the Decree. In a word; I conclude, That the Decree of Preterition and Permission doth merely depend upon the supreme and sovereign Will of God. Neither is there any colour of Injustice in all this; for

1. Non-electio (as Suarez hath it) non eft pana, ut culpam prærequirat; sed est quædam negatio gratuiti beneficii, quod Deus ut supremus Dominus negare potest. God may may do what he will with his own; Election (the primum indebitum) is God's own, therefore he may pass by whom he pleaseth: the holy Spirit (the fountain of all Faith and Repentance) is God's own, therefore it may breath only where it lifts, All Souls and Graces are God's own; therefore he may infuse or not infuse Graces into Souls ad placitum. Neither is it imaginable that God should be obliged to give restituent Grace to fallen Man, when he was not obliged to give cultodient Grace to the innocent Angels, If Faith and Repentance are the gifts of God, may he not suspend them? If he be bound to give them, why is there a peradventure put upon some mens Repentance, 2 Tim. 2.25? Why a cannot upon some mens Faith, John 1 2. 39? Why a perhaps upon some mens Forgiveness, Ads 8. 22 ? Why a forbidding upon the means of Grace, Acts 16.6? Why a manifestation to disciples and not to the world, Joh. 14. 223 Why a Revelation to babes and not to the wife and prudent, Matth. 11.25? In short; God's Election must be either arbitrary or necessary; If necessary, how is his Election free? If arbitrary, how is Nonelection unjust? The donation of Faith and

If Debt, why is not the Veil off from every Eye, and the Stone out of every Heart? Why is not Grace as common as Nature, and Saintship as Humanity? But if Grace, then where it is conferred, it is freely conferred out of self-moving mercy; and where it is denied, it is justly denied out

2. In the Permission of final fin there is much of Sovereignty, but nothing of Injustice; the great God is absolutus faber [næ permissionis; he could let legions of Angels at once drop out of Heaven into Hell; he could let innocent Adam (as rare a piece as he was) break himself all to shivers by a fall; and what may he not permit finful Worms to do? What are Creatures to him? If they miscarry, how many thoufand thousand Worlds are there in the bosom of his Omnipotence? If he suffer all Nations to walk in their own ways, he doth but let a drop fall off the Bucket, or a small dust fly off the ballance; he doth but leave Vanity to its own lightness, and a Quali-nothing to its own nullity and defectibility. If he suffer sinful Man to run into fin, and that finally, he doth but leave the Dog to his own vomit, the Swine

Swine to his own mire, the Viper to his own poyson, a corrupted piece of old Adam to act on The idion, out of his own, as the Expression is, Joh. 8.44. He doth but let the fountain of blood flow out. the corrupt flesh putrifie, the vitious womb of concupifcence conceive and bring forth, and the depraved Will of man forge out its own iniquities, and fetter and intangle it felf with the cords and bonds of its own voluntary rebellions; and what Injustice can be in all this? especially seeing this Permission is not a subtraction of any inherent Grace, but only a suspension of assistent Grace as de facto would impede fin. If God be bound to afford such Grace, where is the Charter of that engagement? If he be not bound thereunto, where is the Injustice of that suspension? The Saints before a temptation, cast down their Souls before God and cry out, No inducas, Lead us not into temptation; and after a victory, they cast down their Crowns before him, and fing out, Thanks be to God who givethus the victory through Jefus Christ. Wherefore when sin is prevented, God's free Grace is to be praifed; and when fin is permitted, God's abfolute Sovereignty is to be adored. 3. Justice

3. Justice in God is agere juxta condecentiam bonitatis & veracitatis sue; therefore the Decrees of Preterition and Permission must needs be just, because they cross not either his Goodness or his Truth. Not his Goodness; for that doth not necessitate him either to dissuse one drop of Grace unto sallen Man, or to prevent one jot of sin in him: nor yet his Truth; for (notwithstanding the Decrees of Preterition and Permission) all the Promises in the great Charter of the Gospel are Yea and Amen, not a tittle thereof sails or salls to the ground.

2. As the Decree of Preterition and Permission is from God's Will, as cloathed with Sovereignty; so the Decree of Damnation is from God's Will, as cloathed with Justice. In the former God acts as supreme Lord, according to his transcendent Sovereignty; in the latter God acts as a Righteous Judge, according to his Vindictive Justice. Now here I shall offer my thoughts in two Positions.

1. The final Sin of Reprobates is not properly the very Cause of the Decree of Damnation; it is the proper very Cause of Damnation, but not of the Decree it self. That passage in Scotus is remarkable;

Non est aliqua causa propter quam Deut esfective reprobat, in quantum est actio in Deo; quia tunc Deus esset passivus. What is moved by a thing ab extra, seems in order of nature before that motion to be in potentia, and in that motion to be passive in some degree. But God's Will in all its Decrees, even in that of Reprobation, is a pure Act, persectly excluding Passiveness and Potentiality, and by consequence Motion ab extrá.

2. The final Sin of Reprobates, though it be not properly the Cause of the Decree it felf, yet it is conditio in object o neceffaria, making men meet Objects for the Decree to terminate upon. The Vessels of wrath are fitted to destruction. Final Sin as produced in actual Existence fits them for actual destruction; and final Sin, as foreseen in the divine Prescience, fits them for a Decree of destruction. Where final Sin is foreseen, there the Decree of Damnation terminates; and where final Sin is not foreseen, there the Decree of Damnation terminates not. After all thy wickedness, woe, woe unto thee, faith the Lord, Ezek. 16. 23. Hells woes are after final wickedness, and the Decree of Hells woes are after the Prescience of final wickednels.

ness. In a word; That which causes men to be capable objects for the Decree of Damnation to terminate on, is the final Sin which is in the unrighteous Will of Man; and that which causes the Decree of Damnation to terminate on them, is the Vindictive Justice, which is in the rightoous Will of God. In Tophet the Torments are as unquenchable fire. The final fin is as much wood, and that which kindles it is Vindictive Justice breathing out from the righteous Will of God; in all which there is nothing at all but exact Righteousness. God may say to Man, Thy perdition is of thy felf, and Man must fay to God, Thou art righteous, O Lord in all thy mays.

I will thut up all with an Answer to an Objection. You will yet fay, God's Justice is not cleared in this point ; for the Decree of Preterition and Permiffion is merely out of Sovereignty, and up on this Preterition and Permission doth infallibly follow final Sin, and upon final Sin doth infallibly follow eternal Damnation: Wherefore hereby God is made the great Author of the Reprobates Sin

To which I answer in three Propositions.

128 Of Gods Decree of Reprobation.

Permission final sin doth infallibly follow. When God gave them up to their own lusts, they walked in their own counsels, Pfal. 18. 12. When he suffered all Nations to walk in their own ways, they did so, Ads 14. 16. If upon God's Permission Man's Sin follow not, then (which is very strange) God may permit that which yet will never be. But

2. Upon Preterition and Permission sinal Sin doth infallibly follow; but not as an Effect from a true Caule, but as a Confequent upon its Antecedent. Hence God is no more the Author of Sin, than the Sun is of the darkness which follows upon its departure. Also the Objectors may be asked. Doth not God foreknow that the Creature fet in such a state and order of things will finally fin? Foreknowing this, doth not he willingly and actually fet the Creature in that state and order? From or upon this setting the Creature in that state and order, doth not its final Sin infallibly follow? I suppose they will deny nothing of all this; yet they will by no means fay that God is the Author of fin, neither need they fay fo; for in Sins following there is only sequela ordinis, and not sequela causalitatis. Moreover, God, in Preterition and Permiffion, doth not subtract from men any Creaturedue, but suspend such special effectual Grace as is undue unto them. This is clear; for Preterition and Permission respect men as sinners lying in the corrupt Mass, and to sinners God owes nothing but punishment. Verbum [Debet] venenum habet, nec Deo proprie competit, qui non est debitor nobis nist forte ex promisso, faith Peter Lombard. If God be bound to give special effectual Grace to all, shew me a Promise for it; if he be not bound, the fuspension of that Grace can in no wife make him the Author of Sin. Wherefore final Sin is indeed no fruit of God's Reprobating Will, but the proper issue of Man's perverse Will. And this is one grand difference between Election and Reprobation; Election doth effectually work final Faith and Holiness in the Elect, but Reprobation doth not effect the least drop of Sin or Malice in the Reprobate. Faith and Holiness come down from Heaven, out of the bolom of free Grace; but Sin and Malice grow at home in the Reprobate's own heart, Dea non operante sed permittente.

K

2. Hence it follows, That God is the Author of the Reprobate's Damnation only as a just Judge inflicting the fame for final Sin: God's vindictive Justice is the inflicting Cause of Damnation; but Man's final Sin is the proper meritorious Cause thereof. And thus God is perfectly justified in the Decree of Reprobation, because that final Sin of Reprobates, which follows confequently upon God's Preterition and Permission, doth flow effectively from man's perverse and corrupt Will; and that everlasting Damnation of Reprobates, which is inflicted by God as a Righteous Judge, is also merited by a man as a final Sinner to rortate and roud of the Work of Creation.

I Aying treated of the Divine Will as to its Eternal Decrees, I procede to speak thereof as to its External Works, which are (as it were) the Royal Display thereof. And that there may not be a Chasme in my Discourse, I shall first touch upon Creation as the first of God's God's ways. There are belides the Ens Entium, three several Worlds or Ranks of Beings, viz. Spiritual, Material and Mixt; the first, is the Intellectual World, made up of those invisible Glories, Spirits by Nature, Angels by Office, Principalities and Powers, spiritual Stars of Light and Flames of Love, all of them at first Inhabitants of that pure spiritual Body the Heaven of Heavens; but afterwards part of them were for their proud Apostaffe cast into Hell. The second is the World of visible wonders; the stupendious Heavens eyed with a glorious Sun, and spangled with Moon and glittering Stars, encircling all the rest with their spherical Stories, and wheeling round about with an indefatigable Motion, spinning out time for all the World, and with admirable influences hatching and hovering over all the living Creatures. Under these is the vast Air, encompassing the Earth and Sea, coated with woolly clouds, and those sometimes laced with the curious Rain-bow; every morning putting on the bright-shining Robes of Light, and at evening exchanging them for the black Mantle of the night : now all on a flame with flashes of Lightning, and anon all Ka in

in a Sea with the Bottles of Heaven : sometimes rent in pieces with thundring Tempefts, and then made up again into ferenity, and clear as a molten Looking-glass. This is the Fan of all Creatures breathing on the Earth, and it self is fanned with various Winds: This is the Inn where the visible Species, the Imagery of the Worlds Beauty and Glory, and the audible Species, the multiplied progeny of Sounds and Voices, lodge together: This is the common Road, where the influences of the Heavens and the vapours of the Earth, the beams of the Sun and the sweet persumes of Herbs and Flowers meet and embrace each other in their passage. Within this is the massie Earth the Centre of the World, hanging upon nothing, inwardly boweled with rich Minerals and precious Stones, and outwardly teeming with numberless births of Grass and Corn, shaded with Trees and Woods, and laughing with odoriferous Herbs and Flowers, bubling with lively Springs and Fountains of Water, and admirably enterlaced with gliding Streams and Rivers, inhabited with frange variety of Beafts, and lorded with Man. And the Girdle of this Earth is the wonderful Sea, swadled with Clouds, fwarming fwarming with Fishes, lodged and locked up in the hollows of the Earth, and from thence fecretly winding and straining its moisture into the inward Veins thereof: now swelling with the pride of Winds and Waves, as if it meant to swallow up Heaven and Earth; and then finking down again into its Den, as if it were afraid to be drunk up by the little Sands. The third is the Mixt World, the mariage or copula of the other two, made up of Men; whose Immortal Souls claim kindred with the World of Angels , and whose Earthen Bodies are the Breviaries and Epitomes of the visible World; virtually fumming up the Elements in their harmonious Mixture, the Plants in their Life, the Beafts in their Senfes, and the Heavens, with the Sun, Moon and Stars in their Heads, Eyes and beautiful Faces. Now touching all this Catalogue of Beings I shall briefly demonstrate three things, it old me try me and week grown ginning. That all these Beings had a be-

2. That their beginning was from God.

gent, and according to the counsel of his own Will.

I. All these things had a beginning;

and this I prove three ways, and all the beginning of being, then every one of them is a God by Nature, a Jebovah in Self-beingness, and an Alpha in Primacy: If they had no beginning of duration, then are they all immates in God's Eternity, copartners in his Immutability, and (which is after higher) possessor of his Infinity, and boundless Beings without any limits of Being: For what imaginable limits of Being can they have, which want a beginning, which is the first limit of Being?

2. The Motions of the Creatures evince this; the Elements have their enterchanges, the Earth its feafons, the Sea its tides, the Air its winds, the Stars their couries, the Moon her variations, the Sun runs its race between the Tropicks, the Heavens, the common carriers of all the reft, turn about with an uncessant Motionsnay, the immaterial Angels and rational Souls are never without some Motions in their Understanding and Will; neither can they do any thing without a change, because their being and their doing are two things. Now what do all these Motions speak speak but a first Mover, a beginning at some first point, and a measure of time ever since? Such moveable Beings cannot be measured with Eternity; for that is unmoveable and unvariable, but these are in motions and mutations; that is instantaneous and simultaneous, but these are under a flux of priority and posteriority in their motions and mutations: where fore it must needs be that these had a beginning.

final we say of the Years, Days and Minutes pall? Are they finite or infinite? If finite, then numerable, and there was a beginning; if infinite, then how pall? Infinity cannot be paffed over; but and if it could, then there are infinite numbers of Days past, and infinite numbers of Pears past, and (because there cannot be infinite to infinition) by most necessary confequence, there are as many Years past as Days, and as many Days past as Minutes, which is utterly impossible; therefore these things must needs have a beginning.

2. The beginning of all these was from God. The Scripture speaks evidently; In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, Gen. I. I. Of him and through him and to him are all things, Rom. 11.36. He that built all things is God, Heb. 3. 4. When we look upon the stately Palace of the World, roofed with the glorious Heavens, floored with the fruitful Earth; chambered with the cloudy Air, watered with the stupendious Sea, and furnished with all variety of Creatures; we cannot dream of any other Architect but God alone. And (because Job bids us speak to the earth, Job 12.8. and the Pfalmift tells us that there is a language in the beavens, Pfal. 19. 1, 2, 3. and the Apostle afferts that there is a witness of God in the rain, Alls 14. 17.) therefore fuffer me to parly their Original out of their own mouths, Creatures, whence came you? Ex mibile. What, ex nibile? How then came you of wer that vast infinite Gulf which lies between Nothing and Being? Infinite Power filled it up to make our passage. But since you came over, where do you ftand ? In a Being betwixt two Nothings, Nothing negative and Nothing privative. And who fet you there at first? The first and chief Being, who is ipsum Esse, suum Esse, infinitum Esse,infinite elongatum à non Esse. But whence had you all that truth and goodness which is in you? Our truth is but a beam from his infinite Verity, and our goodness the Redundance and Super-effluence of his infinite Goodness. And whence came all these numbers and hofts of Beings? Out of perfeet Unity severy one of us is numbred by our finiteness and composition, and every Number is from infinite fimple Unityon Monas eft principium o radix amnium; there is but one God of whom are all things. But how came you into fuch ranks? Why have not the Elements Life, the Plants Sense, the Beasts Reason, and Men Angelical Perfections? When infinite Power brought us out of nothing, infinite Wildom that up every one of us within the bounds of his proper Being. But your Beings being lof fuch different forts, how came you to be fo kind each to other? the Clouds drop down Rain on the Earth 3 the Earth brings forth Grafs; that feeds the Beafts; and thefe ferve for Man, the Breviary of all, and Steward of all. All these and innumerable more links of Amity were made by the God of Order. But if you be of God's own make, thew me your tokens. Tis most apparent that all Beings must be from the chief Being, all Fruth from the first Truth, all Goodness from supreme Goodness, all Numbers from perfect Uniey, and all Ranks and Orders from infinite Wistiom; and this chief Being, first Truth, Supreme Goodness, perfect Unity, and infiniteWifdom can be no other than God alone. But if this fatisfie not, you may yet further fee God's glorious Immentity in the vast capacious Heavens, his invariable Immobility in the unmoveable Earth, his Faithfulness in the great Mountains, his unfearchable Judgments in the great Deep, his dreadful Justice in the devouring Fire, his wonderful Omnifcience in the Sun the rouling Eye of the World, his transcendent Beauty in the Varnilh of the Light; the plain foot steps of the Eternal Power and Godhead in every Creature, and the glocious impress of his own Image and Likenes in Men and Angels. Thus the very Creatures themfelves tell us, that their beginning was we for Man, the breviary boo mort

3. Their beginning was from God as a free Agent, and according to his own Decree; for either God did produce them naturally and necessarily, or else freely and voluntarily. Not naturally and necessarily; for then he should produce things things ad extremum virium, and fo (beliebs thefe Beings) produce all the possible Be ings producible by his glorious Omnipotence, all the possible Orders and Coneruities contrivable by his unfeatch able Wildom, all the possible Goodness effluxive out of his infinite Goodness and all the possible Numbers which his infinite Unity can bring forth into being and produce them all as carly as Eternity it felf; and all of them ito produced mult be necessary Beings as well as God hims felf in all which many great contradiction ons are involved. Wherefore it remains that he did produce them voluntarily and according to his own Decree; the Will of God was the first Mover in this great Work. Tistrue that the World to (as Damascene Stiles it) integohi if and forthe The Sala kind of Redundance of God's infinite Goodness; but not a drop of this Goodness runs out ad extra but by his good pleasure. things. 'Tis true that the Eternal Power and Godhead are clearly feen in the Creation; but these had never shewed themselves at all, if the divine Will had not spoken the word. God made all things by the word of his power; that is, the divine Will eternally expressed to the divine Power, what Beings it should produce in time. Tis true that all the numbers and hosts of Beings no evos melexes, they flow from him who is perfect Unity; but not in the way of natural Necessity, but of his free Decree. The Egyptian Magicians cannot produce fo much as the shadow or counterfeit semblance of a Loufe, but as men mazed and nonplus'd they are forced to cry out, This is the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. And what thefe wicked Atheists mutter out touching this poor Creature upon the rack of Conviction, that the Catholick Church confesses touching all the World in a triumphant Gratulation. The Twenty four Elders (in the name of all Saints) falling down and worshipping before the Throne of the Everliving God, cry out, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, honour and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created, Rev. 4. 11. O thou divine Will! thou art worthy to be adored in the Angels above, and Men below; in the Luminaries of Heaven and fruitfulness of Earth; in the Meteors of the Air and wonders of the Deep; in the life of the Plants and fenfes of the Beafts: at thy imperial Word all these came pouring out of the barren Womb of Nothing; the births of their Existence were all dated by thine hand;

the dowries of their goodness were all given by thy Love; the proprieties of their Being were all stamped on them by thy Ideal Truth; and the various Ranks and Orders of their standing were all fer out by thy glorious Wifdom. O glorious Creator! who half made all thefe things, go on one step further; create in us an admiring Heart, which by the scale of Creatures, as by Jacob's Ladder, may ascend higher and higher in the Adorations of thee; when we are at the lowest ftep of all, I mean mere Being, let's remember thee the chief and first of Beings; when at the second step, which is Being with Life, let's praise thee the only Fountain of Life; when at the third, which is Being and Life crowned with Sense, let's tremble at thee the All-seeing and All-hearing Deity; when at the fourth, which is Being, Life and Sense irradiated with beams of Reason, and impowered with liberty of Will, let's adore thy infinite Wisdom which contrived, and thy allmighty Will which created all these things, and us to fee thy Glory in them ; when at the highest step of all, Angelical persections, let's be lost in holy mazes and trances at thy infinitely purer glory, in compa-

of the Works of Conferention, &c. 148 comparison whereof, the very Angels themselves are but as spotted lamps and duskish beauties. In a word; from the fublimest Seraphim to the poorest Worm, let's admire thee, humbly confessing that none can shew forth all thy praise.

CHAP. VIL

Of the Works of Conservation and Gubernation.

Aving briefly touched upon Creati-I on, I procede to its appendants, Conservation and Gubernation. The Almighty and All-wife Creator is not as man, who builds a House or Ship and leaves it, but like a faithful Creator, he repairs the House of the World by his Conservation, and steers the Ship of it by his Gubernation, and that according to the Counsel of his own Will; aliter mundus ne per ichum oculi stare poterit, as the Father expresses it.

And first, as touching Conservation, I shall demonstrate four things.

1. That no Creatute can preserve it Celf.

12. That no Fellow-creature can preferve another. 2. That 3. That the Prefervation of all is from God went bottool as tod out as

da. That it is from God according to his

felf; and this is clear

1. From the Creatures Station; even the highest Scraphin stands juxta non effe, at the brink of Nullity, his Being is between two Nothings, Nothing negative and Nothing privative: and as his passage from Nothing into Being could not be without an infinite Power creatings fo his natural fall from Being into Nothing would certainly be without an infinite Power conserving. Creatura babet redire ad non effe à se ; if God should but say to the highest Angel, Tolle quod tuum est & abi, he must immediately away into Nullity. All Creatures by their natural vanity press downwards towards nothing, as their own Centre, and none but the Almighty shoulders can bear them up in Being.

2. From God's Royal Prerogative, which the Scripture most emphatically decyphers out, as it were in Figures, of Glory: He only bath immortality, I Time 6. 16. as if there were none at all in Angels and Rational Spirits: Nay, there is None besides him, I Sam. 2. 2. as if there were no Being at all in the Creature. And the reason of these expressions is this; God hath Being and Immortality originally from himself, but the Creature hath them but derivatively and in a dependence upon him; wherefore in comparison of his Being Creatures are but nullities, and in comparison of his Immortative, and in comparison of his Immortative, and in comparison of his Immortative, and so immortalize it self, it would become a Self-subsistence, and consequently a God unto it self.

2. That no Creature can preserve another, (I mean as a principal Agent) and

THE .

1. If one Creature might so preserve another, it should be a God to it, yet so weak as not to preserve it self: But if it could preserve another, it must be by some transsusion of virtue into it, and that but finite, (for more a Creature cannot give;) and then if God transsuse as much virtue into the Creature conserved as the Creature conserved might subsist of it self, and be a God to it self.

L

2. The nature of Conservation evinces this? What is it but an Influx of Being? Now suppose all the Angels in Heaven would try to guard the poorest Worm in the Earth, and that but for one moment only, what could they do towards an Influx of Being? being only streams from God, as light from the Sun; If the Sun be gone, who can keep light in the Air? If Jehovah withdraw, who can keep Being in the Creature? All the Creatures are (as I may so say) sensible of this dependance, and look up to God for their prefervation, Psal. 104. 27. which leads me to the next thing,

3. That the preservation of all is from God; as of him, so through him are all thing, Rom. 11.36. and this appears

1. By a survey of all the Creatures; Angels are under God the strongest of Spirits, but cannot subsist one moment without him; he is ὁ ποιῶν τὸς ἀίγελος, Heb. 1.7. he is making the Angels even to this day by a daily Conservation; their simmortality is a continual Spiration from the Father of Spirits. The Heavens are the strongest of Bodies, yet cannot stand alone; God is paid building his stories in the Heavens, Amos 9. 6. he is still a building

ing of them, or elfe all those glorious Arches would totter down; If he be but angry, the Pillars of Heaven tremble and are agast, Job 26. 11. If he withdraw his hand, all the heavenly Volumes pass away as a Scroll, and out go the fair Letters of Sun, Moon and Stars in the twinkling of an Eye. The Earth is the Centre of the World, and as to Sense it hangs upon nothing, as if it were only poifed by its own gravity; but this created Centre is bore up by the infinite Centre of all Being, and as to Faith and Reason hangs upon him; The pillars of it are the Lord's, I Sam. 2. 8. he by his strength fetteth fast the mountains, Pfal. 65. 6. or else they would be wavering towards nullity. The Sea is a vast spreading Element, but (lest it should be contracted into nothing) it is held in the hollow of his hand, Isai: 40.12. and that imports no less than a prefervative comprehension. All the numberless Birds in the Air, Beafts in the Earth, and Fishes in the Sea wait on him for their prefervation; the fending forth of his Spirit is their Being, the opening of his hand their Provision, and the shadow of his wings their Protection; not a Sparrow forgotten before him; not a poor La

Fly without an infinite Preserver. Man (who is the Epitome of all the rest) cannot but own him; O how foon would the earthen Pitcher break, if he did not keep it! how foon would the Lamp of the Soul go out, if he did not light it even every moment! Hence God is stiled the preserver of men, Job 7.20. a most universal preserver, even from the utmost hairs which are numbred by him, Matth. 10.30. unto the inmost spirit which is preserved by his visitation, Job 10. 12. Thus running through the whole Catalogue of Creatures we must conclude with St. Austin, Deus est per omnia diffusus, non ut qualitas mundi, sed ut substantia cratrix; sine labore regens, & sine onere continens omnia.

2. By the very nature of Preservation, what is it but continuata Creatio? God is still a making the Angels, and building the Heavens, my Father worketh hitherto, saith Christ, Joh. 5. 17. He doth per intimam operationem continuò facere. Creatura (saith a samous School-man) quamdin est, creatura Deo, quia pro quolibet instanti habet esse à Deo. Preservation is but the eeking out of Creation, and therefore can be from no other but God alone. Omnia in illo subsistant à quo creata sunt. But to pass on;

4. The preservation of all is from God, according to his Decree 3 and this is evinced by these Reasons.

1. Either God preserves Creatures naturally or freely: not naturally, for thenhe should preserve them perpetually, and so every Fly must run parallel in Éternity with an Angel; nor naturally for then he should preserve them uniformly, and fo every mortal body would sublist without food as well as the immaterial Spirits; therefore he preserves them freely. There be various ways of Preservation, viz. Preservation of Creatures as to their Being, and as to their adjuncts of order, beauty, goodness and truth; Preservation of them as to their individuals and as to their kinds; Preservation of individuals by means and without means; preservation of them in perpetuum and for certain periods of time. Now all this variety of Preservations doth evidently display the glorious liberty of the divine Will in the dispensing thereof. Angels are preserved in their individual Beings, and that in perpetuum, and that without means; but the Nodus perpetuitatis is the divine pleasure; or else their Immortality would diffolve diffolve in a moment. Men, Beafts and Vegetables are preferved in their Individuals, but 'tis by means, and but for a time, and left the kind should perish with the individuals; Generation is a supplement to their Mortality, and the fuler in all this is the Will of God. As for Prefervation by means, it is God who bringeth food out of the earth, Pfal. 104.14. and when tis in our hand, we cannot eat thereof unless God give us an heart, Eccl.6. 2. and when we do eat thereof, 'twill not be the staff of life to us without the word of his bleffing Manth. 4. 4. without this we may eat and not be fatisfied, drink and not be filled, Hag. 1.6, 9. Every Creature faith, The blefling is not in me, but in the Will of God. As for the Periods of Preservation, they are all fixed in the divine Decree 5 there the days of men are determined, their months numbred, and their unpassable bounds appointed, Job 14. 5. Hezekiah had fifteen years added to his days; but there was no addition to the divine Decree. Bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days, Psal. 55. 23. yet they live out all the days set down in the divine Decree. If a Sparrow fall not without God's Will, Matth.

Matth. 10, 29. much less can a man do fos if our very hairs are all numbred; Matth. 10.30. much more are our days. As for the preservation of kinds, all propagations are from that primitive Benediction, Crescite o multiplicamini, which dropt from the divine Will. Vegetables multiply, but 'tis God who gives to every feed his own body, I Cor. 15. 38. Men and Beafts generate their like, but 'tis God who fews a land with the feed of man and the feed of beaft, Jer. 31. 27. The man written down childles in God's Book must be without the bleffing of posterity; the Member unwritten or left out in that Book, must never be extant in Nature. When Monsters are brought forth, there is an abertation in the particular Nature, but none in the Will of God: when Bastards are generated (which cannot be without a moral Monstrosity) the sin is Man's but the Creature is God's. In brief; If we run through all varieties of Pre-Servation, either as to the Being of Creatures, or as to the Adjuncts of order, beauty, goodness and truth, we must resolve all into the Will of God. Alast what is the mutable Being of Creatures, unless fixed by the Will of the Necesse effert What are all the Orders and Harmonies of things, unless kept in tune by the counsel of his Wille By him all things outsine, Col. 1.17. not only subsist in their Beings, but confift in their Orders. His Will is the Virtus unitiva, which glues and tacks the whole System of Heaven and Earth together, or else all would unframe and fall asunder in a moment. What an empty nothing is Creature-beauty, unless thined upon by his gracious pleasure? 'Tis he Oils to to was that reneweth the face of the earth, Pfal. 104. 300 or else Misage Ant Wifd.cap. 13.3. the Spring would lofe her fresh complexion; nay, and the face of Heaven too, or elfe all the Starry Beautyspots would drop off. What is all the Goodness in the Creature, unless supplied from the great Original? Tis but as water in a broken Ciftern, foon running out, and never to be gathered up again. What is all the Truth in the Creature but an Impress made from his Ideal Truth? The Impress the Creature can no more preferve in it felf, than it could at first stamp it there. Wherefore the Will of God is that vis conservativum, which preserves and conteins all things within their Beings and modes of Being, or elfe they would would immediately run into nullity.

2. Preservation is but continuata Creatio; if Creation had been natural, so must Conservation have been too; but seeing Creation is voluntary, such also is Conservation: hence the Twenty sour Elders attribute both to God's pleasure; for thy pleasure they are and were created, Rev. 4.11. they were by his Creation, and are by his Conservation, and both were and are for his pleasure.

g. Whatsoever God preserves, he preserves rationally and for some end; as he made all for himself, so he preserves all for himself. The Heavens and the Earth are by God's word kept in store, 2 Pet. 3. 7. his Word, that is, his Will is the great Storier, which treasures up the World with all its furniture for its own ends; God preserves all rationally, and by just consequence freely also. Thus far of God's Conservation; but to procede.

2. God's Gubernation is also to be confidered by us. Now here I shall touch on two things.

... That God rules and governs all Crea-

Decree.

1. God rules and governs all Creatures and Events; He is King of Kings, I Tim. 6. 15. his kingdom ruleth over all, Pfal. 103. 19. Stanucegva, Wild. 14.3. be fteers the Ship of the World and all the passengers in it; Sound, Wifd. 12. 18. he orders the great House of the World and all the Families of Creatures therein. All the holts of the Universe are ruled by him: the spiritual World is ruled by him, the holy Angels are still a doing of his Will; sometimes they are guarding the godly, sometimes destroying the wicked; sometimes transporting souls to heaven, sometimes striving with Devils; but they are always beholding God's face, Matth. 18.10. waiting for his imperial Command as their perpetual rule. These have a great share in turning about the Wheels of the World; when these stand still, the Wheels stand alfo, when these go, the Wheels go too; but these go not one step of their own heads, but whither the Spirit of God goes, they go, Ezek. 1. 12. and when they go, they go straight on to the period of their work, and then they return, Ver. 14. that is, to the face of God for a new Commission, and till that come, they let down their wings, Ver. 24. listening to his voice, and adoring adoring at his footstool; all that they do is subordinated to his pleasure. Nay, not only the good Angels, but the Devils (will they, nill they) are subject unto him. They lost their obediential Wings in their fall, and fince that he never trufts them to go without their Chains. Hence, without his divine sufferance, these, though Princes of the Air, cannot raise a ftorm, though Gods of the World, cannot enter into a Swine, though Rulers of darkness, cannot inject a temptation; indeed they would undermine the Fathers Election, cheat Christ of his purchased Possesfion, and murther all the new Creatures made by the holy Spirit; but they cannot get off their Chains, and when their Chains are a little loofened, yet their actings fall under Providence. An evil Spirit troubled saul, but 'twas from the Lord as a righteous Judge, 1 Sam. 16. 14. Satan afflicted fob, but twas with a Commission to try his Graces; the Devil tempted Christ, but twas that he might succour the rempted, Heb. 2.18. Which way foever Satan turns himself, still he is under God, as the supremeModerator. But the spiritual world is not all the Material World is also under his dominions; the Teoxos of yer forces, the Wheel

Wheel of Nature is all turned about by his counsel; the Heavens with all their Luminaries, rapid Wheelings, spinnings of Time, and hovering indulgent influences are under his Ordinance, his immense hand spans them, Isai. 48. 19. at once twirling them about with an indefatigable Motion, and squeezing out their quickning influences into the lower World ; 'tis he avale'Ma, Matth. 5. 45. raises up the Sun to rule the day, and the Moon and Stars to rule the night; the Air with all its Meteors is at his command, he maketh the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth, Pfal. 135. 7. and forms them into Clouds in an admirable and exact proportion, the airy and watery parts ballancing each other, Job 37. 16. These are the Bottles of Heaven; when he breaks a Bottle, down comes a refreshing showre; when he turns and toffes a Bottle, 'tis by his counsel, Job 37. 12. The Winds are all in God's hand, Prov. 30. 4. and when he lets out any of them, 'tis by weight, 70b 28.25. just so much and no more, and tis to fulfil bis will, Pfal. 148. 8. and when one command is done, it returns by its circuits to execute another, Eccl. 1. 6. Thunder is God's majestick Voice, and Lightning

Lightning his glittering Arrow; both are at his beck, and say to him, Here we are, Job 38. 35. The treasures of Snow and Hail he purses up in the Clouds, and those pay them out again according to his pleafure. The stupendious Sea is but a little Babe in his almighty Arms, Clouds and darkness are its swadling band, Job 38. 9. and the hotlow of the Earth its Cradle, there he rocks and rules it as he pleafeth; if it cry and roar, he stills and rebukes it, till he lull it fast asleep in a calm. The vast Earth is but instar puncti before him, at his command are all the living Creatures; the greedy Ravens were Caterers for Elijah, untrained Kine faithful carriers of the Ark, the dumb As a reprover to the Prophet, clamorous Dogs moved not their tongues at departing Ifrael, Laban's Cattle change colour to pay Jacob's wages, Peter's Fish brought Tribute-money in his mouth; and when proud Pharaoh faid, Who is the Lord? an answer was sent him by wonderful hosts of Frogs and Flies, Lice and Locusts proclaiming the sovereignty of their great Maker and Master. In summ; Man is the Epitome of all the rest, and in governing him God governs all; Man hath an inward Principality of Reason

Reason and Will, yet still he is under the Almighty and All-wife Moderator, who rules and disposes the hearts of men as he pleaseth. Twas but his touch on their hearts, and Saul had a band, I Sam. 10. 26. Twas but his turning the key in Lydia's heart, and the Gospel had entrance, Ads 16.14. Titus went to the Corinthians જાં એ જો ફર્દી છે, 2 Cor. 8.17. a word importing high liberty, yet God put it into his heart, Ver. 16. The King's heart (and who can be freer than he?) is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of waters he turneth it whither he will, Prov. 21. 1. he turneth it whither he will, there is the fovereignty of Providence; yet he turneth it as the Rivers of waters, there is the falving of Humane Liberty. For as when the Husbandman leads the Waters this and that way by Channels and Trenches, they lose nothing of their natural fluency; so when God turns the hearts of men to fuch and such Objects, they part with nothing of their natural liberty. God is infinitely greater than our hearts, wifer than our reason, and freer than our liberty; therefore he is able and worthy to rule over us in our freest actions. Lastly, as his gubernative Providence is over all Creatures, tures, fo tis over all Events, the greatelt Events are not above it. When Kingdoms are toffed and bandied up and down like a Tennis-ball, Isai. 22.18. not one Event can fly out of the bounds of Providence; the smallest are not below it, not. a Sparrow falls to the ground without it, not a hair but 'tis numbred by it; he is maximus in minimis; the most natural Effects are but casual, till his free concourse makes them certain. The Iron with all its gravity is not fure to fink, 2 Kings 6.6. the Fire with all its fury is not fure to burn, Dan. 3. 27. The most casual effects are not casual to him; when the Lot is cast into the lap, the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord, Prov. 16. 33. When a Bow was drawn at a venture, I Kings 22. 34. Providence sent it as a certain messenger of death to the King of Israel. Thus far I have been surveying the hosts of Creatures and Events; I now procede to demonstrate that God is the great and univerfal Governour over them all: For

t. He hath an absolute Authority over all; his just Title is King of kings and Lord of lords; all the Sphere of Nature and World of Creatures was of his making; he that ruled over Nullity it self in their CreatiCreation, is worthy to rule over all Creatures by his Providence: but (because Authority is liveless without presence) therefore

- 2. His presence is every where; Creatures lie in the shell of Time and Place, Angels have their definitive Obi ; the Body of Christ, which subsists in an infinite Person, is circumscribed by a finite place; but God is every where present, he is higher than Heaven, deeper than Hell, longer than Time, and greater than Place; and who like him to be universal Governour? If he were only on the Throne of Heaven, how should the Footstool of the Earth be ordered? If his hand only spanned the celestial Spheres, what thould the Sea do? But he is every where; whereever any Creature is, there is I A M supporting and governing it. But (because power is the Crown of presence) therefore
- 3. He is Almighty, the only potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. power belongs to him, nay, ὑπερεκλου μέγεθος. Eph. 1. 19. a pleonasm of power, such as can do ὑπερ παθνία ὑπερ οκ περιωέ, Eph. 3. 20. superexcessively above all thoughts of men. No wonder then if the Omnipotent reign; who should reign else?

he can call things that are not, Rom. 4. 17: even a World of Creatures out of the barren Womb of Nullity, and a Church of New-creatures out of the dead Womb of Nature. He is a God doing wonders, Exod. 15. 11. Wonders to us, but none to himfelf; for all things are easie to Omnipotence; his Government can have no obstacles. But (because Powers hands cannot be without Wisdoms eyes) therefore

4. He is Infinite in Wisdom to manage all. He is a God of knowledge, 1 Sam. 2: 3. feeing the thoughts afar off, even from the high Arch of Eternity. He hath Treafures of Wifdom, fuch as cannot be told over : Sapientiæ ejus non est numerus, Pfak 147. 6. and who should rule but the only wife? If we cast our eyes on the millions of Creatures, Angels above and Men below, Stars in Heaven, and living Creatures in Earth and Sea; and all thefe pouring forth millions of Acts, and falling under millions of Events, & that from the morning to the evening of the World; furely nothing less than an infinite Understanding can comprehend all these, and reach a fine usque ad finem, Wifd. 8. 1. If we ponder the beautiful Timings, harmonious Orders and sweet Compaginations of things, The heavens hear the earth, the earth hears the corn and the wine and the oil, and these bear man, Hos. 2. 21. Surely it must be an all-wise Artist who made these golden Chains, and stands at the uppermost link ordering all. I mill hear the beavens, faith he, or else all the Creatures would turn a deaf ear to one another. He guides every Wheel, in Nature, and when there is a wheel within a wheel, never so much intricacy and crossnels of motion, yet the wheels are full of eyes, Ezek. 1.18. directing them to their journeys end, and those Eyes are always open to perpetuate that direction. St. Austin: derides the Gods in the Roman Capitol, Dii dormiebant, Anseres pigilabant; but divine Providence is antipuntos όφθαλμός, an Eye that never flumbers nor fleeps; his waky Wisdom claims an universal Government over all: But that which makes up his Imperial Crown is,

Authority, glorious Omnipresence, almighty Power and infinite Wisdom are his Crown-jewels; but that which completes and makes up all these into a Crown is his Unity; he is Unus, nay Unitus, nay Unit pound; if there were either of these. what would become of the Government of the World? Suppose a Compeer; then oneOmnipresent might resist the other one Almighty counterwork the other, and one All-wife counterplot the other. Suppole a Compound; then his Power might go one way, his Wisdom another, and his Presence might withdraw from both. But now he being one God, one in Singularity, fo that there is none elfe, and one in Simplicity, fo that his Presence, Power and Wisdom are but one Essence in him, he and only he is worthy to govern all: Omnis multitudo revocanda est ad unitatem, and perfect Unity is no where to be found but in him alone. Thus much for the first point; but to go on:

2. God rules all according to his Decree, he works all things according to the counsel of his own will, Eph. 1. 11. he doth what sever he pleaseth in Heaven and in earth, Pfal. 135. 6. That which escapes the pleasure of his Will, must first fly out of the Sphere of Nature. Now this I evince by these Reasons.

1. All those rare Jewels of his Imperial Crown, cemented in his perfect Unity, do thew forth their lustre according to his Will; because his Will put forth a World out of nothing, therefore doth his

fovereign Authority give Laws to it, and his glorious Omnipresence fill and cherish it, his infinite Wisdom ministers to the making of his gubernative Decree, and his Almighty Power ministers to the executing of it. There are infinite Orders and Congruities lying in Wisdom's breast, but his Will chuses out of them all what it pleaseth, and so makes up its decree; there are infinite possibles within Powers Arms, but his Power only exerts it self according to his Decree: Wherefore it is plain that God governs all according to his Decree.

2. The various ways of Government fet forth the freedom of the Governour; all things are not ruled in the same way : Matter is ruled by Forms, Bodies by Spirits, inferiour Bodies by celestial, the vifible World by invisible Angels, Angels and Spirits immediately by God himself. Neither do the same things always keep the same track; in Joshua's time the glorious Sun did make a stand; in Daniel's time the Fire did not burn; in Elisha's time the Iron swam, as if it had forgot its Centre; in Moses's time the floating Sea stood up as a Rock, and the flinty Rock flowed as a Sea; In Christ's time oh! what excesses of Nature! what actings by Prerogative!

rogative! what Epiphanies of Divine glory! How many wonderful ways did the divine Will triumph over the Order of Nature, evidently demonstrating that the supreme Order of all was in it self alone? If the God of Nature did govern naturally, all the Wheels would move one way, and in one road; wherefore the variety of Motions doth display the liberty of the first Mover or Governour.

3. The Government of all things is no other than the efficacious Direction of them by congruous Means to their supreme End, and that is done by the divine Will alone; the End of all is the manifestation of his Glory, and this his Will freely embraceth. I say, freely; for the All-sufficient God was under no neceffity to manifest himself, the congruous Means are all of his own choice, and that out of the infinite Mass of Wisdom in himself; and the efficacious Direction of all by those Means to that End is according to his Decree. God had defigned preferment to Joseph, but first he lay bleed. ing under the murderous intentions of his Brethren, then he was fold as a flave to the Ishmaelites, afterwards he was wretchedly accused by his Mistress, rashly imprisoned by his Master, and ungratefully M 3 for-forgotten by the chief Butler; and yet after all these windings and turnings of Providence, this is the worshipful sheaf, the Ruler over Egypt, and the wife preserver of Jacob and all his posterity in the famine. There are millions of Creatures which know not what an End means, but a divine Intelligence conducts them thither; millions of Events casual, as to us, but the divine Will hath fixed them 5 millions of Acts free, as to us, but the divine Liberty is above them; millions of Confufions dark, as to us, but the divine Decree orders them. In all God is Alpha and Omega, the first Mover and the last End, the wife Contriver and fure Moderator of every thing for his own Glory, according to the Counsel of his own Will. O thou divine Will! the tender Nurse and sweet Disposer of all, thou bearest up the Pillars, and turnest about the Wheels of the Universe; the Guide of every Creature to its journeys end is thy wife Ordination, and the safe conduct of it thither is thy gracious Preservation. The swiftest Angel cannot fly out of thy Do-minions, and the poorest Worm hath a safe abode within them. Thou hast an Eye in every Wheel, an Order in every Ataxy, and a Line in every Confusion: without without thee all Beings would moulder into Nothing; congruous Means prove vain abortions, and Natures Harmonies jangle into sad confusions. Without thee the Breath of the living is but a puff of Vanity, the Reason of the intelligent but a fnuff in the focket, and the Liberty of the free but a dead broken Idol. Shouldest thou but for one moment withdraw thy hand, oh! what a tumbling cast would there be among the Angels? what a crack in the heavenly Orbs? what a Chaosin the Elements? what a strange Doomsday by the blending of Sun and Sea, Heaven and Earth together? Thou, O divine Will art all in all 3 thy Wisdom is a wakeful Eye, thy Power a supporting Centre, thy Presence a lively Cherisher, thy Authority a supreme Law-giver, and thy Pleasure an universal Orderer to all the World. Oh that there were such an heart in us as to eye thy Wisdom in every Wheel, own thy Power in every Preservation, awe thy Presence in every place, acknowledge thy Authority in every Law, and submit to thy Pleasure in every E-vent; always praying, Fiat Voluntas tua, which cannot be perfectly prayed fine infima humilitate & altissima charitate.

Of the Work of Redemption.

Have now passed over the Work of Creation, with its Appendices of Conservation and Gubernation; but behold! a greater than Creation is here, stupendious Redemption, the wonder of Angels and envy of Devils; at which Creation starts back and gives up its Sabbath. am come to the Tree of Life growing in Paradise, hanging full of Pardons and Graces, and spreading forth a broad and indefective shadow of Merits over sinful Worms. I am now at the pure Well of Salvation springing out of the Deity of the Son of God, issuing through the bleeding Wounds of his Humanity, and filling every Vessel of Faith. I am now to open my eyes upon the most tremendous Mystery that ever was; God in the Flesh, the brightness of Glory under a Veil, the Fulness of the Godhead tabernacling in Dust, and a Sun of infinite light and lustre cloathed in Sack-cloth in his Incarnation, and turned into Blood in his Passion. Oh! for some illapses of that holy holy Spirit which takes the things of Christ and shews them in their spiritual Glory.

Redemption may be thus described; It is the procuring of Freedom for a Captive by a Price paid by him who is to redeem, and accepted by him who is the Supreme Detainer in that behalf, that the Captive may be delivered out of a state of Captivity into a state of Liberty according to the Wills of the Payer and Receiver of that price. I say, it is the procuring Freedom : Actual Freedom is the Crowning Islue of Redemption; but the procuring of Freedom is an effential ingredient in it. Hence Christ is said to obtain eternal Redemption for us, Heb. 9.12. 'Tis the procuring of Freedom for a Captive, Free-men are not capable of it, but Captives only; and fuch are all men become by fin. They owed ten thousand Talents to God as the great Creditor, and Traitor-like they rebelled against God as the great Law-giver; and for those Debts and Rebellions God as a righteous Judge our-Euneson, Shut them up in the prison of wrath, Rom. 11. 32. 'Tis the procuring of Freedom for a Captive by a Price, not by mere Power, but by a Price: when it is procured procured by mere Power, 'tis but a naked Deliverance; but when it is procured by a Price, then 'tis a true proper Redemption. Hence in the Evangelical Charter we find λύτεον, a Price, and that which issues from it is ἀπολύτςωσις, true proper Redemption. Again, 'tis the procuring of Freedom for a Captive by a Price paid by him who is to redeem, and accepted by him who is the supreme Detainer in that behalf; for if it be not paid, 'tis no Price; if it be not paid by him who is to redeem, he cannot be a Redeemer; the Detainer must accept of it in that behalf, or else no Freedom can be justly procured; and the supreme Detainer must accept of it, for not the Jailor or Fetters, which are but Under-detainers, but the Creditor & Lawgiver, who is the supreme Detainer, must receive satisfaction, or else the Captive cannot be justly released. And all these are couched together by the Apostle; Christ gave himself for us an offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour, Eph. 5. 2. Christ, there's he who was to redeem; gave himself an Offering and a Sacrifice, there's the Price paid down by him; to God, there's the supreme Detainer: the Jailor Satan, and the Fetters of guilt are but under-detainers, but God is the supreme and must have satisfaction; and for a sweet-smelling savour, there's the Price accepted by God in that behalf. Lastly, the end of all is, that the Captive may be delivered out of a state of Captivity into a state of Liberty, according to the Wills of the Payer and Receiver; Redemption moves towards the actual deliverance of the Captive, as its proper Centre; and that actual deliverance comes forth according to the Wills of the Payer and Receiver, as its rule and measure. If their Wills be, that upon the very payment and acceptance of the Price the Captive should be ipso facto delivered, then he is delivered without any more adoe; but if their Wills be, that the Captive should be delivered but upon certain conditions to be by him first performed, then he is not delivered till after the performance thereof. Thus the Redemption wrought by Christ moves towards the actual deliverance of finful Captives, and that actual deliverance, according to the Will of the Father and the Son, comes forth not immediately upon the payment and acceptance of the Price, but upon Faith and Repentance, which are the Terms of the Gospel.

Gospel. Hence the Apostles testissed Repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, Acts 20. 21. Hence also those expressions of Propitiation through faith in his blood, Rom. 3. 25. and of Receiving the atonement, Rom. 5. 11. which with many more shew us the Terms, upon which actual deliverance comes forth into being. Now in this discourse of Redemption I shall gather up all under four Heads.

1. The Captive.

2. The Captivity.

3. The Redeemer.

4. The Price.

1. The Captive is fallen Man; and here two things are considerable.

1. Man fallen in opposition to Man

Standing.

2. Man fallen in opposition to fallen

Angels.

1.Man fallen in opposition to Man standing; Man as he came out of his Makers hands was a spotless Creature, his Mind a pure Lamp of knowledge, his Will a Throne for the holy One, his Heart a Sanctuary of all Graces, his Affections all in harmony with the Rational Faculties, the Image of God sparkling within him, and the Favour of God sunning him round about.

of the Work of Redemption. about. Here all was Freedom, no Chain but that of Graces, no Bands but Cords of Love, no Prison but a Paradise, no Captive but the Lord's Free-man; the least drop of wrath could not fall on him here. But alas! how foon was this Star shot! Man turned from God, and God departed from Man, and instantly the Captive appeared all in Chains of Sin and Wrath; his Lamp went out in obscure darkness, Satan ascended up into the Throne, the fire of Lust rose up in the Sanctuary, the Affections were all in a mutiny against the upper Powers, and the whole Man became a Prisoner under Sin and Wrath;

original State of rectitude and holiness.

2. Man fallen in opposition to fallen Angels: When Man (though but an earthen Pitcher) fell from God, the whole Trinity seemed to be moved at it; the bowels of the Father yearned over him, and as not content with inward compassions, Grace breaks out at the Lips of the Son, Unto you, O men, do I call, saith the eternal Word, Prov. 8.4. and (because words, such as made a World, could not do it) 6πιλαμβάνεται, Heb. 2.16. he catches hold of the Humane Nature, and rather than fail, he would live and bleed and die in it for our Redemption : And lest after all this Man should not catch hold of his own Salvation, out comes the holy Spirit to make fure work of it in an application of it unto us. Ally 80av an' auts, i πόξοω φούγεσαν, ανθρωπίνω φύσιν Χριςτς καταδιάξας κατέλαθεν, faith St. Chryfostome. When Mankind fled, and fled far from Christ, he purfued and caught hold of it : But when those Vessels of Gold, the Angels, dropt out of Heaven, there was no such matter; the Father's bowels (though of immense largeness) were shut up, not a thought of mercy role in his heart towards them; the Son's Lips, which drop sweet fmelling Myrrh unto men, let fall never a fyllable of comfort unto them, he saw them tumbling down from Heaven, yet caught not hold of them: the holy Spirit would not stir a foot to recover The agxlw, their original Rectitude for them again, that so they might be capable of staying in the holy Heavens, but down they must into Chains of darkness, such as for ever flut out every glimpse of Mercy. But why a Philanthropy rather than a Philangely? Why a Redemption for Men and not for Devils? Here men give their coniectures.

jectures. Man (say some) sinned by seduction, but Devils by self-motion: In the Fall of Men (say others) all the Humane Nature fell, but in the Fall of Angels all the Angelical Nature fell not. Others alledge that the Sin of Angels was more damnable than Man's, because their Nature was more sublime than his. Others yet affirm, that Men are capable of Repentance, but Devils not, because whatever they once choose, they do immobiliter velle; the Devil sinneth from the begin-ning, 1 Joh. 3. 8. tis not said, he sinned, but he sinneth; because from his first Apostafie he sinneth on uncessantly. But alas! Who can limit the holy One? Might not his boundless Mercy have saved the selftempted Devils? What if his devouring Justice had broke out against devil-seduced Men, nay, against all the Race of Men? Who should accuse him for the Nations that perish, which he hath made and Sin hath marred, Wild. 12. 12? Could not the Blood of God have washed out the blackest spots of fallen Angels? Was not the Almighty Spirit of Grace able to melt a Devil into Repentance? Had we poor Worms been to dispute with the Devil about the Body of Christ, as Michael did with with him about the Body of Moses, O how easily would he have reasoned us out of our Redeemer! What (would he have faid) shall the tender bowels of God be let down to you on Earth and restrained to us in Heaven? Will the All-wife God repair his Clay-images in the Dunghil of the lower World, and neglect his fairer Pictures once hung up in his own Palace of Glory? May not the Son of God be a Redeemer at an easier rate, without stepping a foot out of his Fathers house, and will he travel down fo far as an Incarnation? How much better were it for him to spot himself with an assumed Cherubin, than to take Flesh into his glorious Perfon? But the great God hath neither git. ven Angels a day to plead for a Redeemer; nor Man a licence to pry into his Ark. Wonder then, O Man, at this aftonishing difference made by the divine Will alone. Angels must be damned and men may be faved; golden Vessels are irreparably broken, and earthen Pots are set together again; Inmates of Glory drop to Hell, and Dust and Ashes fly up to Heaven. When I consider thy Heavens and the Stars glistering there, Lord, what is man that thou mindest him, Psal. 8. 4? but when I confider fider thy Heaven of Heavens, and thy Angels dropping from thence into utter darkness, Lord! what is man that thou savest him? Misericordia Domini plena est terrasquare non dictum est, plenum est cælum? quia sunt spirituales nequitiæ in cælestibus, sed non illæ ad commune jus indulgentiæ Dei, remissionémque peccatorum pertinent, as holy Ambrose expresses it. Even so gracious Father, because so it seemeth good in thy sight. Thus having sound the right Captive I pass on

2. To the Captivity; and this I shall let out in three things.

1. The Chains.

2. The Prison.

3. The Jailor.

As for the first, I shall first touch upon the Chains themselves, and then upon the distinct links thereof.

1. The Chainsthemselves are no other than Original and Actual Sin.

1. Original Sin is a very heavy Chain;

and here I shall view that first Sin of eating the forbidden fruit, called in the Schools Peccatum originale originans: here there was truly magnum in parvo, a vast World of Sin in a small Act.

N
There

There was an Idol of felf-excellency a framing, and to adorn it, a concupifcential stealth of the forbidden fruit; and in this stealth a bloody Homicide, a slaying of all Humane Nature at one blow; and which is more, a kind of Deicide too, a flaying (as much as in Man lay) even of God himself; the Pride of this primordial Sin fnatching at God's excellency, the Unbelief stabbing at his Truth, the Rebellion fighting against his Sovereignty, the Ingratitude trampling his Goodness under foot, and the Presumption as it were daring out his Justice into warlike Arms; and all this contra praceptum tam breve ad retinendum, tam leve ad observandum. This is the upper end of this Chain, and it reaches down to us all; for in him we all sinned, Rom. 5. 12. The sweetest Bonaventure cannot say, In Adamo non peccavi: For Adam was not here confidered as a private person, but as the Root and Head of Mankind; Adam's person was the fountain of ours, and his Will the representative of ours; we were all in him naturally as latent in his Loins, and legally too as comprized within the Covenant made with himstherefore we all finned in his Sin. Omnes nos unus ille Adam, faith faith one Father ; Genus humanum in primo parente velut in radice computruit, faith another. But that of Nazianzen is fulleft of spiritual sence, who cries out, O insirmitatem meam! mea enim duco primi parentis infirmitatem. If any reply, But how could we fin in Adam? I answer, that our humane Nature was in him, and why might it not fin there? You'l fay, It could not for want of a Will; I answer, that our Wills were put into Adam's by that Covenant which was made with him for himfelf and all his posterity. If one Man may put his Will into another Man's Will in a Comprimise, why may not God (who is more Lord of our Wills than our felves) put all our Wills into Adam's by a Covenant? and here God did it with abundant Equity, because our Wills were put into Adam's as well for the obteining bleffedness upon his Obedience, as for the incurring punishment upon his Disobedience.

2. The lower end of this Chain, the universal depravation of Nature, called Peccatum originale originatum; this hangs upon the former, all habitual Sin hath an essential relation to some actual Sin precedent. Tis impossible that one should be N 2 a Sine

a Sinner habitually, who in no kind finned actually. If Adam had not finned actually, he had never been habitually vitiated; nay, if we had not finned in his Sin, we had never been fo. This original Depravation is the finning Sin, the Body of Sin, a Body in our Souls, Flesh in our Spirits, a Nail on our Eyes, a Plague in our Hearts, and a Root of bitterness in our whole Nature ; this turns our Minds into Dungeons of darkness, our Wills into Gulfs of Sin, our Memories into leaking Veffels, our Fancies into Forges of Vanity, our Affections into Chambers of Imagery, our Members into Weapons of Unrighteousness, and our whole Man into a Man of Sin; insomuch that to be carnal is to malk μαι άνθεωπον, I Cor. 3. 3. When we are formed in the Womb, this Chain lies upon us, even in primo ardore, in the first warmth of natural Conception, Pfal. 51.5. And when Christ is formed in our Hearts, this Chain presses so hard upon the spiritual Embryo, that as soon as ever it begins to live, it falls a fighing and groaning with tears, Oh! my hard heart! Oh! my unbelieving heart! Oh! my carnal sensual heart! Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death?

death? Rom. 7. 24. Nay, the very Philosophers themselves (who never kenned so far as the top of this Chain, I mean Adam's Sin) yet seem to feel the weight of it: Wherefore sometimes they complain of a Sepulchrum Corporis, as if σωμα were become σήμα, a Grave to the Soul; and sometimes they cry out of a Desluvium Pennarum, as if the Soul had lost her Wings. Whither also may be referred the Trismegists Indumentum Inscitia, Pravitatis Fundamentum, Corruptionis Vinculum, Velamen opacum; with many such like expressions touching the weight and pressure of this Chain, involving Men in a horrid slavery and captivity.

ing Men in a horrid slavery and captivity.

2. Besides the Chain of Original Sin, there is that of Actual; the whole World and the row medical and the whole World and the row medical and the state of Actual; the whole World and the row medical and the state of Actual Sin wickedness, as a Slave in his Chains. Oh! the open Profanencis, secret Hypocrisies, spiritual Wickedness, secret Hypocrisies, spiritual Wickedness, carnal Pollutions, daring Presumptions, faultring Infirmities; Impieties against God, Unrighteousness against Men, vast Armies and Hosts of Sin which cover the World. As Original Sin turns Man into a Man of Sin; so Actual Sin turn the World into a World of Sin. This is a long Chain reaching from Adam's Fall to the N 2 Worlds

182 Of the Work of Redemption.

Worlds Period, and from first to last enwrapping Captives all along.

2. The Links of the Chains are considerable, and those are three great ones.

1. The first Link is Macula peccati, the Stain of Sin; this is the fifth of the Chain, a brand of deformity on the naked Cap-tive God is the beauty of Holiness, and there is no turning from him without a Blot: God is a Sun of infinite light, and there is no holding up our hands against him without casting a dark shadow on our faces. Every Sin is a filthiness; If it be a brutish fust, 'tis μολυσμός σπεκός, filthiness of flesh; if a spiritual wickedness, 'tis μολυσμός πνουμαίος, filthiness of spirit, as the Apostle distinguisherh, 2 Cor. 7, 1. Nay, that which is filthinels of flesh in the external commission of the Act, is yet filthinels of spirit in the internal commaculation of the Soul. The wicked cast out mire and dirt, and the more they cast out in the transient Acts of Sin, the more there is within in the abiding spot of it. the Act of Sin is paffed and gone, the Spot and Stain thereof stays behind, and denominates us 185 antiSeas, children of difobedience.

2. The second Link is Reatns peccati, the Guilt of Sin, a dreadful Link chaining the naked Captive to divine Wrath, fastened within him by the desert of Sin, and bound upon him by the Justice of God; and hence he becomes reknow degries, a child of wrath. No sooner doth he turn from God as his Law-giver, but he meets him as his Judge, and that in the face; The face of the Lord is against them that do evil. Whilest he slies extra ordinem pracepti, hee falls intra ordinem justitia, the wages of sin is death.

3. The third Link is Regnum peccati, the Reign of Sin, Sin is an absolute Tyrant over us; his Laws are all writ in Letters of blood, his strong Holds are in our very Reasons, 2 Cor. 10. 4,5. His Throne is in our Wills, his winged Chariot in our Affections, his Weapons in our earthly Members; and our whole man is of shoes auxilias, the slave of sin, Job. 8: 34.

2. The next thing in the Captivity is the Prison, and that is the Wrath of God: But here we must distinguish the Walls from the Dungeon, the Walls are very strong and dreadful, infinite Justice and Holiness are the staming Cherubims that guard them; and the Hand-writing upon them is, A curse to the sinner and wee to N 4 the worker of iniquity. The poor Captive (as long as his Chains are unbroken) lies within these Walls under the judgment of God, Rom. 3. 19. Wrath abides upon him, Joh. 3. 36. a sad State. Nevertheless, whilest but here, he is a Prisoner of Hope, a Captive capable of Redemption. The Dungeon is Hell it self, a place of Darkness, a gulf of unquenchable Fire, a bottomless Pit of Perdition, into which impenitent Sinners are still a sinking deeper and deeper, without any hope of ascending out of it; when the Captive is once here, the utmost sarthing will be exacted of him.

3. The last thing in the Captivity is the Jaylor, even Satan, and he doth three

dy, the Natural Man's Heart becomes his Palace, and every room in it is full of hellish furniture; not the Turret of Reason, nay, not the reliques of the divine Image

Rob. Sar. De Ver. learned Bilhop speaks) habitatorem Diabolum; and it ap-

2. He

2. He keeps on the Captive's Chains, he fooths up the Old Man, as if there were no fuch thing as a New-creature, and flatters the earthly Members as if there were no fuch place as Heaven; he blows up the miserable Captive into proud reflexes, as if he had Reason enough to span all Mysteries, and Will enough to teem all Grages out of the dead Womb of Natures He stands at the right hand of Original Cotruption, brooding and fly-blowing cotrupt Nature into Concupidences, Goncupiscences into Acts, Acts by iteration into Habits and Customs, which are a second -corrupt Nature; and all this while he keeps the House in peace, that the Captive may fleep on in his Chains.WAndif the Chains rattle too much incrying Scandals, he lines them with some Moralities; If legal Convictions make them too hot, he fprinkles and cools them with fome prefumptions of Mercy; if they be weighty and prefling supon Conscience, he lightens them with fome forms of Godliness; if after all this the Captive will yet awake, he shall (if Satan can do it) Dives-like open his Eyes in Torments, and Desperation shall swallow him up for ever. He works all manper of ways in Men, that he may keep on their their Chains, and add one link of filth

him lies) within the Walls of the Prison. Oh! what serpentine Windings! what circumventing Methods! what untraceable Depths! What lying Promises! what thews of Happines doth he use to keep them there! He is well content to allow the Ambitious one his Pinacles of Honour, the Covetous his Bags of Mammon, the Voluptuous his Paradise of carnal pleafures; the Curious his fine-spun Cobwebs of School-notions, every Captive his percetum in deliciis, his beloved Corruption, so as they will but stay where they are, in a state of Wrath.

Gaptivity, let us pass on to consider the Redeemer; and here I would first premise that no Creature could redeem us out of this Captivity. Sin is an infinite evil, objectively infinite; tis a sighting against an infinite Majesty, a striving against infinite Sovereignty, an enmity to infinite Holines, a provocation to infinite Justice, a Deicidiam, a striking at the very Life and Being of God; God hath no other Opposite but Sin, and were it it possible that the least drop of it could get into him, he would instantly cease to be God; and now where shall God have fatisfaction for fuch an evil as this? Shall the Brutal World be a Sacrifice for the Rational? Alas! the blood of bulls and goats cannot take away fin. Can the Captive do ought in it? Can he wear off his Chains with repentant Tears, or work them off with after-holines? Alas! the Captive is in love with his Chains, and therefore at a valt distance from Repentance and Holmess. But if he had both, doubtless those repentant Tears would be black or falt in some measure, and therefore want a Laver; that Holiness in comparison of spotles Perfection would be but as a filthy Rag, and therefore want a Cover. But suppose he had such tears as are the pureBlood of a filial heart without any blackness or faleness in them, and fuch Holiness as is pure Linnen, fine and white without any foot in it ; yet all this must be of free Grace and nothing of his own, and then how can he who fins ex proprio, fatisfie ex alreno? But admit that thefe Graces were his own too; yet how can finite Graces fatisfie for an infinite Evil? There is no proportion at all between finite nite and infinite. But you'l fay, Sin is infinite objectively, and so are Repentance and Holiness too; therefore they may satisfie for Sin. I answer; The difference is walt, for Sin is measured by the Object, and therefore being against an infinite God is in a fort infinite ; but Satisfaction is meafored by the Subject, and therefore Repentance and Holiness being subjectively finite cannot fatisfie for Sin. But you'l vet reply. These Graces flow from an infinite Spirit, and therefore may fatisfie for Sin. I answer; This is the grand disproportion between those works which Christ works for us as a Surety, and those works which the Spirit works in us as a Sanctifier : In the first there is God and Man in one Person, and therefore they are of an infinite Dignity but not so in the second, and therefore they are but of a finite Vadue. The forlorn Captive can by no means help himfelf, and what shall he do? Shall he pray in aid of the holy Angels? But O! what trembling fits would there be in them? What paleness in the Cherubims at fuch at task? But suppose they could all be induced to become a Sacrifice for us, would the holy One open his Eyes upon such a Satisfaction? But if he did, what THIC

1. Jus Proprietatis, as God.
2. Jus Idoneitatis, as the Son of God.

3. Jus Conjunctionis, as Man, as a Surety for Men, and as a Head to his Church.

1. Jus Proprietatis, as God, who should redeem a Creature but the true Owner? And who is he but God the Creator? 0-Adv. Marc. Li.4. vem perditam quis requirit, (says Tertullian) nonne qui perdidit ? Quis autem perdidit, nonne qui babuit ? Quis autem habuit , nonne cujus fuit ? Homo non alterius res est quam Creatoris. He that is αλιθῶς ὁ σωτης, truly a Saviour (as the Expression is, Job.4.42.) must be God indeed. Should one mere Creature redeem another, he should ipfo facto pluck away a Creature from his Creator, inafmuch as Redemption is a greater Tie than Creation. Now Jesus Christ, who came to redeem us, is very God, not a Metaphorical but the true God , I Joh. 5. 20. not a petty, but the great God, Tit. 2. 13. not an under subordinate God, but over all God bleffed for ever, Rom. 9.5. not a God by office, but a Jehovah, Jer. 23.6. a God by nature; though not autoyos, as to his Subfistence, yet aum Dede, as to his Essence. Gods name is in him, Exod. 23. 21. One great Letter of that Name is Eternity, and his going forth was from everlasting, Mic.5. 2. another is Immutability, and be is ye-Sterday to day and for ever the Same, Heb. 13. 8. another is Omniscience, and he knoweth all things, Joh. 21.17. another is Omnipo-tence, and he hath all the power in heaven and earth, Matth. 28. 18. another is Immortality, and he hath life in himself, Joh. 5.26. another is Immensity, and he whilest on earth was in heaven, Joh. 3.13. and though long since ascended to heaven, is ftill on earth, Matth. 28. 20. All thefe golden Letters are graven on the Godhead, and παν το πλήρωμα τ Seb τίδος, all the fulness of the Godhead dwells in him, Col. 2.9. all these shed forth a divine Glory and Majesty, & he is ἀπαθρασμα & δθξης, the brightness of divine glory, Heb. 1.3. and what need we any more witnesses of his Deity? His Name is wonderful, Isai. 9.6. far above all Creatures; his Generation is unutterable, being ides, the proper Son of the Father, Rom. 8.32.not as Creatures made ex nibilo, but as a proper Son begotten out of his very Substance; his standing is en puopo 300, in the effential form of God, the very divine nature, Phil. 2. 6. and his special Whi there is the Fathers bosom, Joh. 1. 18. and from thence together with him he breathes forth the holy Ghost. His Works are divine and all one with the Fathers, Joh. 5.19. He fat in counsel with him in framing his Eternal Decrees, and since wrought with him in making making first a World of Creatures and then a Church of Saints; and still he works with him in the preservation and gubernation of both. Lastly, his two Testaments (which face each other as the Cherubims upon the Ark) by their sweet glances and respective aspects upon each other do disclose his Deity. For in the Old Testament tissaid, that Jehovah brought Israel out of Egypt, Exad. 20. 2. in the New Te-Stament 'tis faid, that Christ did it, Jude 4. and 5. Ver. in the Old Jehovah circumcises the heart, Deut. 30. 6. in the New Christ doth it, Col.2.11. in the Old Jehovah pour-ed out the Spirit, Joel 2.28. in the New Christ, Ads 2.33 in the Old every knee bowes to Jehovah, Isai. 45. 23. in the New to Christ, Rom. 14. 11. in the Old miracles were done in Jehovah's Name, 2 Kings 2.21. in the New in Christ's, Acts 9. 34. in the Old Jehovah is the first and the last, Isai. 44.6. in the New Christ is Alpha and Omega, Revel. 1. 11. in the Old there is Deus absconditus, Isai. 45. 15. in the New Deus manifestatus in carne, I Tim. 3.16. All which do most pregnantly prove the Deity of Christ unto us. Nevertheless proud Reafon will be babling, How can the Father beget the Son ex proprid substantia ? Can any any part of the Divine Essence be discinded in such a Generation? Or if not, can the whole be given to the Son? And if fo, how is it retained to the Father? I anfwer; The Father gave unto the Son the whole Essence, non alienatione sed communicatione, non generatione emanante, fed immanente; the Father so begets the Son, as that he still possesses bim, Prov. 8. 22. the Son fo goes forth from the Father as that he still abides in him; his eternal egress, Micab 5. 2. is x 4 provin, not by defluxion, but immansion, I am in the Father and the Father in me, faith Chrift, 706.14.10. Indeed if we speak accurately, the Father begets the Son out of himself rather in Effentia divina, than ex effentia divina: Hence the entire Essence is in the Father; and the entire Essence is in the Son too; and what if it could not be thus in a finite Essence? yet why may it not be so in an infinite? What if Reason cannot fathom it? must therefore Faith reject it? I conclude then, that Christ is very God, and as God hath a right to redeem us his Creatures.

2. Jus Idoneitatis, as the Son of God, he was most fit to be our Redeemer; what can be more perfectly congruous than Reconciliation conciliation by God's beloved one, Adoption by his Natural Son, Reparation of his gracious Image by his substantial, a shine of Favour by the brightness of his Glory, beams of Light by his Wisdom, Restitution of Life by the Prince of Life, and Mediation between God and Man by the middle Person in the sacred Trinity? There be three great goings forth of God, into which all others may be refolved; the first is that fundamental one of Creation. and upon Sins Entry, which is but an Apostalie from Creation, in comes the fecond, viz. Redemption, and out of this as out of a Fountain flows the third, and that is Sanctification; these hang in order one upon another. Unless there had been a Creature, and that Apostate, there had been no place for Redemption; and unless there had been a Redemption, there had been no room for Sanctification; for God would never have reimplanted his Image of Holiness in a Creature left under the eternal stroke of his Justice, nor have plucked away the spot of Sin there, where the guilt of Sin is left behind. Now albeit it is a most sure Rule, that Opera Trinitatis ad extrà sunt indivisa, yet among Divines Creation is in a fort peculiarized to the Father as the first, Redemption to the Son as the fecond, and Sanctification to the Spirit as the third Person in the Glo rious Trinity. Thus in thefe three goings forth of God, each person in the Tringy hath his special Shine, and that in the ver ry Order of his Sublistence 3 wherefore it was very congruous that the Son, of all the Persons in the Trinity; should be out Redeemer.

3. Jus Conjunctionis; he that redeems a Captive must be Persona conjuncta with him, and so was Christ with us in a threefold respect, aw and a dono Wanish Vorth

I. Conjunctione naturali, he was our Goel, Ifai. 59. 20. that is, our next kinsman by his Incarnation, and our Redeemer by his Passion; heassumed our Nature into himself that he might redeem us; plyas Deds was made june or pstods, the great God a sucking Child; regens Sydera, yet sugens Ubera, he that ruled the Stars sucked the Breafts. The word was made flesh, Job. 1.14. and a strange making it was; all other Creations are (as it were) extra Deum, but here was a Creation in the very Person of God. The glorious Trinity in the very instant of drawing the Humane Nature ex mibile interweaved it with the Person of the the Son, so that it never was any where but there; all other Creations stand und der the Roof of Providence and Prefervation, but here the Humane Nature is an Inmate in the very same Person with the Divine: all other Creatures have their proper sutable seats and Whi's in the Sphere of Nature, but here's the Sackcloth of an Humane Body cast upon, and the Rushcandle of a Reasonable Soul lighted up in the Sun it felf. The glorious Son of God espoused Flesh and Blood, and the Bridechamber (where the knot was tied) was the Virgins Womb; there was he made of a Weman, consubstantial with us as to his Humanity, who was consubstantial with the Father as to his Divinity. O how great is this Mystery, God manifest in the flest ! O Domine! quam ad-Cypr. de Mativ. mirabile nomen tuum! non Christi. modo mundi bujus staturam admiror, non stabilitatem Terra, non Luna defectum & incrementum, non Solem semper integrum & laborem ejus perpetuum: Miror Deum in utero Virginis, miror Omnipotentem in cunabulis, miror quomodo Verbo Dei caro adhaserit, quomodo incorporeus Deus corporis nostri tegumentum induerit ; in cæteris aliquæ satisfaciant rationes, hîc solus me completitur stupor. God never came so near to us as in this wonderful Conjunction. In the Creatures we see God above us, in the Law we see God against us; but here we see Immanuel, God with us: he is one with us by a natural Conjunction, but that's not all; for being in our Nature he became one with us

2. Conjunctione Legali, he was our Sponfor or Surety, and fo in Law one person with us; his Stile is Eyyuos Saa Shuns, Surety of the covenant, Heb. 7. 22, and the Covenant being mutual on both parts, from God to Man and from Man to God, he is in both respects a Surety of it; a Surety on God's part that his Promises should be performed to us, and a Surety on our parts that our Debts should be paid to God. We were double Debtors to God; as Rational Creatures we owed perfect Obedience, and as Sinful Creatures we owed eternal Sufferings; the first is a debt to God's Holiness, and the second to his Justice. Now Jefus Christ was our Surety for both, a Surety to fulfil all Righteousness for us, and the Fidejusiorial Bond which he gave for this was his Circumcision; for he had no finful flesh to be cut off, but would become a debtor to the whole Law for us; and in Circumcisson he figned security for it with his own Blood ! and also a Surety to take our Sins on him. Hence the Righteous God (who cannot but judge according to truth) charged our iniquities upon him, Ifai. 93. 6. and he as our Surety accepted the charge, and those words, my fins are not hid from thee, Pfal. 69.5. are (as Sto ferom thinks) spoken ex persona Christi, for he was though not commission, yet fulceptor delittorum; our Flesh and Blood was taken into his Divine Person, and our Sins (which could by no means enter in where) were yet call upon him, and being castrupon him, God exacted satisfaction of him, will will timas exacted and he answered, Isai. 53. 7. Satisfaction was exacted from him as our Surety, and he answered for us; and what was his Anfwer? Why, I'le lay down my Life, The pour out my Soul, faith he wher all the Wrath due to thole Sins be squeezed into one Cup and I'le drink it up to the bottom; let the Fire of God's Anger drop down from Heaven, and I'le be the Pafchal Lambroaked in it. Thus Jesus Christ was a Surety, nay, and was, the noblest of -Sureties, putting his Soul in our Souls stead, to bear our Sins and God's Wrath; and for

for this very purpose was he one with us in Nature that he might be one with us in Law too. But neither is this all, for both these Conjunctions are crowned with a third, and so he is one with us

3. Conjunctione Mystica, Christ is the Head, and the Church is the Body, and both together make up one myfical Christ, I Cor. 12.12. the Head in Heaven, and the Body on Earth; and the spiritual Continuity between both is one and the fame holy Spirit, which is on the Head without measure, and on the Members according to measure. If the Jew ask us where is Christ? we can truly answer, He is at the right hand of God in Heaven; and on Earth, loe here is Christ and there is Christ living and breathing in his Saints; every Saint is a piece of him, and all together are his fulness, Eph. 1.23. so that he doth not count himself complete without them. This Conjunction is so near and full of spiritual Sense, that a poor Member cannot fuffer on Earth, but instantly the Head in Heaven cries out of Persecution, Acts 9. 4. and even the fuffering Member reckons himself sitting in Heaven, as long as his Head is there, Eph. 2. 6.

Thus our Redeemer comes very near unto us in a threefold Conjunction, and in each Conjunction there is a rare Condescention. In the first he came down into our Natures by a stupendious Incarnation, in the second he came down into our Hell by a Fidejussorial Passion, in the third he comes down into our Hearts by the Spirits Inhabitation; the first opens a way to the second, the second is the purchase of the third, and the third, as in design, was a Motive to, and, as in existence, is a Crown upon the Work of Redemption.

4. Having considered the Redeemer, I pass on to the Price; and here I shall reduce all to three Questions.

1. What this Price is?

2. What manner of Price it is?

3. For whom it was paid?

1. What this Price is? and this is the Humane Nature of Christ, as subjected to the Law. When the Son of God came forth to redeem us, he was made of a woman, made under the Law, to redeem us that were under the Law, Gal. 4. 4, 5. Made of a Woman, there's his humane Nature; made under the Law, there's his subjection to the Law, and the End of all is our Redemption: Christ through the eternal Spirit offered up kimself to God, Heb. 9. 14. and that in a way fully answering the demands of the Law. The Law demanded of the Captives two things; perfect Obedience from them as rational Creatures, and penal Suffering from them as finful Creatures; and Christ gave up his Humane Nature a price both ways, in doing and in suffering; he gave himself, that is, his humane Nature for us an offering and a sacrifice, Eph. 5.2. an Offering in his Active Obedience, and a Sacrifice in his Passive, and both these together were the entire Price of our Reservices.

1. Christ gave up himself in his Active Obedience. That holy thing, his humane Nature, as foon as it came out into the World, fell a breathing forth of Holines, burning with zeal for God, melting in compassions overMen, bowing it felf down in miraculous humility, and in a rape of love doing all the Will of God, even to the last gasp upon the Cross. His thoughts were all births of Holiness, his words of racles of Truth, his works a fulfilling all Righteousness, and his meat and drink was to do his Father's Will: He ascended up to the top or pinacle of the Moral Law in the sweetest strains of Love, and fetched about the breadth or vast compass of it in the largeness of his Obedience, and passed down to the very herim or border of it in the lowness of his Humility. Rather than fail, he would be subject to his own Creature, Luk. 2. 51. pay tribute to his own Subject, Matth. 17. 27. and wash his Disciples feet with those very hands which had all the power in Heaven and Earth in them, Joh. 13.2, 4,5. Nay, he stooped down as low as the fringe of the Ceremonial Law; his finless flesh was circumcifed, Luke 2. 21. his holy Mother purified, Luk. 2. 22. the true Passeover kept the typical one, Matth. 26. 20,21. and to obedientially flood under his own shadow. In every respect he was obedient unto death: His Obedience was a fair Commentary on the whole Law, written in glorious Oharacters of Holmes and Righteousness all his life long, and at his death clasped and feeled up with his precious Blood. Thus the Mandatory part of the Law was an-fwered; now for the Minatory.

2. He gave up himself in his passive obedience, he was in some sence crucifyed in the womb, in that he was made of his creature 5 and coming forth into the world, all his life was a perpetual passion. The Gospel shews us the immense God in

swadling clouts, the builder of all things working as a Carpenter, the holy one hurried up and down by a tempting De-vil, the filler of all things hungry, the fountain of living water thinky, the power of God weary, the eternal joy of the Father weeping, the owner of all things extreme poor; and not knowing where to lay his head in his own world. Thus as a man of forrows he paffes on towards his Cnoss; one of his own Apostles betrays ing him; another denying him, the reft forfaking him, the chief Priests bloodily conspiring against him, falle witnesses unjustly accusing him, the tumultuous rabble crying out, crucify, crucify, and Pilate first confessing his innocency, and then condemning his person. And now arriving ar his Cross, forrows break in upon every part, his head raked with thorns, his face beforeared with spittle, his eyes af flicted with the tears of friends, his cars filled with the blafphemies of enemies, his lips of grace wer with vinegar and gall; his hands and feet nailed to the Cross, and his facred body hanging between thieves, racked and tortured to death in a Colgotha of Rench and rottenness. But all this is but the outside of his passion; passion; at the same time hell was let loose, and from thence the Devils as fo many roaring Lyons came with open mouth to devour him, and (which is much more) Heaven thundred over his head, and the righteous God, as angry as our fine could make him , fell a smiting of him, Isai. 53.4. and smote him in bis Soul too, verfe 10. and with smiting wounded and bruised him, verse 5. the smart and anguish whereof was fo great that be was afraid, Hebr. 5. 7. and his fear was so high, that he began adupover to faint away, and in Dance-Das, to be fore amazed, Mark 14.33. and in this amazement, the Eclipse was so dark, that he was meethunos surrounded with forrows even unto death, verfe 34. and in this spiritual Siege, he falls a praying, Father if it be possible, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt, Matth. 26. 39. and in prayer he finks into an agnony. His foul became like that poor ship, that fell into a place where two feas met, the fore-part flicking fast, and remaining unmoveable, and the hinderpart broken with the violence of the waves, Acts 27. 41. Even so here were two seas met, a sea of wrath storming against him as our Surety, and a sea of love breathing breathing in him after our Redemption: His humane will as nature shrunk at the sense of Gods wrath, but as reason it stedfaltly pointed at the work of our Salvation. Redemption food fast and unmoveable in his heart, yet the same heart (though without the least spot of finful contrariety) was broken with the waves of amazing horrors, and so dreadful was this agony, that it cast this grand Heroe (the strength of all the Martyrs) into a bloody sweat, there fell from him great drops of blood, Luke 22. 44. The fins of the world ascending up as a vast cloud before Gods Tribunal, now came dashing down upon him in an horrible tempest of incomprehensible wrath, and this makes him cry, nay (as the Psalmist hath it Pfal. 22.1.) roar out upon the Cross, My God! my God! Why hast thou forsaken me? Mat. 27. 46. One would have thought at the first blush, that the humane nature had been dropt out of his divine person; but though that were not, yet the sense of Gods favour was for a time suspended from his humane nature. Never was forrow like to his forrow. In all the legal sacrifices there was destructio rei oblate, and all those destructions were summed med up in his fufferings. As the corn he was bruised, as the wine and oil poured out, as the Lamb slain and rosted in the sire of Gods wrath, and as the scape-goat driven into the dismal wilderness of desertion. He did as it were sport in Creation, but in Redemption he sweats, suffers, bleeds and dyes.

Now his humane nature thus made under the Law, both in his active and palfive obedience, is the complete and integral price of our Redemption; I say, both in his active and passive obedience, for these were not sundred either in existence or merit.

1. Not in existence; for there was passion in his actions, and action in his passions: from first to last, his obedience was with suffering, and his suffering with obedience. There was passion in his actions; 'twas a great suffering for the great Law-giver to be under the Law, for the Lord of the Sabbath to observe it. The noblest and purest piece of the Law is the knowing and loving of God, and yet even in that there was a great suffering; for he who eternally knew the Father in an infinity of light, now knew him as it were by candle-light in a finite reason; he

he who eternally embraced the Father in an infinity of love, now loved him in the narrow compass of a finite will; and therefore even in these endvare caurov be empried himself as the Apostle speaks, Phil. 2. 7. And on the other fide, there was action in his passion; his passions were with knowledge, he shut not his eyes when he drunk off the cup of wrath; his passions were free-will offerings, Loe I come, faith he, to do thy will O God, Hebr. 10. 7. Gods will was, that he should suffer, and his will runs before, and as it it were anticipates his sufferings, Loe, I come: nay, in his passage he breaks out πῶς συνέχομαι, How am I straitned till it be accomplished? Luke 12. 50. He was as it were in pangs of forward obedience to be baptized in his own blood, and posted on towards an agony of wrath in an agony of love; and when he arrived at his extremest sufferings, his signal willingness turned his suffering into doing, and his Cross into a triumphant Chariot, be triumphed init, saith the Apostle, Col. 2.15. even there his obedience and love rode in triumph; triumphant obedience spread out his hands upon the Cross, and triumphant love opened his naked heart to the . wrath wrath of God. His Soul was not snatched away but poured out, Isai. 53. 12. his life was not meetly taken away, but laid down; Joh. 10.18. He was willing to be forsaken of God himself for a time, that thereby he might fulfil the will of God; and before the fire of Gods wrath could fall on him, he was all in a slame with his own love. Thus the active and passive obedience of Christ were not severed in their existence; but like his seamless coat were interwoven from the top throughout even to his last

2. Neither were these severed in merit; Christ is not so to be divided as if his sufferings apart by themselves were the price of Remission, and his righteousness apart by it self the price of Glory. If the active obedience of Christ apart make us perfeely righteous, where is the glory of the passive? if the passive obedience of Christ apart purchase all for us, where is the glory of the active? But if both together make up the total fum, the glory of both is preserved. Our Redeemer was made under the Law that he might redeem us; now as he was under the whole Law as to the command, and as to the eurse of it, so his active and passive obedience dience adequately answering both, is the entire price of our Redemption.

But here I am obviated by 2 Objections. . Saith the Socinian, there is no price at all. sin standard of our Divines, the paffive obedience of Christ is all the price, and the active no part at all of it.

As to the first, I shall not need ipend many words about it, because the Scripture is fo pregnant in it, ingedante THING ye are bought with a price faith S. Pauls 1 Cor. 6. 20. and this price (as S. Peter tells us) is not corruptible things as Silver and Gold; but the precious blood of Christ, I Pet. 1. 18, 19. a transcendent price able to purchase as much, nay far more in the spiritual world, than silver and gold can in the material; and 'tis not meerly a price of emption, but of Redemption: Christ gave his life, Notego, a price of Redemption, Matth. 20. 28. and which is more emphatical, he gave himself avridutege, a counterprice of Redemption, I Tim. 2. 6. doing and fuffering in the room of poor captives; and this price was paid into the right hand, viz. into Gods, Eph. 5. 2. and hence issues out, απολύτεωσις proper Redemption, the prison doors are opened;

and the poor captives may go out orms ELEU See of free indeed, John 8. 36. That then there is a price is as clear in Scripture, as if it were written with a Sun-beam; But yet the Socinian shuts his eyes, and Racev. Co- cryes out, all is but a Metaphor. sech. de mor God redeemed (faith he) Ifrael to chrift. out of Egypt, and Mofes is called Autewris, Acts 7.35. and yet there was no price at all paid. But alas! that ever such vain consequences should drop from the masters of Reason; Redemption in some Scriptures is metaphorical, therefore 'tis fo in all; Moses was but a naked deliverer, therefore Christ is not a proper Redeemer; Moses's Redemption was a Redemption by power only, therefore Chists Redemption is no Redemption by price; Redemption out of the hands of an unjust Pharaoh was without price, therefore Redemption out of the hands of a righteous God was fo too. But on the other fide how cogent is the argument? If Moses paying down no price was but a naked deliverer, then Christ paying down one was a proper Redeem-If I believe that to be but a Metaphorical Redemption, because the Scriptures speak of no Price paid for the same; pari ratione I must believe this to be a proper proper Redemption, because the Scriptures tell us of a Price. If there must be Power to redeem a Captive from humane Oppression, surely there must be a Price to redeem him from divine Justice. We were all as Captives locked up under the Curse of the Law and Wrath of God, and Christ was Auteoliss and Auteon, both a Redeemer and a Ransom for us: Wherefore concluding that there was a Price, Ipass on.

2. As to the second Objection, I conceive that the Active and Passive Obedience of Christ do both together make up the perfect Price of our Redemption; I say, both together. The Active is part of the Sum: And this I shall demonstrate

I. In general by those Scriptures which set out the Managery of Redemption. Long before our Saviour Christ came about it, the Father calls him his servant, Isai. 42.1. and one part of his service was his Active Obedience; and just at his entrance into the World he expresses himself, Loe I come to do thy will, O God, Heb. 10. 7. He came in his Incarnation, his errand was Redemption, and theway to compass it was by doing God's Will, and that he did partly in his Active Obedience; being come, his state was subjection, be was made under the Law to redeem us, Gal. 4.4,5. His humane Nature was fo far a Price as 'twas made under the Law in part as to his Active Obedience; this being his state, his ear was bored, Pfal. 40.6. which the Apostle renders, a body was prepared, Heb. 10.5. His humane Nature was (as I may fo fay) all Ear to the Commands of God, among which one was that he should fulfil Active Obedience; this Obedience he fulfilled all along even unto Death, nay, and in Death: and by this entire Obedience accomplished in doing and suffering we are made righteous, Rom. 5.19. and fo righteous, that the righteoufness of the Law is fulfilled in us, Rom. 8.4. and so fulfilled, that the Law bath its end, Rom. 10.4. and this fo accurately, that one jet on tittle doth not pass from the Law but all is fulfilled, Matth. 5. 18. In all which feries of Scriptures his Active Obedience concurrs as part of the Price.

2. In particular, I evince this Truth by three Reasons.

1. Because he fulfilled his Active Obedience not merely for himself, but mainly for us; he was our Surety, and so received the Obligation of Obedience on himself. Hence he would be baptized, because it was το πρείπου, it became him to fulfil all all righteausness, Mat. 2.15. it became him, not as for himself, for he was the spotless Lamb, and needed no Baptism at all, be could baptize with the holy Ghoft, and needed no Water-baptism; but it became him as our Surety, to be subject to Gods command even in this. And so in all other his Active Obedience: For the impletion of the Law was by God translated upon him : What the Law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for fin condemned finin the flesh that the righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us, Rom. 8.3.4. Here all the Obligations of the Law are cast upon Christ as our Surety 5 we could not fatisfie for our fins, Christ did it ; we could not fulfil Righte. ousness, Christ did it. But you'l say, this place only concerns his Passive Obedience; for it speaks of condemning Sin, and that was done in his Passive only on Llanfwer, that this place extends to all Christs Obedience, Active as well as Passive, and this feems clear by the first and last part of the words compared together : the first are, What the Law could not do in that it was weak through the flein 3 and what was that? Could it not curse the Sinner? Yes -E ()

Yes undoubtedly 3 And here the flesh, that is, Sin was the strength of the Law; but for want of perfect Obedience, it could not give life, Gal. 3.21. and here the flesh, that is, Sin was the weakness of the Law. Now Christ (the Power of God) came to supply this weakness: but how doth he do it? The latter words tell us, Sin was condemned in his flesh, that is, his humano Nature; and it was condemned there not only by his Paffive Obedience, but by his Active too. Every Act thereof did as it were fit in judgment on Sin; even as every knock of Noah on the Ark condemned the old World: Sin was fo condemned, that dualoua To vous, the righteonfress of the Law is fulfilled in us, the Law hath its rightful demands, one whereof is perfect Obedience; the righteousness of the Law is fulfilled in us, that is, for us, in our flead and room: Wherefore Christ's Active Obedience being fidejussorial and on our behalf, must needs be part of the Price. But you'l fay, Christ's Active Obedience was not fidejufforial, for it was the debt of his humane Nature, as a rational Creature; and therefore being due as for himself, it could not be paid down as for us. I anfwer, that Christ's humane Nature was but a CreaCreature, and so its Will could not possibly be supreme, but indispensably subject to the Will of God; yet nevertheless his Active Obedience was paid down for us, and was part of the Price; and this will appear if we view it in these four particulars.

1. As to the Spring of it, 'twas freedom, his humane Nature was necessarily subject to the Will of God, but it was freely assumed into the Person of God; Christ as Man was bound to the Law, but as God was not bound to become Man. As he freely took a Body with its circumscriptive dimensions, so he freely took a Soul with those legal Obligations, which are as it were the moral Circumscriptions of it; he freely assumed the Humanity, and with it all incident Duty.

2. As to the Circumstances of it, 'twas unobliged. Christ was bound by the Law as Man; but he was not bound to perform it in such a debased manner, for such a space of Time, in such a place as Earth, unless as our Surety; for he might have carried up the humane Nature into Heaven in the first instant of its As-

3. As to the end of it, 'twas for us, it points at the same end with the humane P 4 Nature

Nature to which it was incident: As he was made Man for us; to us a son is born, Usi. 9:6. So his Active Obedience was for us. Hence the Apostle joins, both these together; he was made of a moman, made under the Law, and then superadds as the end common to both, that he might redeem us, Gal.4.4.5.

4. As to the Value of it twas infinite; a finite Righteousness may serve for its single personner, but Christ's Righteousness stamped with his Deity amounts to an infinite Sum, enough for himself, and a World besides. Hence the very same, Righteousness is Christ's, Rom. 5. 18. and ours too, I Cor. 1. 30. St. Bernard sweetly.

Aus es mihi tu justitia à Deo; nunquid mir hi verendum, ne non una ambobus sufficiat? Non est pallium breve, quod non possit operire duos; Justitia tua in eternum, me de te pariter operiet, quia largiter larga de eterna Justitia. To sum up all in one word; though Christ as Man were under the Law, yet his active Obedience performed in an humane Nature freely assumed, and in a way as to that Nature unobliged perioding

ing in our Redemption, and elevated into a kind of Infinity by his Deity, was paid down for us, and was part of the Price.

2. Because Christ's whole Obedience, Active as well as Passive, being fulfilled for us makes us righteous before God: famous is that place, Rom. 5. 19. As by one mans disobedience many were made sinners 3 so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. But you'l fay, the Paffive Obedience is only meant there; but if fo, why doth the Apostle appose it to Adam's Actual Disobedience? and why doth he fay Obedience in general? and when he fays fo, who may pare off ought, and fay, it was not all but fome? Why doth be call it Chnist's righteous ness, Ver. 182 and where are his Sufferings alone fo stiled in Scripture? or what is fo properly such as his Active Obedience? Nay further, he speaks of such a Righteousness as brings justification of life, Ver. 18. The Promise of life was, Do this and live, and Christ's Active Obedience fully answered the terms of it; wherefore Christ's Active Obedience is within this Text, and jointly with the Passive makes us righteous, and confequently is part of the Price. But here it will be objected for us, so as to make us righteous, then we need not obey it in our own Persons:

To which I answer two things.

on those that are for his Passive Obedience only, as upon those that are for his Active also; for they assert that the Passive alone purges away all sin, as well of Omission as Commission, and consequently makes us as Righteous before God, as if we had done all and omitted nothing; and then by their Principles, what need

we obey in our own persons? But

2. That Christ obeyed for us, and therefore we need not obey, is as vain a Confequence as to say, Christ died for us, and therefore we should not die. But the different Ends reconcile all: Christ died that there might be Satisfaction for Sin as to the Guilt of it, and we die that there may be a Destruction of Sin as to the Being of it: Also Christ obeyed that our Justification might be effected, and we obey that our Sanctification may be promoted; Christ obeyed that we might reign in life, and we obey that we may be more and more meet for it. Nay, Christ obeyed that we might obey ; for one fruit of Redemption was, that we might be a peculiar people zealous of good works, Tit. 2.

14. and we obey that his Obedience may not be in vain as to us; for he is the author of eternal redemption to them that obey him, Heb. 5.9. Hence it appears that Christ's Obedience and ours may as well consist together as Justification and Sanctification, Life and the way to it, Redemption and the fruit thereof.

3. Because the Price of our Redemptia on is a thing of superexcellent fulness and superimaginable glory, redeeming Captives in a way completive and perfective of the Law broken by them. Do me make woid the Law by Faith, or by its Object our Redeemer and Redemption? Nay, we establish the Law, Rom. 3. 31. When Man was in Innocency, the Royal Law fate in Glory commanding upon its Throne, holding forth in its right hand a Crown of Life in the Promise, and in its lest a Sword of Vengeance in the Threatning: But when Monstrous Sin entred into the World, the very Throne of the Law feemed to shake, and the Crown in its right hand to wither, only the Sword was glittering and fiery in the left, the Minatory part of the Law stood fast captivating and cursing the Sinner ;

Sinner; but the Mandatory and Promiffory parts thereof fell a trembling and ftaggering, as if their natural and primary End, wis perfect Obedience and all the ensiring Blis were utterly lost. Now Jefus Christ our wonderful Redeemer redeemed us in fuch a way as that he established the Law in every respect; by his Active Obedience he fastened and newpinned the very Throne of the Law, and made the old Promise to bud again with Life; and in his Passive Obedience the fiery Sword of God's wrath did amake against him Jach. 13. 7. and smote and wounded him for our iniquities; he paid down his humane Nature in doing and fuffering, and what could the Law defire of him more? Thus Jefus Christ became the end, the fulness, the perfection of the Liam, Ram. 16.44 But if the Passive Obedience of Christ be only the Price, then indeed the Guile or Wrath, which is in the left hand of the Law, and which comes accidentally by fin, is fatisfied: But where is the primary and natural end of the Law? Where is that perfect Obedience which is in the right hand and right eye of the Law? You'lifay, tis in the Person of Christ our Redeemer : But how is it there ? the Apostle Sumers postlesays, that Christ is the end of the Law to the believer ; now if it be there only personally as for himself, then as to that he is the end of the Law only for himself; but if it be there also fidejussorially as for us, then 'tis part of the Price, and so he is the end of the Law to us alfo. But you'l reply, that though Christ's Active Obedience be no part of the Price, yet his Passive suffices; for that takes away Sin and Death from us, and Sin being removed, Righteousness follows, and Death being removed, Life follows; and fo the Law hath its end. I answer; I might deny these consequences, for Adam in Innocency was free from Sin and Death, yet in that state had neither all the Righteoulness performable, nor all the Life attainable by him. But if I admit, that upon the remotion of Sin and Death Righteousness and Life do follow, yet these may follow from Christ's whole Obedience as their total Principle, and not only from the Passive. If they follow from the Paffive only, the Glory of Redemption is much darkned; for who fees not that the Law is not, nor cannot be fo completely accomplished by the mere Sufferings of Christ, as if over and besides those SC PL

he also performed perfect Obedience for us? Who fees not more Glory thining out when perfect Righteousness is a part of the Price, than if it be only an effect thereof iffuing by confequential refultance from the remotion of Sin ? Wherefore the Messiah is set out to us in the Prophet not only as making an end of fin, but as bringing in everlasting righteousness, Dan. 9. 24. and in the Evangelist, not only as giving his life, but as fulfilling all righteousness, Matth. 3. 15. and in the Apostle, not only as made fin, but as made righteousness too, I Cor. 1.30. and thus the Law hath its perfect accomplishment by our Redeemer. Wherefore concluding that the humane Nature of Christ paid down in his Active and Passive Obedience is the entire and integral price of our Redemption, I pass on to the second Quere,

2. What manner of Price this is ? and this I shall open in three things.

1. Tisa Price Redemptive from Evil.

2. 'Tisa Price Procurative of Good.

3. 'Tis a Price Sufficient for both.

1. Tis a Price Redemptive from Evil, even from all the evils of our Captivity, viz. the Chains of Sin, the bloody Jaylor Satan, and the Prison of Wrath; our great Redeemer by laying down this price hath broke off our Chains, vanquished the Jaylor, and opened the Prison-doors for us; only here is an observable difference: for

1. As to the Guilt of Sin and the Wrath of God this Price is redemptive in a more immediate way by it felf.

2. As to the stain of Sin, the power of Sin, and the tyranny of Satan, this Price is redemptive in a consequential way by procuring the holy Spirit for us.

1. This Price is Redemptive from the Guilt of Sin and Wrath of God; and this in a more immediate way by it self. Now albeit the entire Price concurr herein, yet because as to this there is a special relucency in some parts thereof, I shall only insist on five things, viz.

1. Our Sins were laid upon Christ.

2. He suffered the same punishment (for the main) that was due for these Sins.

2. He suffered it in our stead.

4. Suffering in our stead, he satisfied God's Vindictive Justice and Minatory Law.

5. These satisfied, God is reconciled.

r. Our fins were laid upon Christ. Whilest the Chains are upon the Captive, Captivity is unavoidable; whilest Sin is on the Sinner, Redemption is impossible God therefore gave Sin a remove from its proper Ubi, I will remove iniquity in one day, faith he, Zech. 3.9. that is, in the day of the Melsiab, Ver. 8. But how far will he remove it? The Psalmist tells us, as far as the East is from the West, Psal. 103. 12. and so he did, he removed it from us, who were in occasu Adami, as far as Christ, who is oriens sol Justitiæ; by this remove all our fins met upon him, as the Prophet Speaks, Isai.53.6. Never such a concourse of Sins as here, Sins of all weights, Pence and Talents; Sins of all magnitudes, Gnats and Camels; Sins of various degrees, Frailties and Presumptions; Sins of vast distances as far remote in place as the parts and quarters of the Earth, and in time as the Morning and Evening of the World met all together upon him; he is the Lamb of God that takes or bears away the sin of the world, Joh. 1.29 he faith not Sins, but Sin; because all the Sins of the World were as it were made up into one burthen, and fo laid upon him. Sins past were present to him; for there was a mageois, a Transmission of them unto him, Rom. 3. 25, there was indeed an ἀφεσις, a Remission, as to the faithful, but a mageois, a Transmission as to the the Surety; Sins future were all one to him as if already existent, all our Sins met upon him. Hence he cries out, My iniquities have taken hold upon me, Pfal. 40. 12. My iniquities, a strange word to drop from the holy one of God; but the Apostle clears it, God made him for us to be fin, 2 Cor. 5.21. there was no Sin in him by Inhesion, but God made him Sin by Imputation; not only a Sacrifice for Sin (which yet includes that imputation) but Sin it felf: the double Antithesis in the Text carries it this way; he was made that Sin he knew not, and that was Sin it felf; he was made that Sin which is opfite to Righteousness, and that was Sin it felf. Hence Luther brings in the Father casting all our Sins on him with these words; Tu sis Petrus ille nega-

in paradiso, latro ille in cruce, persona illa qua fecerit omnium hominum peccata, all our sins were imputed unto him. But you'l say, How can these things be? Can the righteous God, who judges according to truth, impute Sin to his holy one? I answer; As there are in the Apostle two distinct Comings of Christ; in the first he bore bore our sins, in the second be appears wels apaglias, without fin, Heb. 9. 28. So in his first coming he susteined two distinct persons, his own and ours: as he was in his own person, he was without fin; but as he was our Surety and fusteined our perfons, so our Sins were imputed to him, and imputed to him according to truth, because he was fuch. The holy One was righteously made sin, because first he was a Surety for finners; a World of Sins was justly cast on the innocent Lamb, because he stood in the room ofaWorld offinners. In eadem persona Christi (saith Luther) congrediuntur illa duo, summum & maximum peccatum, & summa maxima justitia; this is one of the wonders in Theology. Reason and Philosophy can shew Sin in the sinner, but the sublimer Gospel shews Sin on a spotless Lamb; here darkness seized upon the Sun; here the abomination of iniquity stood where it onght not; I say, where it ought not, because upon the holy place 5 yet withal where it ought, because of an holy Im-God can by no means clear the putation. guilty, Exod. 34.7. that is, the guilty remaining such, therefore he first translated the guilt upon Christ, and then he justifies the angodly through him, Rom. 4.5. Oh the glory ry of the divine Will! Its Purity cannot but hate Sin, yet its Power removes it; its Justice cannot but punish Sin, yet its Mercy translates it from the Sinner to the Surety, that it may be condemned there where it was never committed, even in the flesh of Christ, Rom. 8.3.

2. Our Sins being laid on him, he fuffered the same punishment (for the main) that was due to us for them; for how doth the Scripture express the punishment of Sin? 'Tie death, Gen. 2.17. and he died for us; 'tie the second death, Rev. 20. 14. or death unto death, 2 Cor (2.16. and he suffered deaths, Ifai. 53. 9. not the death of the Body only, but all the deaths in moriendo morieris, as far as his holy Humanity was capable thereof; 'tis wrath, Rom. T. 18. and he was avecamos en Thuy hais a man set in the stroke of Gods wrath, as the Septuagint hath it, Ifai. 53. 3. 'tis a curfe, Deut. 27.26. and he was made a curfe; Gal. 3. 13. not only a ceremonial but a real Curse, even that which he redeems us from. Tu Christe (faith Luther) es peccatum meum & maledidum meum, seu potius ego sum peccatum tuum & maledictum tuum; 'tis bell, Pfat.9.17. and he descended thither; though not by a local Motion, yet by an Q 2 im-immense Passion, his Soul travelling under the wrath of God. He began to descend into Hell, when he sweat drops of Blood, and he descended yet further into it when he cried out, My God, my God! why hast thou forsaken me ? There are two Essentials of punishment in Hell, pena sensus & pena damni, and he suffered both: when the fire of God's Wrath melted him into a bloody sweat, there was pana sensus; and when the great Eclipse of God's Favour made him cry out of forfaking, there was pænadamni. Christ suffered the same punishment (for the main) which we should have fuffered; the chief change was in the Perfon, the just suffering for the unjust, the Surety for the Sinner. But you'l fay, Christ did not suffer the same punishment, for he neither suffered eternal Death, nor yet the Worm of Conscience.

As to that of eternal Death I answer by two Distinctions.

I. In eternal Death we must distinguish between the Immensity of the Sufferings and the Duration; the Immensity is esfential to it, but the Duration is but mora in Esse and accidental. Christ suffered eternal Death as to the Immensity of his Sufferings, though not as to the Duration of

of them; he paid down the idem, as to Essentials of punishment, and the tantundem as to the Accidentals; what was wanting in the Duration of his Sufferings, was more than compensated by the Dignity of his Person: for it was far more for God to suffer for a moment, than for all

Creatures to fuffer to Eternity.

2. We must distinguish between punishment as it stands in the Law absolutely, and punishment as it stands there in relation to a finite Creature, which cannot at once admit a punishment commensurate to its offence; and so must ever suffer, because it cannot satisfie to Eternity. Punishment as it stands in the Law absolutely, is Death; punishment as it stands there in relation to a finite Creature, is eternal Death: the first was really suffered by Christ, and the second could not be justly exacted of him; for he paid down the whole sum of Sufferings all at once, and so swallowed up Death in victory.

As to that of the Worm; I answer, the Worm attends not Sin imputed but Sin inherent, 'tis bred out of the putrefaction of Conscience, and that putrefaction is from the in-being of Sin. Now Christ being withou spot, suffered punishment not as it follows Sin inherent, but as it follows Sin imputed; and so he suffered the same punishment (for the main) as was due to us.

- 3. Christ suffered this punishment in our stead, he died vite inair, for us, Rom.5. 8. and which is more emphatical, αντί πολλών, in stead of many, Matth. 20.28. the Particle unie doth sometimes in Scripture signifie only the utility or benefit of another, but avri properly imports a Subrogation or Substitution of one in the Room of another; and so Christ as our Surety died in our room or stead. Hence the Apostle argues thus; If one died for all, acq of nolvdied in the death of one, in as much as that one died as the Surety of all. Hence our Sins were condemned in his flest, Rom. 8. 3. and so condemned there, that upon Gospel terms they are remitted to us. But unless he had stood in our room, divine Justice could neither have adjudged him to punishment, nor yet have admitted us to an absolution from Sin.
- 4. Suffering thus in our ftead, he fatisfied both God's vindictive Justice and minatory Law.

1. He satisfied God's vindic ive Justice. God

God is a righteous God, a God that loveth righteousness and hateth iniquity; nay, he so perfectly hateth it, that his pure eyes cannot look upon it; and his righteous hands cannot but punish it, he will by no means clear the guilty, Exod. 34. 7. not unless his Justice be satisfied for he is a righteous judge, 2 Tim. 4.8. so righteous, that he cannot but do right, Gen. 18. 25. his judgment is righteous judgment, Rom. 3.8. and every fin must have a righteous recompense, Heb. 2.2. and no wonder, for Sin is an horrible Ataxy, and God will not inordinatum dimittere; the subjection of a rational Creature to its Creator is indispensable. God whilest God must be above, and the Creature whilest a Creature below; and this dependance so far as it is broken off by Sin, must be salved up by punishment, or else God loses his dominion over his Creature. This is that which the Apostle calls dunioua Des, the righteousness of God, Rom. 1. 32. and this is so naturally in him, that the very Heathens knew it by the light of Nature. The Viper upon Paul's hand made the Barbarians cry out of a dinn, Acts 28.4. Now what doth this vindictive Justice require? Not precifely that the Sinner himself should Q. 4 should be punished, for then Redemption should be impossible; but that the Sin should be punished, and so it was in Christ; he for our debt was cast into Prison, and paid every farthing of it. The damned in Hell pay a little and a little, and can never satisfie, but he paid down the total fum of Sufferings all at once; they are always striving with God's wrath, but he wrastled with it and prevailed: Hence in Isai. 49. Ver. 3. he is called Israel a Prince with God, His Sufferings were fo fatisfactory to divine Justice, that the pains of death could not hold him, Ads 2.24 neither could the Prison of Wrath detain him, Isai.53.8. and all because there was ἀπολύτρωσις ωθος. Εάσεων, a redemption of transgressions, Heb.9.15. that is, a compensation or satisfaction made to divine Justice for them. Igo to my Father (faith he) and ye shall see me no more, Joh. 16.10. Justice did not stop him in his passage to Heaven; neither did his Father send him back again to mend his work. You shall see me no more, no more bleeding under the bu then of Sin, no more paying down sufferings to divine Justice, for all's difcharged; and to affure us of it, God who received the sum, pawns Heaven and Earth

Earth in mortgage that he will forgive our Sins without any further satisfaction, Jer. 31.34,35,36. By all which it appears that Justice was fully satisfied.

But here't will be objected, That the innocent should suffer for the nocent is unjust, & that which is such cannot satisfie Justice.

I answer; 'Tis unjust if the innocent suffer compulsorily, but not if he suffer freely; 'tis unjust if the innocent fink under his sufferings, but not if he be able to bear them ; 'tis unjust if there be no good in his sufferings commensurate to the evil, but not if the evil be exceeded by the subsequent good; 'tis unjust if the innocent stand in no relation to the nocent for whom he suffers, but not if he stand in relation to him. Suppose a natural relation; Saul's Sons were hanged up for Saul's sins, 2 Sam. 21.9. Suppose a political relation; seventy thousand fall for David's sin, 2 Sam. 24.15. which makes him cry out, Lo! I have sinned, but these sheep what have they done? Suppose a voluntary relation; Sureties must pay for their Principals, and that not only in Moneymatters but in Capital punishments: thus the ailifuxoi engaged life for life, which the Apostle seems to infinuate in that pasfage, fage, Peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die, Rom. 5.7. and why then may not Christ who by all these ways is conjoin'd to us, naturally as a Man, legally as a Surety, and mystically as a Head, justly suffer for us? Especially seeing there was free Action in his Passion, victorious Strength under his Burthen, and the penal Evil crowned by fuch a grand Good as Redemption is, why may not he justly fuffer for as? The Scriptures are politive in it, Christ died for the ungodly, Rom. 5.6: the just for the unjust, 1 Pet. 3. 18. and one for all, 2 Cor. 5.14. Wherefore if humane Reason will not subscribe, it fights against God himfelf.

2. He satisfied the Minatory Law; for this is no other than the voice of vindi-&ive Justice uttering Death and a Curse against Sinners, and to satisfie this he died and died an accurfed Death in their room. But you'l fay, though he died for us, yet the Law is not satisfied, because it requires that the Sinner himself should die, thou shalt die the death, Gen. 2.17. and cursed is he that doth not all the words of this Law, Deut. 27.26. in which places [he and thon] relate to the person of the Sinner; and therefore though Vindictive Justice as in it it felf might have been fatisfied with punishing Sin in another, yet the Minatory Law (which is the voice of Justice) cannot be satisfied, unless the punishment fall on the Sinner himself; and the reason is, because in this Minatory Law the Veracity of God is engaged, which it was not before; now Justice speaks out, which it did not before, and that which it speaks must be true. For answer whereunto,

1. Some (as the Learned Grotius) fay, that here was Dispensatio Legis, qua Legis manentis obligatio circa quasdam personas tollitur : But I take it, that God's Threatnings are indispensably Yea and Amen as well as his Promises; for albeit God doth not dare aliquod jus creature in his Threatnings, as he doth in his Promifes, yet is he debitor sibi-ipsi in both, and not one jot or tittle of either can fail, because of his infinite Veracity; God will not call back his words of threatning, Ifai. 31.2.neither will be himself turn back from them, Jer. 4.28. his words stand surely for evil, Jer. 44.29. That Threatning that Nineweb should be destroyed, had a tacit Condition in it; which had it been expressed, the Threatning would have run thus: It fhall be destroyed except it repent; therefore fore it repenting, there was a remotion of the Judgment, according to the tenour of the Threatning, but no dispensatio Juris at all. Wherefore

I answer that here God did interpret his Law xal Gridudav in an equitable way; equity is nothing else but αναπλήςωμα νόμε a filling up of a general Law by a benign interpretation in that part which was not precisely determinate. The divine fanction was, the finner shall die; but it was not precisely determinate, that he should die in his own perfon; for then God's unalterable truth should have barred out a Surety: neither was it precisely determinate, that he should die in his Surety; for then the threatning should originally have been a promise, and a promise unto sin, such as God never made: But the fanction was general, the finner shall die, and two interpretations lay before God; the first, that the finner shall die in his own person; the latter, that he shall die in his surety; the first is to ane codixaior, just severity; the latter is to Gridnis condescending mercy; in the first there is more of the sound of the Law-letter; in the latter more of the founding of the Law-givers bowels; the

Of the Work of Redemption. the first is much like the first delivery of the Law with thundrings and lightnings and devouring fire , Exod. 19. 16, 17, 18. the latter is like the second delivery of it with a Proclamation of grace and goodness and pardoning mercy for thousands, Exod. 34. 6, 7. Now these two interpretations lying before God, he as the Supreme Lawgiver in order to redemption interpreted his Law according to a merciful equity, the finner shall die, that is, in his surety Christ. Oh the immense love of the Father and the Son! the Fathers love fills up the Law by a gracious interpretation, and then the Sons love fulfils it by a perfect satisfaction; mercy and truth are met together, mercy in a favourable construction of the Law, and truth in the evident veracity of the Law-giver; the person of the finner may be faved, and yet the truth of the threatning is falved, through Christ's satisfaction, na Ingy Inpuer and TE vous we are abrogated from the Law, Rom. 7.6. and yet we do not καταργάν τον νο μον abrogate the Law, but establish it, Rom. 3. 31. because it is fulfilled in Christ. Neither doth this equitable interpretation suppole any defect in the divine Law, as it doth in humane Laws; for humane Laws are are made general for want of providence in men to forfee all particular cases which fall out; but this Law was made general out of the perfection of providence in God, that there might be room for a furety to come in and satisfie it. But you'l say, if God interpret the threatning in such an equitable way, the sinner shall die in his surety, then no sinner is in a state of wrath here, nor can be condemned in hell hereafter; for both these issue out from the first interpretation, thou shalt die in thine own person, and that is now waved by the Judge. I answer, that God doth not totally and absolutely either wave the first rigorous interpretation; for the elect are under wrath till they believe and repent, and the reprobate not believing and repenting are cast into hell, and both by virtue of the first interpretation; but he waves the first and makes the second interpretation in order to redemption, and only to far forth as redemption requires it: Now what doth that require? It requires that all that embrace Christ should be saved from the death in the threatning, and therefore thus far the first interpretation is waved and the second takes place; but it requires not, that any person person should either be out of a state of. wrath before faith, or be faved without faith, and therefore the equitable interpretation doth not go thus far, and so far as that goeth not, the rigorous interpretation takes place, because pro tanto it is confiftent with redemption; redemption is the end, and the all-wife God measures and proportions out the equitable inter-pretation in such a way as serves unto it, and the rigorous interpretation in fuch a way as stands with it. In a word, according to this equitable interprepretation, Christ hath so satisfied the threatning, as that all believers shall be faved from it; yet this fatisfaction hinders not, but that the rigorous interpretation should abide upon unbelievers whilst such; for whilst such, they embrace not that fatisfaction, and therefore are justly curfed by the Law till they receive the Gospel.

Fifthly, God's vindictive Justice and minatory Law being thus satisfied, he becomes reconciled. There are two degrees of reconciliation; the first is that whereby God is ready to receive men into grace and savour if they believe; the second is that whereby God is actually reconciled to them upon their believing. The Apostle mentions both thefe, Col. 1: 20, 21. for first he tells us , ver. 20. That God did reconcile all things to himself by the blood of his Crofs, and then it follows, ver. 21. Tet now hath he reconciled you, you O believing Coloffians! All were reconciled in the first degree, and believers in the second; the first was done all at once upon the Cross, and the second is yet now a doing, and so will be till the Believers are all come in; therefore the Apostle says, God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, 2 Cor. 5.19. Reconciling, which imports a continued Act, a carrying on the work of Reconciliation from one degree to another by particular applications. both these degrees of Reconciliation are wrought by the Death of Christ; the first was wrought by it ipfo facto, without it God would have breathed out nothing but wrath, but through it he is ready to forgive, Pfal. 86.5. As full of mercy as he is, he could not forgive in a way opposite either to his Justice, which in its nature calls for satisfaction for Sin, or to his Truth which in the Law pronounces death on the Sinner; but Justice and Truth being satisfied by Christ's death, he is ready to forgive. The mercy-feat was covered with em innem with a cloud of incenfe, Levit. 16. 13. and the reason there rendred is very remarkable, left he that was before it should die. What, die before the Mercy-feat ? Yes, even there, unless the Merits of Christ be as a Cloud round about it. Mercy as of it felf alone would not fave us, but every Sinner must have died before it, had it not been furrounded with the Incense of Christ's Merits. God out of Christ is a consuming Fire to Sinners, but in Christ he is reconciling them to himself. The fecond is wrought by Christ's death as applied by Faith; therefore 'tis called propitiation through faith in his blood, Rom.3. 25. and both these were typisied by the fprinkling of the blood of the Sacrifice under the Law. That blood was sprinkled on the mercy-seat, Levit. 16.15. prefiguring the first degree of Reconciliation by Christ's death in it self; and it was sprinkled on the people, Exod. 24. 8. prefiguring the second degree of Reconciliation by Christ's death as applied to us by Faith. But you'l fay, If God be first angry, and then reconciled, and reconciled by degrees, there must be a change in God and his Will, which cannot be admitted.

I answer, that Reconciliation is not an immanent Act but a transient, not so properly abiding in God, as passing from him upon the Creature: As when the Scripture faith, the Wrath of God at fuch a time was kindled or arose, 'tis not meant that the Will of God was novelly inflamed, but that the flame of wrath then broke forth in transient effects from thence; fo when it faith, God is reconciled, it imports not a cooling alteration in the Will of God, but a gracious effluxion of Love breaking out from thence. As in punishment wrath goes out from the Lord against sinners, Num. 16. 46. and is upon them, 2 Chron. 29.8. So in reconciliation Love goes out from the Lord towards Believers and is upon them; so that the change is not in God but in the Creature. Proportionably to the nature of Reconciliation as a transient Act, Christ reconcileth us unto God, not by making a new Will in God, but by doing his Will; for so he himself faith, when he came about the work, Loe! I come to do thy will O God. God's Will as to this point may be considered under a double notion; either as naturally pregnant with Vindictive Justice, and decretively issuing out the Minatory Law, both requiring that Sin (if committed) should be

be punished; or else as decreeing within it self the way and manner how this Justice & Law should be satisfied by a Surety in order to the Redemption of sinners. Now Christ perfectly sulfilled God's Will in all these respects; in him our Sins were punished according to the exaction of Justice, and the equitable interpretation of the Law, and that in such a way as was preordained by God's Will for our Redemption. This Will being thus satisfied, God is truly reconciled, not only (as the Socinian would have it) we reconciled to him, but he to us: and this appears in three things.

1. In that Sin is not objected before God's Will as it would have been, had not Christ satisfied; it would have been objected before it, as that just eause for which God might, nay, according to the naturality of his Justice and veracity of his Law must have punished us Sinners to all Eternity: But now it is not so objected before it ; for albeit there be an intrinsecal and inseparable desert of wrath in the nature of it, yet now its obligation or redundancy upon the Sinner appears not, because expiated in the Surety : this the Apostle calls the reconciling of sin, Heb. 2.
17. Without Christ's death Sin like a fury R 2 would would have cried and clamoured for wrath and vengeance to be poured down on the Sinner, but through his death Sin as one reconciled hath nothing to say against him, but that he may have Life and Salvation on Gospel-terms.

2. In that the effects of wrath do not issue out from God's Will against the Sinner as they would have done. God who is infinite Holiness and essential Rectitude cannot but hate Sin, and in this hatred there is nothing less than a velle punire; and from thence condign punishment must have poured downupon the Sinner, if it had not by the Will of God been derived upon the Surety; but being derived this ther, that righteous Will is satisfied, and the merited Wrath comes not forth against the Sinner, but instead thereof

2. Effects of Love break forth from God's Will towards him ; Grace appears to all men, Tit. 2.11. to all men in a gracious Reconciliability, and to Believers in actual Reconciliation; Believers are actually accepted or ingratiated in the beloved, Eph. 1.6. and so shall all others as soon as they become Believers. Thus God is truly reconciled, yet without any change in his Will; only Sin doth not cry to that Will

Will against the Sinner, punishment doth not break out of that Will upon him, and Grace beams and sparkles out of that Will towards him; whilest in all these his Will remains unchangeable. Hence in Scripture we are rather said to be reconciled to God than God to us; not (as the Socinian would have it) because we only are reconciled to God, and not God to us; but because God is reconciled to us in such a way, as is not alterative, but perfective and completive of his unchangeable Will.

Thus Christ bore our Sins and God's Wrath, in a way so satisfactory to God's Justice and Law; that thereby God is reconciled to us, and we are redeemed from Sin and Wrath. But here I am obviated by an Objection.

If there be such a compensatory Price paid for Sin, where is free Remission? Free Remission cannot stand with plenary Satisfaction; what is fully paid cannot be at all remitted.

I answer; It cannot, if there be a solution by the Debtor, but it may, if there be a satisfaction by a Surety; it cannot, if that Surety were of the Debtors own providing, but it may, if he were of the Cre-R 2 ditours ditout's procuring; it cannot, if the Suretie's paiment be irrecusable, but it may, if the Creditor's acceptance be free; it cannot, if the remission were to the same perfon who makes satisfaction, but it may, if one person make satisfaction and another find remission. And thus it is in this case; our debt's were paid to God, but by a Surety Jesus Christ, and this Surety was of God's own fending, and that his payment went for ours was of God's own Grace: and hence it comes to pass that God hath full fatisfaction, and we free remission, and this without any repugnancy; for Christ who fatisfied had no remission, she equiou to, Rom. 8.32. God did not spare or bate him a farthing, and we who are remitted make no latisfaction ; all our Tears, Prayers, Sorrows, Services pay not a mite to divine Justice. Why should corrupt Reason mutter as if Satisfaction and Remiffion, which are matches in Scripture, were inconsistencies in Nature? What faith God, Levit.4. 31. the Priest Shall make an atonement, there's fatisfaction, and it shall be forgiven, there's femillion? What faith the great Apostle, Rom. 3. 24. We are justified freely by his grace, there's remission, through the redemption that is in Christ, there's fatisfatisfaction? Take both in three words. er xersa excelorato, God for Christ's fake hath forgiven you, Eph. 4. 22. for Christ's Take, there's fatisfaction, bath forgiven you, there's remission, and free remission; for tis not only aperis, a dismission or discharge of Sin, but 'tis excelorato, a difmission or discharge of it in a gracious way. In Christ our Surety there was ένδειξις δικαιοσύνης, Rom. 3.25. but towards us there was 6πράνεια χάριλος, Tit. 2. 11. Christ may say, totum exfolvi, and God may fay, totum remisis there was nothing forgiven to Christ, for he paid all, but there was all forgiven to us, for we paid nothing.

Thus this Price is Redemptive from the Guilt of Sin and Wrath of God; but this is not all.

2. This Price is Redemptive from the stain of Sin, the power of Sin and the tyranny of Satan, and that by procuring the holy Spirit for us; We are saved by the renewing of the holy Ghost, and that is shed on us through Jesus Christ, Tit. 3.5, 6. and where it is shed, there it redeems.

1. From the stain of Sin; Sin is the drost or rust of the Soul, Isi. 1.22. but the Spirit refines and purifies from it; Sin is the wrinkle of the old man, Eph. 5. 27. but the Spirit smooths and removes it. Christ came by water and blood, 1 Joh. 5. 6. and the water sprung out of the blood; the Spirit is that clean water, Ezek. 36.25. which fetcheth out the spots and stains of Sin, and that healing water coming out from the side. of the Temple, even the pierced fide of Christ, Ezek. 47.1. which by degrees cures all the Ulcers and Plague-fores of the heart. The Corinthians were all over mire and dirt, but they were mashed in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God, I Cor. 6.11. the Spirit washed them, and washed them in the name of Jesus, that is, for his Merits fake. The Soul in finning runs to the Cabul of the Creature, dirtying and fouling it felf; but the Spirit brings it back again to the holy one, and as it approaches nearer and nearer to him, the macula peccati goes off, and the nitor anime appears.

2. It redeems from the power of Sin. Sin merited Christ's Crucifixion, and Christ's Crucifixion merited the Crucifixion of Sin; and upon this account out comes the holy Spirit and nullifies the Law of Sin, batters down the strong holds of it, plucks up the very Throne of it, and

crucifies the old Man with all his members, by outward restriction nailing his hands and his feet, and by inward circumcifion. cutting and piercing into his heart, and from thence gradually letting out his vital blood, even the love of Sin; hence his motions wax feeble, his members weak, his natural heat of original lust spent and exhausted, and his whole body drooping and languishing to his dying day; and all this by a secret virtue from Christ's death. We are planted together To openiquali The Davate auts, faith the Apostle, Rom. 6.5: he faith not occordant, in the conformity, but openionali, in the conformation of his death, because his death procured that conformity in us. Hence Sin doth not reign in us as a Prince upon his Throne, but die as a man upon the Cross; Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through Jefus Chrift.

3. It redeems from the tyranny of Satan. Christ in his own person spoiled principalities and powers on the cross, Col. 2. 15. and Christ by his Spirit spoils them in the hearts of men; Satan hath his Palace there, but Christ hath bought him out, and the Spirit will cast him out; Satan would keep on our chains, but Christ dissolves them,

1 70h. 3.8. As he by his Spirit enlightens, off go the chains of the Mind; as he converts, off go the chains of the Will; as he spiritualizes, off go the chains of the Affections; and as he sprinkles his blood upon us, off goes the weighty Guilt of all these: Satan would keep us within the Prison, but Christ comes with an Habeas Animam, translating us from the power of darkness into his own kingdom, Col.1.12. a Region of Grace and Light, where Satan the Ruler of Sin and Darkness cannot have the Victory; because Christ the Wisdom and Power of God fights against Him who is (as I may so say) the wisdom and power of Sin. Hence he falls as lightning from heaven, Luke 10. 18. falls and breaks his Serpents head, even his defign against poor fouls; the ruine of Souls is a heaven to him, and in falling short of that, he falls as it were from heaven. The Prince of this world shall be cast out, saith Christ, 70h.12.31. and he adds as a reason, If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me, Ver.32. Lifted up upon the Cross, he purchased the Spirit, and lifted up into Heaven he sends down the Spirit, which draws men out of Satans World into Christ's, where the Gates of Hell can never prevail. The God of peace bruises sa-tan underfoot, Rom. 16. 20. the Apostle faith not, the God of Mercy or Power shall doit, but the God of Peace; because, unless Peace had been made through the blood of the Cros, Satan would have kept us in everlasting Chains. But now Justice being satisfied, the Spirit comes forth with a Quo jure ; first rescuing the Captive-foul, and then treading down Satan under its feet. Thanks be unto God for this victory also through Jesus Christ.

2. This Price is procurative of Good. Infinity is a boundless Ocean, and may run over in effects as far as it pleaseth; infinite Power might have run over in making millions of Worlds more, and infinite Mercy might have run over in faving millions of Sinners more. The Price of Redemption hath a kind of Infinity in it ; no wonder then, if after remotion of Evils, it run over by its transcendent excess of Value in the procuration of Good; such was the glorious redundance and supereffluence of its Merit, that it paid divine Justice to the last mite, and over and besides made a purchase of three Worlds; I mean the

the lower World of Nature, the middle World of Grace, and the upper World of Glory.

1. As to the World of Nature, Christ procured two things.

1. The Standing of it.

2. The Deliverance of it.

I. The Standing of it, and that in a threefold respect.

1. The Standing of it in Being. Sin filled it with so much spiritual stench and rottenness, that the Power of the holy One would not have endured to have been there supporting and bearing it up in Being, if the Death of Christ had not been ooun Soudias, a smeet-smelling savour, Eph. 5.2. to perfume and fweeten it; the World was as it were new founded by the Cross, or else Sin that abomination of desolation, would have dashed it down about the Sinners Ears; Justice (if unsatisfied) would not have spared so much as the Stage whereon Sin was acted but hurled it down into its first Nullity. Christ upholdeth all things by the word of his power, Heb. 1. 3. Before Sins entry they stood merely by the word of his Power, but fince they stand not without the blood of his Cross. Redemption is the great Buttress

tress of Creation; as it rears up the little World after its fall, so it keeps up the great World from falling.

2. The Standing of it in Order. When the Prophet describes God's Judgments, he speaks as if the old Chaos were come again; Loe! the earth was without form and woid, Jer.4.23. All the Orders and Harmonies in Nature were at first set by the Wisdom of God, and afterwards cemented by the Blood of God, or else Sin would have unframed all. By Christ all things consist, Col. 1. 17. not only subsist in their Beings, but consist in their Orders.

3. The Standing of it in its Usefulness to us. Sin was the blast and forfeiture, but Christ is the Purchaser and heir of all things, Heb. 1.2. and in and through him all are as it were new-given to us. We became such wretches by Sin, that the Earth would not have bore our persons, if Christ had not bore our iniquities? the Sun in the Firmament would not have lighted the material World, if the Sun of Righteousness had not appeared in the spiritual; these lower Heavens would not have spun out a day for us, if Christ had not purchased the upper ones of Glory; the Blood of Creatures should never have been shed for the life of our Bodies, if the Blood of God had not been poured out for the Life of our Souls. Under the Law, before Harvest began the Passeover was killed; at Harvest a Sheaf of the firstfruits was brought to the Priest to be offered to God; and after Harvest there was the Feast of Tabernacles to bless God for the Fruits of the Earth, which by the Tews was kept with Booths and Hosannahs. Had not Christ our Passeover been sacrificed for us, there would have been no Harvest of Creature-bleffings at all; and now that there is one, the praise of every Sheaf must be brought to Christ the high-priest of good things, and in and through him offered up to God: therefore there is a spiritual feast of tabernacles under the Gospel, Zach. 14.16. Whilest we sit under the Booths of the Creature, we must sing Hosannahs to the Son of God, who tabernacled in our flesh, and in it merited all comforts for us. Every bough of Nature hangs upon his Cross, every crum of Bread swims in his Blood, every Grape of bleffing grows on his Crown of Thorns, and all the sweetness in Nature streams out of his Vinegar and Gall. A right-born Christian is the best Philosopher; for he sees the Sun of RighteRighteousness in the Luminaries of Heaven, the waterings of Christ's Blood in the fruits of the Earth, the Word incarnate in Creature-nourithment, and the Riches of Christ in all the Riches of Nature. All are ours, and we are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

2. Christ by this Price procured the Deliverance of it. God made the House of the World for Man, and whilest there is Sin in the Inhabitant, the Curse-mark is on the House; the Heavens wax old as if there were Mothes in them, the Stars have their malignant Aspects, the Earth hath its Thorns and Thistles, and the whole Creation groans and travels with an universal Vanity; the Sun groans out his light on the Workers of darkness, the Air groans with Vollies of Oaths and Blasphemies, and the Earth groans forth its Corn and Wine into the lap of the Riotous; and as Sin grows heavier, fo the Creaturegroans wax lowder every day. But at last in and through Christ, there shall be αποκα. τάςασις πάντων, a restitution of all things, Acts 3.21. the Balm of his Blood will perfectly heal all the stabs and wounds in the Body of Nature; the groaning and traveling Creature shall be delivered from the bondage bondage of Corruption, Rom. 8.21. there shall be new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteonsness, 2 Pet. 3.13. and all the steps and traces of the old Curse shall be razed out of the World.

Thus Christ hath purchased the World of Nature; but this (as appears by the Purchaser's own περοπεθύσεται, Matth.6. 33.) is not the main bargain, but the casting in or overplus thereof; therefore

2. Christ by this Price purchased the World of Grace. Grace may be considered two ways; either as it is in the Map or Charter of the Gospel, or as it is in the Subject or receptacle of the Heart; and both ways'tis Christ's purchase.

Covenant of Grace, comprized in the Promises, called the Covenant of Promise, Eph. 2.12. In this Covenant there are Promises reaching down as low as the World of Nature, and Promises reaching up as high as the World of Glory; and betwixt these two run the Promises which water the World of Grace, and these are either Promises of Grace such as those, I will give an heart to know me, Jer. 24.7. I will circumcise the heart to love me, Deut. 30. 6. I will put my laws into their minds and write them them in their hearts, Heb. 8.10. I will give a new heart and a new spirit; I will take away the stony heart, and give an heart of flesh, Ezek. 36.26. or else they are Promises to Grace, fuch as those, God will justifie the believer, Rom. 3. 26. beautific the meek with salvation, Psal. 149. 4. dwell in a broken heart, Ifai. 57.15. comfort the mourners, fill the hungry, and be seen of the pure in heart, Matth. 9.4,6,8. Now all these Promiles are the purchase of Christ, and the whole Covenant made up of them is the New-testament in his blood, I Cor. 11. 25. Without his fatisfactory Blood there would have been no room for Promises, no, not for the least twinkling of a Promise to the fons of men; for unfatisfied Justice would have burried all to Hell. All the Promises issue out to us in and through Christ, the Rivers of Life gushed out of the true Rock, the Gospel-wine run forth from the true Vine; if God meet us and commune with us in words of Grace, we must thank the true Propitiatory, or Mercyfeat for every fyllable.

2. Grace in the proper Seat or Receptacle of it is Christ's purchase; and this I shall make out

I. In general ; Christ purchased the Spir s

Spirit of all Grace. There is a double Oblation of Christ; a personal Oblation on the Crofs, and that is Meritum Spiritus; and a doctrinal Oblation in the Gospel, and that is Ministerium Spiritus ; and so the holy Ghost is shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ, Tit. 3.6. Christ ascended up on high that he might fill things, Eph. 4. to. One would have thought that his descent should rather have done it; but he ascended up in the glory of his Merits, he carried up all the Purchase-money to his Fathers house, and from thence the Spirit came pouring down upon men; fome droppings of it were before, but then it was richly poured out; it came down in cloven fiery tongues and a rushing mighty wind, Acts 2.2,3. Tongues to utter magnalia Dei, and above all, the master-piece of Redemption, and cloven tongues to utter them to all Nations in their own Language, and fiery tongues to enlighten and enflame the Auditors hearts with the knowledge and love of Christ, and 4 mighty rushing wind to blow home that fire ftrongly and insuperably in a thorough Conversion; and all this was shed forth from Christ, Ver.33. Never any Tongue truly preached Christ, but by a secret touch kindled on the heart, but by a coal from his Altar; never any gales of Grace on the Soul, but from the breathings of his Spirit: not one drop of his Blood is spirit-less, but full fraught and flowing with the Spirit of Life.

2. In particular; and fo Christ hath purchased three things.

1. The Radical Grace of Faith.

2. All other Graces of the Spirit.

3. All the Crowns of thefe Graces.

1. Christ hath purchased the Grace of Faith; the Apolile is express in it, To you it is given, whise xerse, for Christ's fake not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for bis fake, Phil. 1.29. the Apostle evidently points out the merits of Christ as the foring of Faith, and Faith persevering unto suffering. And in another place he faith, we joy in God through fefus Christ, 818, by whom we have now received the atonement, Rom. s. 11. he doth not only fay, that by and through him the Atonement was made, but that by and through him the Atonement is received; and what is this receiving of the Atonement but Faith it felf? That therefore is part of Christ's Purchase. These express places might suffice fice us; but because the Remonstrants oppose this Truth, I shall propose two Queries unto them.

1. Is not Faith comprized within the Covenant of Grace? Let's come to the Touch-stone ; Is it not written there, I will give an heart to know me, and is not Fanh a justifying knowledge, a fight of the just One, and a beam or dawning of eternal life ? Is it not written there, I will take away the heart of stone, and is not Unbelief a part of that Rone? doth it not directly refift the Blood and Righteousness of Christ? and can there be a worse Stone than this? Is it not written there, I will give a new beart, and is not Unbelief the heart and life of the old Man, and Faith of the new? Is it not written there, I will put my Spirit within you, and is not the Spirit a spirit of faith, and faith a fruit of the Spirit? is not Unbelief of our Spirit, and Faith of Gods? Is it not written there, I will circumcife the heart, and is not Unbelief flesh? God faith, there is life in his Son, and the Unbeliever faith, No. and does what in him lies to make God a lyar, and can there be any filthier or rottenner flesh in the old man than this? and unless this be cut off can there be a true Circumcision?

cision? By all this it clearly appears that Faith is within the Covenant, and if so, is not the whole Covenant Sanctio à sanguine, the New-testament in Christ's blood? Is not he the Mediator and purchafer of the whole? Are not all the Promiles Tea and Amen in him? Who dares diftinguish and say, Christ purchased part of the Promises and not all? he purchafed notional knowledge and not justifying, he breaks the stone in the heart, all but that which opposes his own Blood and Righteousness, the old man is crucified with Christ, all but his heart and life of Unbelief, the Spirit of Grace flows out from Christ, all but the Spirit of Faith, the circumcision of Christ, Col. 2.11. (so called because it is procured by the Merits, and produced by the Spirit of Christ) cuts off the fiesh of the heart, all but that of Unbelief which upbraids God with a lye 5 who dares thus tear in funder the Covenant, mangle the Promises, dimidiate Christ and divide the Spirit by unscriptural distinctions? Such shuffling is unworthy of Christians. Wherefore I conclude my first Quere thus; Faith is within the Covenant, and the Covenant is Christ's purchase; therefore Faith is such also.

2. Is not Faith a Grace of the Spirit? It seals to the Gospel, sanctifies the heart, works by Love, waits by Patience, overcomes the visible World, and fensibly presentiates the invisible; for shame let it be a Grace, and if so, it must be Christ's purchase. The Spirit never effected that Grace in fallen Man which Christ never merited. As every Creature in the World is of God's making, to every Grace in the Church is of Christ's meriting: He that faith, Yonder'is a precious Stone but 'tis not of God's making blasphemes the Creator; and he that faith, Yonder is a precious Faith but 'tis not of Christ's meriting, does no less to the Redeemer. But further; Is not Faith the Grace of Union with Christ? Doth not Christ dwell in the heart by faith? Is not Faith the Mothergrace of all? First Faith gives a touch to Christ, and then Love is enflamed with him, Joy triumphs in him, and Obedience follows him. Where do all the rivers of living water flow but in the Believers belly, Job. 7.38? What holds all the starry Graces of the Church but seewux missus, the firmament of faith, as the Apostle calls it, Col. 2.5 ? Now will it not grate thine ears, O Christian, to hear that the Spirit of Holiness is from Christ, but not the Spirit of Faith; all the starry Graces are Christ's but the Firmament of Faith is our own; we are bleffed with all spiritual bleffings in Christ, but not with the Mother-grace which broods and teems out all the rest, not with the Grace of Union which lies nearest to Christ eating his flesh and drinking his blood; that Faith which is nearest to the Merits of Christ in its Union, is furthelt off from them in its Origination. What is this but to darken the Sun of Righteousness, damm up the Well of Salvation, and trample the Blood of the Covenant under foot? at which every sober Christian cannot but tremble. Therefore I conclude my second Quere thus; Faith is a prime and excellent Grace, wrought by the Spirit and purchased by the Merits of Christ.

2. Christ hath purchased all other Graces; for all Graces are the fruits of the Spirit, and the Spirit is shed on us through Christ. But in stead of proving, let me parly with the Saints. Speak, O ye excellent ones, whence came your lovely Meekness, your undiffembled Love, your untired Patience, your holy Unction, your melting Compassions, your broken Hearts, your repentant Tears, your Law-engraven Spirits, and all your sweet-smelling Perfumes of Grace? Speak for the Glory of Christ. Methinks I hear them all with one confent cry out, Thus, O thus it is ; all our Meekness came from the Lamb, our Love from the beloved one, our Patience from the Captain-sufferer, our Unction from the Christ of God, our Compassions from the bowels of Christ, our broken Hearts from a broken Christ, our repentant Tears from bis bleeding Wounds, our Law-engravings are the Epiftle of Christ, and all our sweetsmelling Graces are the powders of the merchant, Cant. 3. 6. even of Jesus Christ who bought them all with his sweetest Blood. The Church is the House of God made up of lively stones, floored with Humility, roofed with Knowledge, comented with Charity, warmed with the fire of Zeal, and filled with the spiritual Glory of heavenly Graces; but Christ is the chief corner-stone which bears up all : all the Churches Humility is from Christ's caevage or self-emptying, all our Knowledge from Christ the Sun of righteonsness, all its Charity from the Hyperbole of his love, all its Zeal is from a coal of his Altar, and all the spiritual Glory which fills it, comes by the may of the East, Ezek. 43. 2. even from Jefus Christ who is ανατολή, the East or day-

Spring of allgraces, Luk. 1.78.

3. Christ hath purchased all the Crowns of these Graces, I mean such as are set on the Saints head in this life; the Believers shall be justified, but 'tis by the righteous Christ; the Meek shall be beautified with Salvation, but 'tis because of the Lamb; the broken Heart shall have God dwelling in it, but 'tis for the Merits of a broken Christ; the Mourners shall be comforted, but 'tis by the consolation in Christ; the Hungry shall be filled, but 'tis from the fulness of Christ; the pure in Heart shall fee God, but 'tis through Christ the brightness of his Glory : all the Crowns of Grace must be cast down at the feet of Jesus Christ the great Purchaser of them.

Thus Christ hath bought the World of Grace; but yet we are not at the top of the Purchase: For

3. Christ hath purchased the World of Glory; that is the none-such, the World of Worlds, to which all Natures Glories are but a shadow, and the Churches Graces but a Portal; there are Plenitudes of Joy, Crowns of Life, Weights of Glory, Treasures of Bliss and Oceans of Sweetness, and and all of Christ's purchasing: All the Mansions of Glory are of his preparing; Joh. 14.2. all the Wine in Heaven is for his marriage-supper, Revel. 19.9. his Blood is the Key to open the boly of holies, Heb. 10. 19. the pure River of Life clear as Crystal issues out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, even out of Gods Grace and Christs Merit, Rev. 22.1. Christ on the Cross purchased a Heaven for us, Christ in the Gofpel proffers it unto us, and Christ in the heart gives us an actual hope thereof. Had it not been for Christ, we could never have entred into such a place as Heaven, where the Walls are Pearls, the Rivers Pleasures, the Hills Frankincense, the Air Purity, and the Light, Life, Love and all in all God himself. Now Christ did not only purchase Heaven for us, but purchased it in a way completive of the Law. The old Promise of the Law was, Do this and live, and that seemed quite blasted and withered by our fins; but Christ by his perfect Obedience made it revive and bud again with life. God would not give eternal life, but upon a Do this; and Christ fulfilled all Righteousness for us, and by that Righteousness we come to have shalwow lone, instification of life, Rom. 5.18. fuch a Justihas

a Justification as is crowned with eternal

But you'l fay, that old Do this required Obedience in our own persons; and therefore Christ could not fulfil it in our stead, and fo purchase life for us.

I answer, that God did here also interpret his Law in an equitable way's thedivine Sanction [Do this] on which Life diddepend, was not precifely determinate that we must do it in our own persons, for then a Sureties obedience should have been totally excluded; neither was it precifely determinate that we should do it in our Surety; for there was a Do this in the state of Innocency where there was no need of a Surety; but the Sanction was general, Do this, and two interpretations lay before God; the first that it should be done in our own persons, the second that it thould be done in our Surety; the first a rigorous and literal, the second an equitable and merciful interpretation. Now these two interpretations lying before God, he as supreme Law-giver takes the equitable interpretation; had he taken the rigorous one, there would have been no room for a Surety, nor life for the Sinners but in rich mercy he takes the equitable Exerc one, and so through a Surety's Obedience eternal Life is purchased for us. two interpretations of the Law feem to me to be figured out by the double making of the Tables; the Law in the rigorous interpretation is like the first Tables which were broken: For as the Law was first written in those Tables, so the rigorous interpretation firstly rises out of the Letter of the Law; and as those first Tables were broken, so Sin made such a breach upon the Law, that the Apostle puts a To abdivator upon it, Rom. 8. 3. it could not give life according to the rigorous interpretation, And the Law in the equitable interpretation is like the second Tables which were put into the Ark: for as those Tables were kept inviolate in the Ark, so the Law was kept inviolate in the equitable interpretation; and as the Mercy-feat covered the Tables in the Ark, and from the Mercyfeat so covering them. God manifested his presence; so Christ, the true idaste cov or mercy-seat, did by his perfect Obedience cover the Law all over, and in and through him so covering it God manifests his prefence, not only his back-parts on Earth but his face in Heaven. Thus by the admirable Wisdom of God Heaven was purchased, and and yet the Law established, the Do this turned upon the Surety, and the promised

Life made good to us Sinners.

But you'l object further, If the Law be thus interpreted in an equitable way, viz. to be done by a Surety, then it is not fo much as a Rule of life to us; for that iffues out of the first interpretation, viz. the doing of it in our own persons.

I answer, that still the Law is a Rule of life to us; and the reason is, because God doth not wave the rigorous and take the equitable interpretation totally and absolutely, but in order to Redemption, and so far only as Redemption requires it. Now what doth that require? It requires that the Obedience of a Surety should be ad-mitted for the impletion of the Law; and therefore thus far the rigorous interpretation is waved, and the equitable takes place. But it requires not that the redeemed ones should be exempted from the Law as a Rule; and therefore the equitable interpretation doth not go thus far; and fo far as that goes not, the rigorous one takes place ; because pro tanto it is confiltent with Redemption. Hence it comes to pals that Christ as our Surety fulfilled the Law for us, and yet fill the Law is a Rule of life to us; Christ is the end of the Law to the believer, and yet the Believer er is evopos xesse, under the Law to Christ, I Cor. 9. 21.

of all is yet behind.

3. It is a Price sufficient for both the former. There is a double Sufficiency, Sufficientia nuda, and Sufficientia ordinata ; the first consists in the intrinsecal value of the thing, the thing in value transcending or at least equalizing the thing to be redeemed; the second confists in the Will of the Payer and Receiver, the one intentionally paying and the other intentionally accepting that thing as a Price of Redemption: the first is that radical Sufficiency whereby the thing may possibly become a Price; the second is that formal Sufficiency whereby the thing doth actually become a Price. Let the thing be in itself, of never to vast a value, the former without the latter doth not constitute it a Price. Now the glorious price of our Redemotion hath both these Sufficiencies in it.

Cive and Passive Obedience of Christ

have intrinfecal value enough to equalize, nay infinitely superexcede all our Debts, and over and besides to purchase three Worlds for us; and the reason is because his Deity poured out a kind of Infinity into his Doings and Sufferings. The Righteousness which he fulfilled was the righteoulnels of God, Rom. 1.17. the Blood which he fied was the blood of God, Rom. 20.28.& the Life which he laid down was, the life of God; 1 Job. 3. 16. And what nakedness cannot the Righteousness of God cover? What debts cannot the Blood of God pay for? And what Worlds cannot the Life of God purchase? Remember, O poor trembling Soul, remember, he that was pierced for thee was Jehouah, he that was smitten for thee was the man God's fellow, and he that obeyed for thee was in the form of God. O what manner of Actions and Passions were those wherein the Law-giver stood under his own Law, and the Creator suffered in his own World? How was his Obedience elevated into Infinity, and transfigured into glory by his Godhead? What a Mass of sweet-smelling Merits must that be into which the Deity it self transfused Riches and Odours? This may be one reason why Christ is stiled the heir of all things, Heb. 1.2. though though he be the Purchaser of all, yet he is Heir of all; because he received his divine Nature from his Father, and that divine Nature stamped an infinite value upon the Purchase-money which bought all. May I shadow it out by an imperfect Similitude: A Son receives vast sums from his Father, and with them purchases an estate in Lands to himself; that Son is the Purchaser of those Lands in respect of his own payment of the Money, and yet in a sence he is Heir to them in respect of his receipt of the Money from his Father; So the Eternal Son of God is the Purchaser of all, for he paid down his own Blood and Righteousness as the Price; and yet he is Heir of all, for that Price had its value from the divine Nature, and that divine Nature was received from his Father in the Eternal Generation. There is no doubt then (as long as Christ is God) but that his Obedience hath value enough in it felf.

2. It hath Sufficientiam ordinatam, and

1. By the Will of Christ who paid down

the Price.

2. By the Will of God who received it; both their Wills concentre in the work of Redemption, and the counfel of peace is between them both, Zach. 6.13.

1. It

1. It appears by the Will of Christ 2 when he paid down his Obedience, what was his meaning? Surely not a tittle of his Obedience was irrationally done, nor a drop of his Blood irrationally shedswhat then was his meaning in it? Was it not to dissolve the Chains of Sin, open the Prison of Wrath, and spoil and triumph over the bloody Jaylor Satan? Was it not to procure the standing of the Body of Nature, the shedding down of the Spirit of Grace, and the opening a door to Heaven and eternal Life? These were the things on which the divine and humane Will of Christ were both set: his divine Will was fet upon them; for before the foundations of the World, even in his joyous Eternity with his Father, his delights were with the fons of men, Prov. 8.31. and when the World was up, he appeared to Abraham in a humane shape, and to Moses to usher in a temporal Redemption; the first as a preludium to his Incarnacion, and the latter as a præludium to our Redemption, and both as a demonstration that the work of Salvation was in his Heart. And afterwards in the days of his flesh, his humane Will never parted from his divine, but in a rape of Love always run upon Redemption s

2. It appears by the Will of God, and that in two things.

1. God decreed this Price to be paid for the ends aforesaid.

2. God accepted it being paid for the ends aforesaid.

1. God decreed this Price to be paid; Christ did not glorisie himself in making himself an high-priest or surety; but he that said unto him, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee, Heb. 5.5. Christ's Person was begotten out of the Substance of God, and his Office as it were begotten out of the the Will of God, God eternally ordained him to that Office, I Pet. 1.20. and in the fulnels of time called him to it, Heb. 5. 101 and for more affurance, superadded bis seal to his Call, Job. 6.27. and bis Oath to both, Heb. 7.21. and all to shew forth his immutable purpose touching the same. Christ was booked down for a Redeemer in the eternal Volumes, and flain above in the Decree long before he was flain below in time. Infinite Love impregnated the divine Will with the Decree of Redemption, and that Decree fent forth our Redeemer, and put a To TEETON upon bis righteonsneß, Matth. 3. 15. a Siù Tero upon the cup of wrath, Joh. 12.27. and a de upon his death and sufferings, Matth. 16. 21. and all this that the mystery of Redemption, hid from ages in the will of God, Col. 1. 26. might come abroad into the World; When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the Law, to redeem them that were under the Law, Gal.4.4.5. O what a fair window is here opened into God's heart! Redemption was decreed, and therefore God fent forth bis son; the time was decreed, and therefore he fent him forth in the fulness of time; and the Price was decreed, and therefore he

he sent him forth made of a woman, made under the Law, that is, to take a humane Nature, and pay it down in all Obedience as the Price of our Redemption.

2. As God decreed this Price to be paid, so he accepted it being paid, and this includes in it two things.

1. That this Price was paid to him.

That this Price was accepted by

1. This Price was paid to him; Christ offered himself to God, Heb. 9.14. Whether we consider this Price as redemptive from evil, or as procurative of good, both ways it was paid to God; as redemptive from evil it was paid to him as a righteous Lawgiver and Judge, and as procurative of good it was paid to him as a great Remunerator and faithful Promiser. God is the Law-giver against whose Laws we rebelled, and God is the Judge who for our rebellions against his Law, ouvenhor Teg molv-Tas, sout us all up in prison, Rom. 11. 32. there we lay vaconos 75 800, under the judgment of God, Rom. 3.19. and his wrath abode upon us, Joh. 3. 36. therefore this Price as redemptive from evil was paid to God as the Law-giver and Judge. That Socinian eavil, That if this were a proper Re-

Redemption, the Price should be paid to Sin and Satan, because we are redeemed from them, is but a mere trifle; for God' is the supreme Law-giver and Judge, he only hath the Keys of Death and Hell; strictly and properly Sinners are Prisoners only to him, Satan is but as the Jaylor or Under-officer, acting under the authority of this Judge; the Guilt of Sin is but as the Chains or Fetters, binding under the Justice of this Law-giver; and who ever read or heard of a Price of Redemption paid to the Jaylor or Fetters? and yet upon the payment thereof the Captive is delivered from them both. Hence it is that our Saviour Christ was both Mercator and Bellator, Mercator as to God to whom he paid the Price, and Bellator as against Satan whom he conquered; and both these the Apostle expresses together, He blotted out the hand-writing, nailing is to bis cross, and spoiled Principalities and powers triumphing over them in it, Col. 2.14, 15. He paid God the Price and not Satan, he spoiled and triumphed over Satan, and not over God. Again; as this Price as redemptive from evil was paid to God as a Law-giver and Judge, so this Price as procurative of good was paid to God as the

the great Remunerator and faithful Promiser. God is a great Remunerator, for he rewards according to the condecency of his goodness; and a faithful Promiser, for he will not suffer one jot or tittle of his Promises to fall to the ground; he engaged himself to Christ, that his blood should be returned in all good things, he gave him the Promise of a seed, and to raise it up, the Promise of bis spirit, and to crown it, the Promise of eternal life; he bound himself by express compact to make him a light to the Gentiles, a covenant to the people, and salvation to the ends of the earth, Isai. 49. 6,8. Wherefore this Price as procurative of good was paid to God as a Remunerator and Promiser.

2. As this Price was paid to God, so it was accepted by him for the ends afore-said. Indeed simply and abstractively from his own Decree he was not bound to accept of this price (though of an immense and infinite value) as for us; I say, as for us; for he might have stood upon the rigour of the Law, Do this and live, transgress this and die in thine own person; the Tables of the Law might never have been put into the Ark, nor covered with a Mercy-seat; but this is the joy of our Faith, that he hath accepted it. When Christ was baptized, there was a Voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, & & Sidonnoa, in whom I am well-pleased, Mat. 3. 17. Duo grata vocabula, filius & dilectus, faith an Ancient, and that fweet word & Sounga makes up the third. When Christ was facrificed, there was a sweet smell to God, Eph. 5.2. God cries out, I have found a ranfom, Job 33.24. and Christ, It is finished, Job. 19. 30. Afterwards when he came into the Grave, off flew the bands of Death, Ads 24.24. as a pregnant evidence that Justice was satisfied; he was taken from prison and from judgment, Isai. 53.8. because all was paid; God's Power raised him up, and God's Justice could say nothing against it. And when he was risen from the dead, he raises up the Faith of his Disciples, Wby do thoughts arise in your hearts? saith he, Luk.24.38. Do you doubt whether I am he who paid down the Price of Redemption? Behold! my hands and my feet ; foffus est faccus, or manavit pretium orbis, the Sack of my Humanity was broke, and out run the Price of Redemption. Do you scruple whether that Price were accepted of God or not? Lo! here are the returns of it, I'le breath the holy Ghost upon you, I'le betruft betrust the Gospel with you, go preach it to every creature, make the World know, that Redemption, Remission, Grace, Peace, Sanctity, Salvation are the returns of my Blood. And afterwards just at his parting he bleffed them and ascended up into heaven; he bleffed them, to flew that the Curse was gone, and ascended up into heaven to posfess the purchase of Glory, and being there, he sate down at God's right hand; his work was now done, and therefore he fate down, and his work was now accepted, and therefore he sate down at God's right hand; there he received gifts for men, and from thence he gave them out again; he gave out what he received, and received what he purchased. Christ's Sacrifice was fo fweet a favour to God, that the Minister, who preaches it, is a sweet savour to him, 2 Cor. 2. 15. and the Believer who accepts it is accepted of him, Epb. 1.6. nay, so far accepted, that he becomes a Priest, Revel. 1.6. and his good works pleasing facrifices, Heb. 13. 16. his prayers are turned into odours, Revel. 5.8. and his charity into a sweet smell, Phil. 4. 18. and all this by a perfuming touch from Christ's Merits. In a word; all the Proclamations of Mercy in the Scripture, all the Pardons dons of fin in the Conscience, all the Influences of Grace on the Heart, and all the Openings of Heaven in the Promises are as so many pregnant proofs unto us, that God accepted the Price.

Thus having shewed what manner of Price this is, viz. redemptive from Evil, procurative of Good, and sufficient for both, I pass on to the last Question.

3. For whom was this Price paid? and this I shall cleave a sunder into two Queries.

f. Whether Christ died for all men?

In both which, whilest I name the Death of Christ only according to the usual language of Divines, I comprehend his whole Obedience Active and Passive, whereof his Death was the complement and extreme Act.

died for all men? I answer affirmatively, that he did; and here I thall do two things.

I. I shall lay down the Reasons of my

2. I shall answer the Objections made against it; and in both it will appear how far, or in what sence I affert that Christ died for all men.

1. I shall lay down my Reasons for it, and these are drawn 1. From

1: From the Will of God as the Fountain of Redemption.

2. From the Covenant of Grace as the Charter of it, and the Promises comprized therein.

3. From the Ministers Commission who publish it.

4. From certain bleffings which are the fruits of it.

5. From the Unbelief of men which is

6. From the fulness and glorious Redundance of Merit in Christ's Death which paid for it.

7. From the large and general Expressions in Scripture concerning the

i. I argue from the Will of God. God's Will of salvation as the fontal Cause thereof, and Christ's Death as the meritorious Cause thereof are of equal latitude; God's Will of Salvation doth not extend beyond Christ's Death; for then he should intend to save some extra Christum: Neither doth Christ's Death extend beyond God's Will of Salvation, for then he should die for some whom God would upon no terms save; but these two are exactly coextensive. Hence its observable, that when the Apostle Apostle speaks of Christ's Love to the Church, he speaks also of his giving himfelf for it, Eph. 5.25. and when he faith God wilt have all men to be faved, I Tim. 2.4. he faith withal, Christ gave himself a ransom for all, Ver. 6. Therefore there cannot be a truer Measure of the extent of Christ's Death, than God's Will of Salvation, out of which the same did iffue ; so far forth as that Will of Salvation extends to all men, fo far forth the Death of Christ doth extend to all men. Now then how far doth God will the Salvation of all? Surely thus far, that if they believe they shall be faved: No Divine can deny it, especially seeing Christ himself hath laid it down so positively, This is the will of him that fent me (faith he) that every one which feeth the Son and believeth on him may bave everlasting life, Job. 6. 40. Wherefore if God will the Salvation of all men thus far, that if they believe they shall be faved; then Christ died for all men thus far, that if they believe they shall be saved. But you'l say that Promise, Whosoever believes Shall be faved, is but Voluntas signi and not Voluntas beneplaciti, which is the adequate Measure of Christ's Death. Unto which I answer; If that Promise be Voluntas signi, what what doth it fignifie? What but God's Will? What Will but that good pleasure of his, that who soever believes shall be saved? How else is the Sign of the true God a true Sign? Whence is that universal connexion betwixt Faith & Salvation? Is it not a plain efflux or product from the Decree of God? Doth not that evidently import a Deeree, that whofoever believes shall be faved ? Surely it cannot be a falle Signswherefore fo far God's Will of Salvation extends to all men, and consequently so far Christ's Death extends to them.

2. Targue from the Covenant of Grace, and the Promifes comprized therein. Christ is the Mediatour of the Covenant, and the Covenant is the New-testament in his blood; Christ's Death doth not extend beyond the Covenant, for then there should be less in the Charter than in the Purchase; neither doth the Covenant extend beyond Christ's Death, for then there should be more in the Charter than in the Purchase: but both these run parallel in extent: Therefore fo far forth as the Covenant extends to all men, fo far forth the Death of Christ extends to all men. Now then for the extent of the Covenant; Are not those Promises [Whosoever believes shall be Saved ;

favedzibbosoever will, let him take of the mater of life freely] with the like, a part of the Covenant? and are they not extensive to all men? Both are as plain as if they were written with a Sun-beam: Wherefore fo far doth Christ's Death extend to all men, as the Covenant in any part thereof doth extend unto them. Moreover : these general Promises undeniably extend to all men, and in that extent are infallibly true; they are all faithful sayings, and words of truth, and their truth is fealed up by Christ's Blood ; wherefore as these Promises extend to all men, so the Death of Christ (in which they are founded) doth extend to all men. If Christ did no way die for all men, which way shall the truth of these general Promises be made out? Whosoever will may take the water of life. What, though Christ never bought it for him? Who foever believes fhall be faved. What, though there were no hútegy, no Price paid for him? Surely the Gospel knows no Water of Life but what Christ purchased, nor no way of Salvation but by a hureov, or Price paid. But you'l fay, that albeit Christ died not for all men, yet are those general Promises very true, and that because their truth is founded founded upon the Sufficiency of Christ's Death, which hath worth enough in it to redeem millions of Worlds. I answer, there is a double Sufficiency, Sufficientia muda confifting in the intrinsecal value of the thing, and Sufficientia ordinata confifting in the intentional paying and receiving that thing as a Price of Redemption; the first is that radical Sufficiency, whereby the thing may possibly become a Price; the fecond is that formal sufficiency, whereby the thing doth actually become a Price. Let a thing be of never so vast a value in it felf, 'tis no Price at all, unless it be paid for that end, and being paid, 'tis a Price for no more than those only for whom it was so paid; because the intrinsecal worth how great soever doth not constitute it a Price. Hence it is clear, that if Christ's Death (though of immense value) had been paid for none, it had been no Price at all; and if it were paid but for some, it was no Price for the rest for whom it was not paid. These things premised, if Christ no way died for all men, how can those Promises stand true? All men, if they believe, shall be saved; saved, but how? Shall they be faved by a horgon or Price of Redemption? there was none at all paid for them 5

them; the immense value of Christ's death doth not make it a Price as to them for whom he died not; or shall they be faved without a Núreov or Price? God's unfatisfied Justice cannot suffer it, his Minatory Law cannot bear it, neither doth the Gofpel know any fuch way of Salvation; take it either way, the truth of those Promises cannot be vindicated, unless we say, that Christ died for all men. But you'l yet reply, that albeit Christ died not for all, yet is the Promise true; because Christ's death is not only fufficient for all in it felf, but it was willed by God to be fo. I answer, God willed it to be fo, but how? Did he will that it should be paid for all men, and so be a sufficient Price for them? then Christ died for all men; or did he will that it should not be paid for all men, but only be sufficient for them in its intrinsecal value? then still it is no Price at all as to them, and confequently either they may be faved without a Price, which is contrary to the Current of the Gospel; or else they cannot be faved at all, which is contrary to the truth of the Promise. If it be yet further demanded, To what purpole is it to argue which way Reprobates shall be saved, seeing none of them ever did or will believe? Let the Apostle anfwer, What if Some did not believe ? Shall their unbelief make the faith of God of none effett ? God forbid ; yea, let God be true, but every man a liar, Rom. 3.3,4. And again, If we belive not, yet he abideth faithful and cannot deny himself, 2 Tim. 2. 13. No Reprobate ever did or will believe, yet the Promise must be true, and true antecedently to the Faith or Unbelief of men; true, because it is the Promise of God, and antecedently true, because else it could not be the Object of Faith. Wherefore I conclude that Christ died for all men fo far, as to found the truth of the general Promises, which extend to all men.

3. I argue from the Ministers Commission which is, Go, preach the Gospel to every creature; by virtue of this, they command all men every where to repent, and to induce them thereunto, they open a door of Hope to them, and to raise up that Hope, they set forth Jesus Christ evidently before their eyes, as if he were crucified among them, opening his bleeding Wounds, and through them shewing his naked Heart, and the inward bruises there made by Gods Wrath for man's Sin; they lift up their voices and cry, Come, O poor singless.

ners! come, for all things are ready, here's Christ and his redeeming Blood ready, here's an Act of free Grace & Pardon leat'd in that Blood, here's a Heaven of Reconciliation, and at the end thereof a Heaven of Glory open before you; Come, O come without delay ; Behold ! now is the accept ed time, the day of falvation, come, and your Sins shall be blotted out, come and your Souls thall live for ever; whileft it is ealled to day, we befeech you, be you reconciled unto God; why should your immortal Souls, saveable through Christ, be choaked with worldly Thorns, or inchant ed with base Lusts, or inhabited by unclean Devils? Turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die? And in all this, they befpeak not the Elect only, but others too; for their Commission reaches to every creature: neither do they utter their own humane Passions, but pursue their divine Commission; for in all their pathetical befeechings God himself beseeches, 2 Cor. 5. 28. in all their loud out-cries Wildom it felf cries out, Prov. 8. 1, 4. in all their carnell expoltulations, Christ himself stands at the door and knocks, Rev. 3. 20. in all their holy Doctrines the Kingdom of Heaven comes nigh unto men, Luk; to.11, and in all their invitations to the the Evangelical Feast made up of Christ's Flesh and Blood, which is meat indeed, and drink indeed, God himfelf invites, and bids men, eat and drink for his heart is with them. These things being fo, it necessarily follows that Christ died for all men; because the Oblation of Christ in the Gospel is founded on his Oblation on the Crofs, and the Ministery of Reconciliation is founded on the Mystery of it. Hence the Apostle joins both together; God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, and bath committed to us the word of reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5. 19. And in another place, Christ gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time, I Tim. 2.6. The word of Reconciliation is extensive to all therefore so is the work; the Price of Redemption may be testified to all, therefore it was paid for all, so far as to found that testimony of Jesus which is the spirit of Prophecy. But if Christ no way died for all men, how came the Ministers Commission to be so large? They command men to repent that their fins may be blotted out, but how can their fins be blotted out for whom Christ was not made sin? They beseech men to be reconciled to God, but how how thall they be reconciled for whom Christ paid no Price at all & They call and cry out to men to come to Christ that they may have life, but how can they have life for whom Christ was no Surety in his Death? If then Christ died for all men, the Ministery is a true Ministery as to all; but if Christ died only for the Elect, what is the Ministery as to the rest? Those Exhortations, which as to the Elect are real undissembled offers of Grace, as to the rest seem to be but golden Dreams and Shadows 4 those Calls, which as to the Elect are right Ministerial Acts, as to the rest appear as Extraministerial Blots and Errata's ; those Invitations to the Gospel-feast, which as to the Elect are the cordial wooings and befeethings of God himself, as to the rest look like the words of mere men speaking at random and without Commission: for alas! why should they come to that Feast for whom nothing is prepared? How should they eat and drink for whom the Lamb was never flain? Wherefore I conclude that Christ died for all mens fo far as to found the truth of the Ministery towards them.

by Christ's Death 5 one great Blessing is Salvation on Gospel Terms. Lapsed Angels must be damned, but Men, nay, all Men may be faved on Gospel-terms; there is nown ow the la, a common salvation to them; and O what a bleffing is this, especially to such as live under the Gospel! there is nothing stands between them and Heaven but their own Will, they will not come to Christ that they may have life : Oh! what would the damned Spirits in Hell give for fuch a door of Hope, as hath no other bar but what is in their own Hearts! how would they fweat and strive with tears and strong cries to enter in at it! A fecond Bleffing is the Patience of God. which waits upon Sinners, and by fome glimmerings of Mercy leads them to repenfance. A third Bleffing is the Dispensation of Gifts; even in the Wildernes of the Pagan-world there are Moral Vertues, and in the Eden of the Church there are even in those that perish, some touches of the holy Ghost, tastes of the heavenly Gift and feelings of the Powers of the World to come, and whence are these but from the Death of Christ? As David called the water of Bethlehem the blood of his Northies, fo may I call these Bleffings the blood of chaff. Wherefore Christ died to far far for all, as to procure some Blessings for

5. I argue from the Unbelief of Men, which is wonderfully aggravated in Scripture: through Jesus Christ there is a real offer of Grace made, but Unbelief receives it in vain, 2 Cor. 6. 1. great Salvation is prepared, beatinbelief negletts it, Heb. 2. 3. Eternal is promised, but Unbelief comes fort of it, Heb.4.1. the Kingdom of Heaven comes nigh to men, but Unbelief draws back from it, Heb. 10139. God himfelf bears witness that there is Life in his Son, even for all if they believe, but Unbelief faith No to it, and doth what it can to make him a liar, I fob. 5.10. Christ is fet forth before our eyes as the great Expiatory Sacrifice, and evidently fet forth as if he were crucified among us, his Blood runs fresh in the Veins of the Gospel, but Unbelief recrucifies the Son of God, Heb.6. 6.tramples his presious blood under foot, Heb. 10.29. and doth as it were nullifie his glorious Sacrifice; fo that as to final Unbelievers su eti anoldata suoia, there no more remaineth a sacrifice, Heb. 10.26. as to their Salvation, 'tis as if there were no Sacrifice at all for them : But if Christ died not for all men, how can these things be? How can can those men receive Grace in vain for whom it was never procured? or neglect Salvation for whom it was never prepared? How can they fall thort of eternal Rest for whom it was never purchased? or draw back from the Kingdom of Heaven which never approached unto them? How can there be life in Christ for the for whom he never died? and if not, which way doth their Unbelief give God the lye? How can they recrucifie the Son of God for whom he was never crucified? or trample on that precious Blood which was never shed for them? The Devils, as full of malice as they are against Christ, are never faid to do it, and why are men charged with it? I take it, because men have some share in him, and Devils none at all.

6. I argue from the Death of Christ, which hath a superexcellent Redundance of Merit in it, not only because of its intrinsecal value, but because of the divine Ordination; there are unsearchable riches in Christ, enough to pay all mens Debts; there are Pleonasms of Grace in him, in fem λεδιασε χίσις, Grace superabounded, saith the Apostle, I Tim. 1. 14. Salvation flows out from him actually upon all Believers, and by a glorious superessure.

it would run over upon all men if they did believe: As it was with the Widows litte Pot of Oil, 2 Kings 4. 6. the Oil did run till all the Vessels were full, and then it staid; the Widow called for another Vessel, and if she had had many more there, the Oil in the Pot would have filled them all; Even so (pardon the Comparison) it is with the immense Sea of Christ's Merits, it actually fills all the Vesfels of Faith, and then it stays as it were for want of Vessels; mean-while Christ calls and cries out for more, and if all men would come and bring their Vessels to him he would fill them all 3 doubtless if all men did believe, all would fee the Glory of God, all would have the Rivers of living water flowing in them, all would feel spiritual Miracles wrought in their Hearts, by that Christ who sits at the right hand of Power, and consequents ly all would find an experimental wirness in themselves that Christ died for them all.

7. I argue from the general and large Expressions in Scripture touching Christ and his Death; Christ died for all, 2 Cor. 5. 15. for every man, Heb. 2.9. he gave himfelf for the world, Job. 6. 51. for the whole world, 1 Joh. 2.2. he is stilled the Saviour of the morld, 1 Jah. 4, 14. and his Salvation is called a common Salvation, Jude Ver. 3. a Salvation prepared before the face of all people, Luk. 2.31. and flowing forth to the ends of the earth, Isai. 49. 6. the Gospel of this Salvation is to be preached to all nations, Matth. 28, 19. and to epery creature, Mark 16x15. there is reers ow The 105 grace bringing falvation to all men, Tit, 2, 11, a door of Hope open to them, because Christ gave himself a ransam for all, 1 Tim. 2.6. I know not what could be more emphatical to point out the Universality of Redemption? But you'l fay, all these general Exprestions da but denote genera singularums some of all forts, the World of the Elect, or the All of Believers. He boo de moio

In answer to which I shall only put two Queries.

I. If those general Expressions denote only the World of the Elect, or the All of Believers, why is it not said in Scripture, that God elected all and every man, the World and the whole World? in that sence tis as true that God elected them all, as it that Christ died for them all; why then doth the holy Spirit altogether forbear those general Expressions in the matter of Election, which it useth in the matter much unto us, that Redemption hathan larger Sphere than Election; and therefore the Scriptures contract. Election in words of Speciality only, whilest they open and dilate Redemption in emphatical Generalities.

2. If these general Expressions denote only the World of the Elector the Allof Believers, why doth the Scripture use fuch very different language in the fame thing? Sometimes Christ is called the faviour of the world, and fomerimes the faviour of the bedy; fometimes 'tis faid that Christ died on gave himself for all, or for the world, & some times it is faid that he died or gave him self for the Church or for his sheep. Whio can imagine that such words of universality, and fuch words of speciality should be of the same latitude? that one and the fame thing should be imported in both? Moreover, the Scripture doth make a fignal distinction; when it speaks of his give ing himself or dying for all, it fays only that he died for all or gave himself a Ranfom for all : But when it speaks of giving himfelf for his Church, it fays that be fan-Hified bimself that it might be sandified through the truth, Joh. 17. 19. and that he gave himself for it, that he might purific to himself a peculiar people, Tit. 2.14. and that be gave himself for it, that he might sandifie and cleanse it by the word, and present it to bimself a glorious Church without spot or wrinkle, Ephis, 25, 26, 27. Never in all the Scripture is it said that he gave himfelffor all, or for the World, that he might fanctifie, or cleanse it, or make it a peculiar People, or glorious Church, which yet might have been truly faid, if the All were no more than the All of Believers, or the World than the World of the Elect; wherefore to me it feems clear from those various Expressions and the observable distinctions in them, that the All for whom Christ died is larger than the All of Believers, and the World for whom Christ gave himself larger than the World of the

2. Having laid down my own Reasons, I procede to answer the Objections made

object. 1. If Christ died for all men, then all would believe, for Christ's Death procures all Graces, and in particular, Faith; seeing then all men have not Faith, either Christ did not die for them all, or else he loseth part of his Purchase.

I answer that Christ's Death is procurative of all Graces and particularly of Faith, fo far as it is a Price; and it is a Price fo far, as it was paid down by Christ and accepted by God for that purpole: for in a Price there must be both sufficientia nuda confifting in the intrinsecal value of the thing, and Sufficientia ordinata consisting in the intentional paying and receiving that thing as a Price. Now Christ's death was paid down by him and accepted by God as a Price with a double Refpect. As for all men it was paid and accepted as a Price, so far forth, as to procure for them a ground for their Faith, viz. that they might be faved on Gospelterms. And as for the Elect it was further paid and accepted as a Price; fo far as to procure the very Grace of Faith for them. Thus our Saviour Christ (who best knew both upon what Terms he paid down the price, and upon what Terms his Father received it) opens this mysterious Dispenfation ; I came down from beaven (faith he) not to do my own will but the will of him that Sent me, Job. 6.38. and what was that ? As to all men, 'twas that every one that feeth' the Son and believeth on him may have everlasting life, Ver. 40. and as to the Elect, 'twas

'twas that all these should by faith come unto him, Ver. 37. and never be lost, Ver. 39. Christ then died for all mens not so far forth as to procure the Grace of Faith, but so far forth as to procure Salvation on Gospel-terms for them; therefore, albeit all do not believe, it follows not either that Christ did not at all die for them, or that he loseth part of his Purchase. Christ's Death is procurative of Faith, not in reference to all, but to the Elect.

object. 2. If Christ died for all men, why is not the Gospel revealed to them? many Pagan Nations have no glimpse of a Christ.

without witness, no, not in the Pagan-world; the invisible Spirit renders himself visible in the Glass of the World, Rom. I. 20. and as it were palpable in the body of Nature; the very Heathens may see and seel him in every creature, Acts 17.27. nay, and in themselves too, for his Presence is not far off from them, & his candle burns within them, Prov. 20.27. & when by this Candle it appears, that there is Justice in God and Sin in them; yet that they may still seek after him, he lets out some glimmerings of mercy explacability towards them; the very standing of the World atters fomewhat of this. The Palmilt tells us of a line in the heaven, Pfal. 19.4. God in the Creation drew lines of Power and Wisdom over the Sphere of Nature, but Christ in Redemption ftruck a line of Mercy quite through it, and that legible even to the Heathers, forak much as they know to Sixelula to Des, the windidive justice of God, Rom. 1:32 and yet fee the World Standing, and not dashed down about the Sinners Ears's they know there is a diwine vengeance, Adr 28. 4. and yet they are not confumed; they fee Justice as it were winking, Ads 17.30. judgment sumbring, 2 Pet. 2.3. and infinite Patience and Long-suffering waiting and leading them to Repentance, Rom. 2. 4. they have some glimples of pardoning Mercy 5 where there is no pardoning mercy at all, there is no room for repentance: but the Patience of God is a kind of temporal pardon of the punishment, & that temporal pardon of the punishment points out that Mercy which can give an absolute pardon of the Sin, and the true duct and rendency of that Mercy is to lead men to Repentance; and if there were any man in the Pagan-world who did in truth repent and convert to God, I make no question at all, but that he

he should be saved, and probably not without the express knowledge of Christ indulged to him; for upon all that fear Gods Name will the Sun of rigteousness arise with healing under his wings, Mal. 4.2. Here then is aliquid Evangelii, though not the what may be deducted from Christ's death as universal: If Christ died for all men, it follows from thence that Christ may be preached to all, but it follows not from thence that Christ shall be preached to all; it follows that Christ may be preached to all, for he, who was offered for all on the Cross, may be offered to all in the Gospel; there is no Pagan in the World to whom Christ may not be offered. And if there were but one great Ear or Organ of Hearing common to all, how wouldChrist's Ministers always be filling it with Gospel? But it follows not that Christ shall be preached to all; for the Gospel is God's own, and he may do with his own as he pleaseth; and Christ who purchased for all the Being of the Gospel as far as the general Promiles go, yet purchased not for all the publication thereof. In a word; the Pagans have some glimmerings of Gospel, and may may be faved on Gospel-terms, which shews that Christ so far died for them; and that they have not the express knowledge of Christ, is a deep Abyss much fitter to be adored than dived into by us.

object. 3. If Christ died for all men, then he intercedes for all; but he intercedes only for the Elect, therefore he died for them only.

I answer that Christ doth in some fort intercede for all men; and this I shall clear feveral ways.

I. From the Nature of Christ's Intercession; that is not a formal Prayer, but an appearing in the Holy of Holies before the face of God as an Advocate, and there presenting his Blood and Righteousness their freshness and endless life of Merit, with a Will that all the Grace purchased thereby may be dispensed to the fons of men; therefore Christ even in Glory stands as is passios, as one sain. Rev. 5.6. Shewing his bleeding Wounds to make Intercession with God. Hence it follows, that his Intercession (being a kind of celestial Oblation) perfectly anfwers to his Oblation on the Cros; he is an Advocate above, so far as he was a Surety here below; his Blood speaks the very very lame things in Heaven as it did on Earth, and his Will stands in the same po-Rure towards Sinners there as here. Now, how far was Christ a Surety for all? Surely thus far, that all may be faved if they believe; else either they cannot be saved at all which is contrary to the truth of the Promise, or they may be saved without a Surety, which is contrary to the current of the Scriptures. But if he were fo far a Surety for all, then he is fo far an Advocate for all; for he appears an Advocate in Heaven for all those for whom he appeared as a Surety on the Cross. Hence the Apostle saith in general, If any man fin we have an advocate with the Father, t 30h.2.1. he saith not strictly, if the Elect fin, but at large, if any man fin, we have an advocate; and as the true ground-work of this general Advocation, he adds, he to the propitiation for the whole world, Ver. 2. So far forth as he was a Propitiation for the World, so far forth he is an Advocate for it. And another Apostle affirms that Christ Is a Mediator between God and men, I Tim: 2. 5. he faith not betwixt God and his Church, but betwixt God and men; and the following words give the true reason of it, Christ gave himself a ransom for all, Ver:

that Prayer, therefore he died not for them. Now here the consequence fails ; for what kind of Prayer was that, Job. 17? Twas a Prayer peculiarly fitted for Apoftles and Believers; a Prayer for their perfeverance in Faith, Ver. 11. for their perfection in Unity, Ver. 23. for their growth in Sanctification, Ver. 17. for their abode with him in Glory, Ver. 24. and in all respects a Prayer which could be congruously prayed for no other but Believers, Ver. 20: Now that Christ did not pray such a Prayer for all men as was only proper for Believers, doth not conclude, either that he did not at all pray for them, or that he did not at all die for them. Thus much in answer to the first Quere, Whether Christ died for all men? I pass on to the fecond.

Quere 2. Whether Christ died equally for all men? I answer, that albeit Christ died in some sort for all men, and, by virtue of his Death, all men (if Believers) should equally be saved; nevertheless Christ did not die equally for them all, but after a special manner for the Elect, above and beyond all others; and this I shall demonstrate by several Arguments drawn

r. From the Will of God.

2. From the Covenant of Grace.

3. From the Issue of Christ.

4. From the Working of the holy Spirit.

5. From the Bleffings purchased.

6. From the Intercellion of Christ.

7. From the Event following upon Christ's Death.

8. From the special Expressions in Scri-

1. I argue from the Will of God. Christ's Death is the meritorious Cause of Salvation, and respects men more or less proportionably as God's Will (which is the fontal Cause thereof) doth more or less respect them: God wills that all men should be faved if they believe, & proportionably Christ died for them all; God wills that the Elect should infallibly believe and be faved, and futably Christ died for them in a special way; there is a peculiarity in Christ's Redemption answering to the peculiarity of God's Love. God eternally resolved with himself that he would have a Church and a peculiar people, and Christ gave himself for it, that he might sandifie and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorions glorious Church without Spot or wrinkle, Eph. 5.25,26,27. He gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie to bimself a peculiar people zealous of good works, Tit. 2.14. If Christ had given himfelf thus far for all, all would have been his Church and People. You will fay, Unbelief is the only Obstacle. I answer, that if Christ had given himself for all, that he might wash them as he washes the Church, and redeem them from all iniquity as he redeems his peculiar ones, there would have been no such thing as Unbelief left among men; that Christ, who washes out every spot and wrinkle, would not have left Unbelief; that Chrift, who redeems from all iniquity, would not have left Unbelief, no, not in any one man's heart; nay, I may truly fay, he could not leave it there, because he could not lose his end, nor shed one drop of his Blood in vain. There are among men some chosen ones, such as are chosen out from among men, and chosen out of the World, Job. 15. 19. and Christ in his Death had a special eye upon these: Hence, proportionably to their Election, they are said to be redeemed from among men , Rev. 14. 4. and redeemed out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation.

nation, Rev. 5.9. Now how is it possible that all men thould be thus redeemed? Christ's Death as it respects all men, redeems them (as I may so say) from among Devils, for that it renders them capable of mercy which Devilsare not; but Christ's Death as it respects the Elect redeems them even from among men, for that it procures Faith for them, and thereby pulls them out of the unbelieving World; and what is peculiar Redemption if this be not? But you'l say these are said to be redeemed from among men, not because Christ specially died for them above others; but because these particularly applied his Death by Faith which others did not. I answer, that either this Application by Faith was merited by Christ's Death or not; if fo, then Christ redeemed them in a special manner, because by his Death he impetrated Faith for them, which he did not for all ; if not, then they were redeemed from among men by themfelves and their own free Will, and not by Christ and his Death, which (I tremble to think) puts the lye upon the Church triumphant, who fing the new Song to the Lamb in these words; Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kin-kindred tongue & people & nation, Rev. 5.9. How can that Blood of Christ, which merited alike for all men, redeem one man from another? How can it redeem some from among men, unless it merit for them that Faith which is the grand distinction between man and man in the matter of Salvation? Christ & LEHOMORTO, purchased the church with his blood, Ads 20.28. and purchased it in a special manner: hence have eis εποίνουν, a purchased people, is not a title common to all, but proper to the Church, 1 Pet. 2.9. God's Children lay fcattered up and down the wide World, and Christ died that he might gather them all together eig ev, into one, one Faith here and one Glory hereafter, Joh. 11. 52. If Christ had died so for all, all should have come into the same Unity. We find in Scripture many fignal distinctions made among men; there are some on whom God will have mercy, and others whom he will harden, Rom. 9. 18. some written in the Lambs book of life, and others left out of it, Rev. 13.8. Some given unto Christ, Joh. 6. 36.and others left to themselves; some are Gods own jewels, Mal.3.17. and others but as dross. Now how incredible is it that Jesus Christ (who came to do his Father's Will)

Will) should in his Death respect those whom God will harden, as much as those whom he will have mercy on; those that are out of the Book of Life, as much as those that are in it; those that are left to themselves, as much as those that are given to him, and those that are the dross of the World, as much as God's own Jewels? Believe it who can, 'tis a monstrous Opinion, worthy of nothing but exile from Christians: Seeing God's Will hath so distinguished men, it is no more possible that Christ should die alike for all, than that he should diffent from his Father's Will, which to do was his great errand in the World. Christ suffered between two Thieves, a Type of the Elect and Reprobate World; but who dare say that he had as much respect to the one as to the other?

2. I argue from the Covenant of Grace. Christ is the Mediator of the Covenant, and the Covenant is the New-testament in his blood; as then the Covenant is more or less respective of men, so the Mediator's Death is more or less respective of them. There are in the Covenant two sorts of Promises; the one general and conditional, such are those, Whosoever believes stall be saved, Whosoever will, may take of the water of life, If any man come to Christ he will not cast him out; the other special and absolute, such are those, I will circumcife thy heart to love me, I will put my fear in their hearts, I will take away the heart of stone and give an heart of slesh, I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, I will put my Laws in their mind and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God and they shall be to me a people; there is a vast difference between these Promises: For

1. The general and conditional Promises are as it were the hands of the Covenant, pointing out the true way and path leading to Salvation, but the special and absolute Promises are as it were the Veins of the Covenant, carrying in them the blood and spirit of life and power to enable us to walk in that way. Here God himself engages to work all saving Graces in us: Are our hearts hard? he'l roll away the stone from them; do our hearts refift holy impressions? he'l give us hearts of flesh capable thereof; are our hearts void of God's Law? he will write it there and turn them into the Epistles of Christ, and for the effectual doing hereof, he will put his Spirit into us, and as a real proof of it, he will cause us to walk in his ways }and in this Walk Love shall be the Motive. for he will circumcife the heart to love him, and Fear the Bridle, for he will put his Fear in the heart never to depart from bim; and, which is the Crown of all, he himself will be a God to us, and we shall be a people to him in an everlasting Covenant. Stand Still O Saints! and adore; here, loe, here is the ministration of the Spirit indeed, 2 Cor. 3. 8. here are words which are spirit and life, Joh. 6.63. here is the supernal ferusalem the mother of spiritual freedom, Gal. 4. 26. here is the immortal feed which begets all the Sons of God, I Pet. 1.22. here is that Vis πλασική, or formative Virtue which moulds us into the divine nature: 2 Pct. 1. 4. here is the day of God's power, which makes his people willing to serve bist in the beauties of holiness, Pfal. 110. 3. Happy, yea thrice happy they, who dwell in this Land of Promise and drink of these Wells of Salvation.

2. The general and conditional Promifes are extensive to all men, but the special and absolute Promises respect the Elect and them only, for they are fulfilled in them, and them only; had these extended to all, that God (who cannot lye, nor deny deny himself) would have fulfilled them in all. You will fay, He would have fulfilled them in all, but that men themselves will not: But what a strange word is this [they will not]? Will they not, if God. give them a Will, a new heart and a new (pirit ? Will they not, if God take away the nilling and relifting Principle, the beart of Stone? Will they not, if God write his Laws in their hearts and inward parts? O what is this, but by an abfurd Blasphemy to change God's Truth into a lye, his Omnipotence into weakness, and his Glory into the old broken Idol of Creature-freedom? Surely if God (who is Truth and Power) engage to make a new Heart, the old one cannot hinder it; if he promise to remove Hardness, Hardness cannot resist it; if he say that he will write the Law in the Heart, the Heart will not fay Nay to his Almighty Fingers. Seeing then these Promises are not fulfilled in all but in the Elect only, I may fafely affirm that they respect not all but the Elect only. These things being fo, it appears how & in what manner Christ's Death respects men, even more or less, as the Promises of the Covenant founded on his Blood do more or less respect them: As the general Promises extend to all men, men, fo the Death of Christ the Mediator proportionably extends to them all; and as the special Promises point only at the Elect, so the Death of Christ the Mediator hath a peculiar respect to them. Christ by his Death (over and besides the general Promises) founded those special Promises for the Elect; hence they come to be viewa imayfelias, sons of promise, Gal.4.28. begotten by it to spiritual life, which others, standing only under the general Promises, are not. All the saving Graces of the Elect futing to those special Promises are no other than the fruits of Christ's Merits; they are renewed with the renewings of the holy Ghost, but that is shed on them through Jesus Christ; they have the Law written in their hearts, but that is the Epistle of Christ; their filthy flesh is cut off from their hearts, that they may love God who is a pure Spirit, but this is the circumcision of Christ, Col. 2.11. In a word, all the faving Graces of the Elect are as so many Legacies of the New-testament, and the New-testament is sounded in his Blood: Wherefore it is clear from the Covenant of Grace and its special respect to the Elect, that Christ died in a special and peculiar manner for them. 3. I

3. I argue from the Issue of Christ; Christ was to have a Seed, and this I shall demonstrate three ways.

1. From the Preciousness of his Blood.

2. From the Purpole of his Father.

3. From the Promise of his Father.

1. From the Preciousness of his Blood. That there should be a Laver made of God's Blood, and never a Sinner washed in it, that fuch a valt fum of precious Merits should be paid down, and never a Captive released by it, is to me no less than prodigious Blasphemy; every little Grain in Nature doth confute it; if that do but fall into the ground and die, it bringeth forth much fruit, and shall the Son of God bleed and die in his affumed Flesh and be fruitles? God in his waky Providence gives to every little Seed his own body, and shall the peerless Flower of Heaven fow his Blood and Righteousness and have none at all? A Cup of cold water given in Charity (hall in no wise lose its reward, and ean it be so with the Blood of Christ poured out in a transcendent excess of Love, and glorified in-to an infinite Merit by his Deity? When Christ fed the multitude but with Barleyloaves & fmall Fishes, nothing was lost, and can can all be lost when he makes a Feast of spiritual Marrow and Fatness, and gives his Flesh to be meat indeed and his Blood to be drink indeed? Oh! far be the thought from every Christian

2. From the Father's purpose, which (as the Scriptures hold forth) clearly was, that his Son should be a King, a Captain, a Shepherd, an Husband, an Head and a Father: And what is a King without Subjects, a Captain without Souldiers, a Shepherd without a Flock, an Husband without a Spouse, an Head without a Body, and a Father without Posterity? Empty Names are below him whose name is above every name. Wherefore this King must have a Sion a mountain of baliness to reign in, Psal. 2.6. this Captain a Militia, an army with banners to fight under bim, Cant. 6. 4. this Shepherd a flock to hear his voice and follow him, Job. 10.4. this Hufband a spouse, a Queen in Gold of Ophir maried to him, Pfal. 45. 9. this Head a body to be animated with his Spirit and filled with his life, Col. 1.18. and this Father a numerous isue, begotten and brought forth into the spiritual World to honour and serve him, Heb. 2.13.

3. From the Father's Promile, which was in terminis, That he should have a feed, Isai.53.10. a Seed begotten by his Spirit, and by that Generation bearing his Image, and in that Image serving of him; and to make it sure, God engages by special Promiles to take away the stony Heart, to write the Law there, to put his holy Spirit into them, and so infallibly to raise up a feed to him; and for the continuance of this Seed fuccessively, 100 13 filiabitur nomen ejus, his name shall be sonned or childed from generation to generation, Pfal. 72.17. The special Promises shall be ever budding and bloffoming and bringing forth the fruits of Grace; thus Christ shall fee of the travel of his soul and be satisfied, Isai. 53. breaks out, Behold I and the Children which God hath given me, Heb. 2. 13. Should he miss but one of his Seed or Children, his Heart would not rest or be satisfied ; for they are in a peculiar manner the travel of his Soul.

But now if Christ died alike or equally for all, what becomes of his precious Blood? How can the Purpose and Promise of God stand? Which way shall Christ have a Seed? Shall his Seed be begotten out of Man's Will? No such Generation ever was there, Joh. 1.13. 'Tis not of him that willeth, Rom. 9. 16. Nothing less than the holy Spirit, which formed Christ in the Womb, can form him in the Heart: but shall they be begotten by the holy Spirit? That Spirit doth nothing in the work of Regeneration but what Christ merited in his Passion; every new Creature which is efficiently begotten by the Spirit, was first meritoriously begotten by the Death of Christ, or else it would not be the Seed of Christ, at least not the travel of his Soul. Now Christ did not travel or merit for all men that they should be begotten again by the holy Ghoft; for then either all would be so begotten, which Experience denies, or elfe the Merit and Travel of Christ must be loft, which the preciousness thereof abhorrs: And if Christ did not merit it for all, then neither did he (if he died alike for all) merit it for any, and how then shall he have a Seed? His Seed must be begotten by the Spirit, and the Spirit begets no new Creatures but what Christ merited, and Christ dying equally for all did not merit such a thing for any, because not for all. Moreover; when God promifed Christ a Seed, either the meaning of that

that Promise was, that some men should become his Seed, or that all should be so; if that some, then Christ died not equally for all; if that all, then all must be begotten by the Spirit, and renewed after Christ's Image, the Stone must be cut out of every heart, and the Law written there; for in these things is the very spirit and life of Regeneration: But seeing these things are not wrought in all, it appears, that the promised Seed is not all, but some, for whom Christ merited the very work of Regeneration.

4. I argue from the Working of the holy Spirit. As the holy Spirit eternally procedes from the Father and the Son in his personal Subfiltence, so he goes forth in time from the Father and the Son in his working in Men. Hence he is called the Spirit of the Father, and the Spirit of the Son, the Father Sends him, and the Son fends bim ; and as the holy Spirit works in Men from the Father and the Son, To he works in them more or less, as the Love of the Father and the Merits of the Son do more or less respect them. The Father doth in some fort love, and the Son did in some fore die for all men. Hence the holy Spirit hath some workings in the Non336 Of the Work of Redemption, elect. Within the Church many of them tafte the Powers of the World to come ; nay, in the Pagan-world the holy Spirit drops some moral Vertues and Beams of light, from whence have iffued many excellent Sayings, some of which the holy Spirit hath fo far owned as to quote them in his own Book: But the Father doth in a fpecial manner love, and the Son did in a special manner die for the Elect. Hence proportionably the holy Spirit works in them after more glorious strains of Power and Grace; as a Spirit of Grace and Supplication he melts them into Repentance; as a Spirit of Faith he makes them catch hold upon Christ for Righteousness and Life; as a Spirit of Wisdom he unveils their hearts, and makes the Light to thine out of Darkness; as a Spirit of Liberty he unshackles and unbinds their Wills, and makes them free indeed in the ways of God, and as a Spirit of Truth and Holiness he leads them into Truth, and by inward Law-engravings moulds and changes them into it. Moreover, the holy Spirit, after fuch glorious workings on them, comes and dwells in them, and that intimately in the very fecrets of their hearts, evountous és outrois, I will indwel in them, faith.

Ver. 6. he is no less a Mediator for all than he was a Ransom for all. Christ's Blood shed on the Cross spake thus far for all men that they might have their pardon on Gofpel-terms; and afterwards being carried to Heaven it speaks the very same language for them; for the voice or speech of that Blood is its Merit, and that Merit is of an indeficient virtue. Hence that Blood cannot be speechless, because it cannot be meritles; and so far on Earth as it merited for all, so far in Heaven it speaks and intercedes for all. Moreover, as Christ's Blood speaks the same things for them in Heaven, as it did on Earth, fo Christ's Will in Heaven stands in the same posture towards them as it did on Earth; wherefore in a fort he intercedes for all.

2. From the Patience of God which waits on men, even such as at last perish. If Christ did not stand with the Incense of his sweet-smelling Merits between the living and the dead, between the reprieved Sinners on Earth and the damned Spirits in Hell, the Patience of God would not wait one moment upon them:

3. From the working of God's Spirit; for as Christ is our Paraclete or Advocate in heaven, 1 Job. 2.1. so the holy Spirit is God's ly if the Advocate on earth, Job. 16.7. Surely if the Advocate in Heaven spake nothing for the Non-lect, the Advocate on Earth would not wooe them to salvation; if the Blood of Christ did not at all plead for them, the Spirit of Christ would give no touches at all upon them, much less such touches as to make them taste the powers of the World to come.

4. From the liberty of Prayer. Simon Magus (even whilest in the gall of bitternes) was commanded to pray, Acts 8. 22. but, what without a Mediator? No furely, that finful man, who hath no Mediator in Heaven, must not presume to pray on Earth. I fee no reason why a man merely mediatorless should have more lieve to pray than a Devil, who is therefore without hope because without a Mediator. The Apostle commands men to pray every where, 1 Tim. 2.8. but a little before he lays down this as the ground-work, there is one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus who gave himself a ransom for all, Ver. 5 and 6. The Mediation of Christ opens the door to Prayer.

Wherefore as to this Objection I answer thus; Christ intercedes for all men in such fort as hedied for them; I say in such fort, for there is a valt difference between his general Intercession for all, and his special Intercession for the Elect: For as Christ by his Blood shed on the Cross merited for all in general that they might be faved on Gospel-terms, and merited for the Elect in special that they should believe and be faved; so by the same blood pre-Sented in Heaven he intercedes for all that they may be faved on Gospel-terms, and intercedes for the Elect that they may believe and be faved. And thus he is the complete Mediator of the Covenant; as the general Promises extend to all, so anfwerably he intercedes for all; and as the special Promises point only at the Elect, so proportionably he intercedes for the Elect.

object. 4. If Christ died for all men, then he was a Surety for all and satisfied for the sins of all, and consequently God hath a double Satisfaction; one in Christ the Surety, and another in the persons of the Damned, which is against the nature

In this Argument are two consequences to be weighed.

1. If Christ died for all, then he was a Surety for all & farisfied for the fins of all.

2. If Christ so satisfied for the sins of all,

then God hath a double Satisfaction, which is against Justice.

As to the first consequence I admit it as a very Truth, that Christ was a Surety for all, and satisfied for the sins of all; for if all did believe and repent, the sins of all should be remitted, and remitted they could not be without a Surety, and a Surety making Satisfaction; therefore such a Surety was Christ for them all.

As to the second consequence, If Christ satisfied for the sins of all, then God hath a double Satisfaction, and that is against Justice. I shall first premise some distinctions and then answer.

1. I shall premise three distinctions.

r. Either the first Satisfaction was made to the Creditor or Law-giver by the Debtor or Offender himself, or else it was made by a Surety; if it was made by himself, Justice forbids a second Satisfaction.

2. The first Satisfaction being made by a Surety, was either made by a Surety of the Debtors or Offenders own procuring, or else by a Surety procured by the Creditor or Law-giver; if it was made by a Surety procured by the Debtor or Offender himself, Justice forbids a second Satisfaction; for its all one as if he had satisfied by himself.

3. When

3. When a Surety provided by the Creditor or Law-giver makes the first Satisfaction, either he makes Satisfaction in fuch fort, as that the Debtor or Offender shall be thereby immediately, ipso facto, without any more ado discharged, or else he makes Satisfaction in such fort, as that the Debtor or Offender shall be thereby discharged, but upon the performance of some Conditions and not otherwise; if the Surety make Satisfaction in the former way, still Justice forbids a second Satisfaction; but if he make Satisfaction in the latter way, then upon the final non-performance of those Conditions, Justice may admit a second Satisfaction. I will illustrate this by two instances: Suppose a man indebted to another in 1000. 1, the Creditor procures his Son to lay down the mony in fatisfaction of the Debt, but withal it is agreed between them, that the Debtor shall be discharged from his Debt, if he affent to this payment and not otherwise; if then the Debtor diffent, the Creditor may justly demand of him a second Satisfaction. Again ; suppose multitudes of attainted Traitors be thut up in Prison, and the King procures his Son to suffer punishment in their stead, but withal the X 3 King

King and his Son proclame it as a Law, that none of the Traitors shall be thereby abfolved, unless such as honour and do Homage unto them; if any Traitor refuse to do it, the King may justly exact a second Satisfaction: and the reason of both is this, because the Debtor or Traitor not performing the Conditions can have no benefit by the first Satisfaction, and therefore must be subject to a second, as if there had

2. These distinctions premised, I anfwer, Mens Sins are Debts and Rebellions, and satisfaction for them is due to God as the great Creditor and Law-giver; but this Satisfaction was not made by men themselves, but by Jesus Christ as their Surety, and this Surety was not procured by men, but provided by God himself; and being provided by God, he did not pay down his fatisfactory Blood in such fort, as that men should be thereby immediately, ipso facto, absolved from their Debts and Rebellions, but in such fort, as that men may be acquitted from their Debts and Rebellions if they repent and believe: wherefore if they do neither, they can have no benefit by Christ's Satisfaction, and by consequence a second Satisfaction tisfaction may be justly exacted from them.

Now for the more distinct clearing of this momentous Objection I shall propose Four things.

1. God out of mere Grace procured Christ to be a Surety for men; and therefore it was in his power to prescribe the Conditions, upon the performance or non-performance whereof men should have or not have benefit by Christ's Satisfaction.

2. According to this power, God hath plainly set down the Conditions in the Gospel, viz. He that believes shall be saved, and he that believes not shall be condemned.

3. These Conditions being thus set down by God himself, no man falling short of them, can have benefit by Christ's Satisfaction: If men will not receive the attenement, Rom. 5. 11. how can they be at peace? If they will not receive remission of sins, Acts 10. 43. how can they be pardoned? We are all in a worse Dungeon than feremy's, and if we will not put the cords of Grace under our Arms, we cannot get out; we are all servants of Sin, and if we say to it, We love thee, and will not go out free, we must be bored for eternal Slaves. Christ hath opened the X 4

Fountain of his Blood, but we must wash in it, Zach. 13.1. Christ hath made a purchase of Souls, but we must believe es Deποίησιν ψυχής, to the purchasing of the foul, Heb. 10. 39. not that Faith is part of the Purchase-money, but that it is the Condition of the Gospel, without which the glorious Purchase of Christ profits not ; if men live and die in Unbelief, εκ έτι αποhelmelai Suoia, there remaineth no more facrifice for them, Heb. 10.26. Indeed Christ offered a Sacrifice for them, but sh ett, the benefit of that Sacrifice doth no more remain unto them; upon their final Unbelief they have no more benefit by it than if there had been none at all for them: In which sence I understand that of the Father, Si non credis, non tibi descendit, non tibi passys est Christus.

4. If final Unbelievers can have no benefit by Christ's Satisfaction, then God may justly require a second Satisfaction of them, because they cannot plead the first; and so 'tis in Law as to them as if there had been no first at all. Shimei had a pardon from Solomon, but passing over Kidron lost it; and therefore (notwithstanding the same) was justly put to death for his offence: Jesus Christ as a Surety made Satisfaction for men, but they through their final Unbelief lose the benefit of it; and therefore (notwithstanding the same) God may justly require a second Satisfaction from them. If shimei had pleaded his pardon, solomon would have told him, that's nothing to thee ever since thou didst pass over Kidron; and if Unbelievers should plead Christ's Satisfaction, God would tell them, that's nothing to you, seeing you have lived and died in Unbelief.

object. 5. Millions of men in the World reject Christ, and drop into Hell, and God eternally foresaw that it would be so; if then Christ died for these, there seems to be a blot upon the divine Wisdom, a failure in his efficacious Will, and a loss in the precious Purchase made by Christ.

I answer; Tis true that God eternally foresaw those Rejecters of Christ, and that Christ in time died for them, nevertheless there is no blot hereby cast on the divine Wisdom; its no disparagement to the All-wise God to bestow Means of Eternal Bliss on such as he eternally foresaw would abuse the same to their own destruction: Oh! what rare Perfections did he set up in the Angels, and yet he eternally foresaw a great part of them apostatizing and dropping dropping to Hell; What an excellent Image of Holiness did he stamp upon Adam? and yet he eternally forelaw him falling, and breaking all his Glory by the the Fall; what waitings of Patience, wooings of the Gospel and touches of the holy Spirit doth he dispense to such men as he eternally forefaw would abuse all these? and yet in all this God's Wisdom fuffers not. The very same I may fay of Christ's dying for fuch as abuse this great bleffing; neither is there here any failing in the efficacious Will of God, for he wills that the Elect shall believe and be saved, and he wills that the rest shall be saved if they believe, and both these Wills are accomplished, the first in the Event of Faith and Salvation, and the latter in the Connexion between Faith and Salvation, even as to all men. God may be said to will the Salvation of men through Christ's Death two ways; either because he wills that Christ's Death should be a Price infallibly procuring their Faith and Salvation or elfe because he wills that there should be in Christ's Death an aptness and sufficiency to fave them on Gospel-terms: the former Will points only at the Elect, and is fulfilled in their Grace and Glory; the latter latter extends to all men, and is fulfilled in the aptness and sufficiency of Christ's Death to fave them on Gospel-terms ; in both God's Will hath its effect. Neither lastly is there any los in Christ's purchase, for what did he purchase? As for the Elect, he purchased Faith and Salvation, and as for the rest, he purchased Salvation on Gospel-terms, in both he hath what he paid for; for the Elect believe and are faved, and the rest may be saved if they believe : therefore when men by their Unbelief barr themselves of the benefit of Christ's Death, and make him in that respect cry out, I have laboured in vain, yet he adds, surely my judgment is with the Lord, Isai. 49.4. as if he had said, For all this never a drop of my Blood is irrationally shed, for God (with whom my judgment is) knows, that I purchased Salvation for them on Gospel-terms, although they by their Unbelief deprive themselves of the benefit of the Purchase. If final Unbelievers should be faved, Christ should have more than his Purchase, but if they are not faved, he hath no less; for he purchased Salvation for them on Gospel-terms which they do not perform through their own voluntary Unbelief.

then he loves all with the greatest degree of Love; for greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends, Joh. 15.13. and this must needs be the greatest degree of love, because it draws all other things after it; If God gave his own Son for us, how shall he not with him freely give us all things, Rom. 8. 32? But Christ doth not love all with the greatest degree of love, neither doth God give all things to them; therefore Christ did not die for all.

I confess that Christ doth not love all men with the greatest degree of love, neither dothGod bestow all blessings on them: wherefore we must examine these places from whence these Inferences are made. As for the first place, greater love bath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends, it doth import one of these two things; either it doth import, that he that dieth for his friends hath the greatest degree or height of internal love towards them, or else it imports, that a mans death for his friends is the greatest external effect and proof of his love: the first cannot be the meaning of the place 3 for if it be the greatest and most intense degree of love to die for our friends, what is it to die for our enemies as Christ did? If it be the height and top of love to lay down our lives, how can that be done without any love at all as the Apostle supposeth, I Cor. 13. 3? The Apostle commands us to lay down our lives for the brethren, I Joh. 3.16. but when a man doth it, he is not to have the same degree of love towards all the Brethren; for he is to love those most in whom there is most of God. and to whom he is nearest in Nature. Jefus Christalaid down his life for all the Elect, yet without doubt his love was greater to his Apostles than to ordinary Christians; nay, and among the Apostles, there was one dearly beloved, one who lay in his bosom, Joh. 13. 23. Wherefore the meaning of the words is not, that he that dieth for his friends hath the greatest degree or height of internal love towards them, but that such a death is the greatest effect and proof of his love. Christ in the 12. Verse exhorted his Disciples to love one another, and in this 13. Verse he shews what is the greatest outward evidence of love, viz. to die for our friends. Now albeit Christ died for all men, and that Death was a great and high proof of his

his Love, nothing hinders but that Christ. over and befides his common Philanthropy to all, may bear a special affection to the Elect; the Universality of his Death infers not a Parity in his Love. If Jacob had died for all his Sons, yet he might have loved Joseph and Benjamin above the rest, and left them fome special Legacies : If Christ died for all men, yet he may and doth love his Elect above others, and leave fome fecret Love-tokens upon their hearts. As for the second place, If God delivered up his Son for us, how shall be not with him freely give us all things, Rom. 8.32. the Key to unlock this Text is the word[U13] Who are the Us in the Text? Who but the Elect of God? Ver. 33. who according to Ele-Ction are effectually called, Ver. 28. and upon their Callings are justified and glorified, Ver. 30? These are the Us in the Text 5 wherefore the plain meaning of it is, not that if God gave his Son for all men, he would give them all things, but that if God gave his Son for the Elect, he would give them all things, viz. all things necessary to Salvation; the Text extends not to all men. But you'l fay, though the Text extend not to all men, yet the Argument doth: for if the Argument be good, good, that if God gave his Son for the Elect, he would give them all things; then the Argument is as good, that if God gave his Son for all men, he would give them all things. I answer, that if God's Intention and Love in giving his Son for all were one and the fame towards all, the consequence were undeniable; bue feeing God in giving his Son, had towards the Elect a special Love and Intention to bestow Grace and Glory on them, and towards the reft but a common Philauthropy and Ordination that they might be faved on Gospel-terms, hence it is clear, that albeit the giving of all things to the Elect may be inferred from his giving his Son for them, yet the giving of all things to all men cannot be inferred from his giving his Son for them all; because in that gift there was not the fame Love and Intention towards all: Wherefore I conclude that Christ died for all, and yet neitherare all loved with the greatest degree of love, nor yet are all bleffings conferred upon them.

Object. 7. If Christ would not pray for all men, then he died not for all; but Christ would not pray for all, for he faith, I pray for them, I pray not for the world, fob.

Anfw. This Argument must be formed one of these two ways; either thus, If Christ prayed not at all for the Non-elect, then he did not at all die for them; but he prayed not at all for them, Ergo, he died not for them. Now here I must deny the Minor; for even upon the Cross he prayed for his Crucifiers, Father forgive them, Luk. 23.34. not that he would have them forgiven though final Impenitents and Unbelievers, for that would have been against his Father's purpose and his own purchase, but that he would have them forgiven if they did believe and repent, which was congruous to both. But suppose there had been no vocal Prayer of Christ for them, yet furely there was a mental one; for he could not but defire of God to have all the fruits of his Passion, amongst which one was, that all men might be faved on Gospel-terms; that grand Gospel-axiom [who foever believes shall be faved] was no doubt one of his delires, for it cost his precious Blood; wherefore the Non-elect were not totally excluded from his Prayers. Or else the Argument must be formed thus, If Christ prayed not for the non-elect in that famous Prayer, Joh. 17. then he did not die for them; but he prayed not for them in that faith he. 2 Cor. 6. 16. there are two [in's] to denote an intimate inhabitation, as if God could never be near enough to them: As in Christ Personal, who is the Head, there is God in the flesh by an hypostatical Union; so in Christ Mystical, which is the Body, there is God in the Flesh by a gracious Inhabitation; and to thew that he is there, he cries Abba Father in their Devotions; he is a Spirit of Love in their charities, a Spirit of Power in their infirmities, a Spirit of Comfort in their diftreffes, and a Spirit of Glory in their fufferings. Seeing then the holy Spirit(who works in men more or less according to the Fathers Love and Sons Merits) works in such a special way in the Elect, 'tis as clear as if it were written with a Sunbeam, that the Father loves them and the Son died for them in a special way. Hence we find these three folded and wrapt up together by the Apostle, Elect according to the foreknowledge of the Father, through Santification of the Spirit, and Sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ, I Pet. 1.2. And again, The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the holy Ghoft be with you all, 2 Cor. 13.14, the Father's Love and the Son's Blood had respect-respected all men as much as the Elect, doubtless the holy Spirit (who in Subfistence procedes and in Operations works from them both) would have converted all as well as the Elect; why then are not all men actually converted? Is it because the holy Spirit works not equally in all, or because the holy Spirit is resisted in fome? Is it because the holy Spirit works not equally in all? I answer, That the Spirit is sent forth from the Father and the Son, and works exactly according as it is fent; the inward impulsive Cause of pouring out the Spirit is the Father's Love, and the outward meritorious cause of it is the Son's Blood: Wherefore if the Father equally love all, and the Son equally died for all, the Spirit works equally in all; for there can be no breach in the facred Trinity. Or is it because the Spirit is refisted in some? Ianswer; Their refistance is a grand Obstacle to the work, but if the Spirit did roll away the Stone, and new-mould the Heart, and work the Will in all, as he doth in the Elect, that Obstacle would at last be removed out of the way.

5. I argue from the Blessings purchased. Christ's Death is more or less respective of men, as it is more or less procurative of Blessings

Bleflings for them : Christ purchased a Salt vability for all, but over and befides be purchased many choice Bleslings for the Elect, he purchased Repentance for thems for he is a prince and a faviour to give repentance to Irael, Acts 5.21. He purchased a room for Repentance even for all men; but he purchased Repentance it self for his chosen Israel; he purchased Faith for them, Unto you it is given for Christs fake to believe in him, Phil. 1.29. For others he purchased a ground-work for Faith, but for them he purchased the very Grace of Faith; he purchased effectual Vocation for them: others have a Call by the Gofpel, but these have a Call by the Gospel coming in power, and in the holy Ghost, and in much assurance; he purchased Holiness and Sanctification for them. Indeed there is no man living on the Earth, but (if he did really believe) he should have the rivers of living water, the Spirit of holiness flowing in his beart, Joh. 7. 38. but the Elect were destined and chosen in Christ to be holy, Eph. 1.4. and Christ sanctified himfelf in a special manner for them, that they might be fanttified er annea, in truth, actually & truly, Job. 17.19. Lastly, he purchased Heaven and Glory for them ; others may have have Heaven upon believing, but these shall certainly arrive at it, these are the sheep, to which Christ gives eternal life, Joh. 10.28. these are the sons, which without failshall be brought to Glory, Heb. 2.10. Now seeing Christ purchased so many Blessings for the Elect, 'tis evident he died for them in a special way.

6.I argue from the Intercession of Christ. Christ intercedes for men more or less proportionably as he more or less respected them in his Death, for his Death is the foundation of his Intercession; the very fame Blood of Christ, which as shed on Earth made Satisfaction, as presented in Heaven makes Intercession. Now how far doth Christ intercede in Heaven? What doth his Blood speak there? For all men it speaks thus, Father, let them all be faved on Gospel-terms; but for the Elect it speaks thus, Father, let them have Repentance; this the Apostle hints out, Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a prince & a saviour to give repentance to Ifrael, Acts 5.21. Israels Repentance on Earth comes from Christ exalted in Heaven; for there he intercedes for it by his Merits, and from thence he works it by his Spirit. Again it speaks for them thus, Father, let them them be made a willing people; this I gather from the 110. Pfalm, where we find Christ sitting at the right hand of God, Ver. 1. and fitting there he intercedes for us, and from this Seifion and Interceifion comes forth a milling people, Ver. 3. Here's the true original of spiritual willingness; the right Hand of God (which is a right Hand of Power) works it in our Hearts, and works it at the instance of Christ, who fits and intercedes there for it. Again, it speaks for them thus, Father, sanctifie them with thy Grace, preserve them with thy Power, and crown them with thy Glory in Heaven. Thus Christ in his sweet Prayer a little before his bitter Passion, interceded for them for their Sanctification, Sandifie them through thy truth, Job. 17.17. for their Perseverance, Keep them through thine own name, Ver. 11. and for their Glory, I will that they be with me where I am to behold my glory, Ver. 24. And what he spake for them by his oral Intercession on Earth, that he speaks for them by his real Intercesfion in Heaven. Thus Christ doth in a special manner intercede for the Elect, which proves that he died for them in a special manner; because his Intercession is but the presenting of the Merits of his Death

Death to his Father in Heaven.

7. I argue from the Event following upon Christ's Death; some men do believe, when others draw back, and whence comes this distinguishing Faith? either it comes merely of Man's Free-will, or of God's free Grace; if we fay the first, 'tis the very mire and dirt of Pelagianism, 'tis to fet up Free-will as an Idol to cast lots upon Christ's Blood, whether any one person in the World shall be faved thereby or not: If we fay the latter, then God and Christ had a special eye upon some above others; for God ordained, that Christ should be the grand Medium to Salvation, and that Faith should be the only way to Christ: If then he gave Christ for all, and Faith but to some, it is because he did in a special way intend their Salvation, and confequently Christ (who came to do his Fathers Will) had in his Death a special respect to them.

8. I argue from the special Expressions in Scripture: As the Death of Christ is set out there in words of universality, so it is set out there in words of special peculiarity: Christ died for the elect, Rom. 8.33,34. died for the children of God scattered abroad, Joh. 11. 52. gave himself for the Church,

Eph.

Eph. 5.25. gave himself for a peculiar peo-ple, Tit. 2.14. laid down his life for the sheep, Joh. 10. 15. sanctified himself for the given ones, Joh. 17.9. and 19. purchased the church with his own blood, Acts 20. 28. redeemed a people from among men, Rev. 14.4. is a fefus to his own people, Matth. 1.21. and a faviour to his own body, Eph. 5. 23. And is there no Emphasis of Love & Are there no strains of free Grace? Is there no import of fingular respect and affection in all these Expresfions? We cannot say so without dispiriting the Scripture: Experience it felf tells us, that all are not Christ's Elect, Children, Church, peculiar People, Sheep, given Ones, Body, & redeemed Ones from among mens wherefore when the Scripture faith that he died for these, it imports that he died for them in a peculiar manner. But you'l fay, These Scriptures speak rather of the Application of Christ's Death, than the Impetration; and though the Impetration be equally for all, yet the Application is proper to Believers only. I answer, that if those Phrases, of dying for the elect or children of God, giving himself for a church or peculiar People, laying down his life for his sheep, purchasing the Church with his blood, and fan-Hifzing himself for the given ones, do not import import Impetration, I know not what can import it. You will reply, that thefe Expressions import not Impetration as it is barely and nakedly in it felf, but as it hath Application following upon it, and this is the Emphasis of them: But if these Expressions import Impetration with Application following upon it, whether doth that Application follow upon Impetration as a fruit thereof or not; if fo, then Christ merited that Application for the Elect, and consequently died in a special manner for them; if not then there is no Emphalis of special Love & Grace in all those expressions of his dying giving himself, san Hifying bimself and laying down his life for them: for there was no Merit in all this to procure the Application of his Death unto them. But let us further enquire, what these Elect Children, Church, peculiar People, Sheep, given ones and redeemed ones from among men were before or without the Purchase made by Christ; were these Elect called and justified without Christ or not? If fo, why did he die for them? If not, then he died for them that they might be so called and justified. Were these children meritoriously begotten by Christ's Blood or not? If so, then that Blood did more for them than for others, if not, then they were not the Seed of Christ. Was that Church an actual Church before or without Christ's purchase? or was it a Church in his Intention? If an actual Church, what need he purchase it? If a Church in intention, then the special design of his Death was to make it an actual Church. Was that peculiar People such without the Merit of Christ's Death or not? If so. why did he give himfelffor it ? If not, then he gave himself for it that it might be such. Were those Sheep brought into Christs fold without his Death or not? If fo, why did he lay down his life for them? If not, he laid it down to bring them thither. Were those given Ones actually fanctified without the virtue of Christs Sacrifice or not? If fo, then why did he fanctifie himself for them? If not, then be fanctified himself for them, that they might be fanctified. Were those redeemed from among men redeemed by Christ or not? If so, then he redeemed them in a special manner; if not; then they are the redeemed ones of their own Free-will. But let the Texts themselves breath forth their own native strains of Love and Grace; he so died for the Elect as to effectually call and actually justifie them, Rom. 8.30,33. he to died for his Children as to gather them together into one, one Faith on Earth and one fruition in Heaven, Joh. 11.52. he fo gave himself for the Church, as to make it a glorious Church without spot or wrinkle, Eph. 5. 25, 27. he so gave himself for his People as to make them his peculiar ones, Tit.2.14. he fo laid down his life for his Sheep as to bring them into his fold, and make them hear his voice, Joh. 10.15,16. he so sanctified himself for the given ones as to fantifie them through the truth, Joh. 17. 19. he so redeemed his chosen Ones from among men as to make them first fruits to God and the Lamb, Rev. 14.4. In all these special Scriptures, it evidently appears that Christ in his Death had a special respect to his Elect. Wherefore I will thut up all with that of an Ancient, Et-Ambr. Li. 6.Lm. si Christus pro omnibus mortucap.7. us est, pro nobis tanten specialiter passus est, quia pro Ecclesia passus est.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Work of Conversion.

Having passed over Redemption, I come to Conversion; there we had Christ formed in the Womb, here we have him him formed in the Heart; there we had Christ coming in the Flesh and working miracles on mens Bodies, here we have him coming in the Spirit and working miracles in mens Souls; there we had Christ pouring forth his Blood and reconciling us to God's Justice, here we have him pouring forth his Spirit and reconciling us to God's Holiness. Now in my discourse touching Conversion, I shall reduce all to 3. Quaries.

1. What is Mans state before Conversion?

2. What is the Nature of the Work?

2. Who is the Worker thereof?

In the first we shall meet with the extreme Necessity of the work, in the second with the intrinsecal Excellency thereof, and in the third with the Power and Grace of the great Agent.

1. What is Man's State before Converfion? I mean Man fallen, for Man standing needed no Conversion; and this I shall confider two ways.

1. What it is in general in relation to

2. What it is in particular in relation to the leveral parts of Man?

1. What it is in general? and this I shall open in two things.

God. State of Estrangement from

2. 'Tis a State of Enmity against God.

Tis a State of Estrangement from God; a natural Man is estranged from the womb, Pfal. 58.3. without God in the world, Eph.2.12. God is all round about him in the witnessing Creatures, and yet he is without God in the World; God is in him in the Lamp of Conscience, & yet he is without God in his Heart, for there he faith, There is no God, Pfal. 14. 1. Which way foever God comes forth to meet him, whether from Mount Sinai in the fiery Law, or from Mount Sion in Gospel-charms of free Grace, still he flies away from God's presence; and if God pursue after him, he'l fay to God in plain Terms, Depart from me, Job. 21.14. and if any reliques of light will not depart, but stay behind in his heart, he shuts them up in the prison of unrighteousness, Rom. 1.18. His Wbi iswith Cain in Nod the Land of wandring and demigration, and with the Prodigal in a far Country, where he is far off from God, Pfal. 73.27.and God far off from him, Prov. 15. 29.8 if ever he be faved, he must be brought from far, Isai. 43. 6. Now upon a distinct View this is a deplorable Condition; for

1. A natural Man being estranged from God the Fountain of Life, must needs needs be a dead Man, dead in sins and trespasses, Eph.2.1. because alienated from the Life of God; he is not only as the man in the Gospel, half dead, Luk. 10. 30. (who is there set forth not as a figure of Original Corruption, but as an Object of Charity, as is very evident by the scope of the Parable, which is ushered in with that Question, And who is my neighbour, Ver.29? and at last closed up with the like, Which of the three was neighbour to him Ver. 36?) but he is altogether dead in Spirituals; there are no true vital Spirits of Faith in him, no true motions of Obedience, no pulse of heavenly Affections, no breath of Spiritual Prayer, no tafte of the Gospel-wine and Marrow, no feeling of all that maffy Sin and Wrath which lies upon him; all his Life is a Death-wandering, all his rest is in the Congregation of the dead, Prav. 21. 16. Give him all the Statures of natural Excellencies, strew him over with the flowers of sweetest Morality, and spangle him with the Notions of fublime Theology, yet still he is but a dead man, his Soul a dead Soul, his Faith a dead Faith, his Works dead works, and his Hopes and Comfors but as the giving up of the Ghost. But you'l say, Is not Man aliving

a living Creature? Hath he not a Reason and reliques of Light in it? Hath he not a free Will and Seeds of Moral Vertue in it? And why then do you call him dead? I answer; Man is a living Creature, alive in Naturals, but dead in Spirituals; he hath a Reason, but, because there is no light of life in it, 'tis but a dead Reason; his reliques of Light argue no more Spiritual Life in him, than knowledge doth in Devils; he hath a free Will, but for want of the freedom indeed, 'tis only free among the dead, I mean, to this or that carnal or natural Work, and not to the Will of God; he hath some Seeds of Moral Vertue in him, but alas! these are of too low an Extraction to be any Particles of spiritual Life. Mere Moral Vertues are by God's bleffing on humane Industry struck as sparks out of natural Principles, but Spiritual Life is a Fire dropt down from Heaven into the Heart; mere Moral Vertues descending but from natural Principles never ascend up to God as their end, but Spiritual Life as it is originally born of God, so it is ultimately terminated in him. Wherefore a man may be naturally, nay morally alive, and yet be spiritually dead.

2. A natural Man being estranged from Gods

God, who is an infinite Spirit, must needs be Flesh: Thus God calls the Men of the old World flesh, Gen. 6.3. thus our Saviour fets out Regeneration by its opposite, That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit, Job. 3.6. As the Body separate from the Soul is Flesh, fuch as moulders into Duft, and putrifies into Worms; so the Soul separate from God is Flesh too, such as turns into the Dust of earthly things, and rots in those Lusts which breed the never-dying Worm in Hell; neither is this Flesh only in the lower Rooms of the Soul, but in the upmost Faculties of Reason and Will. In the Reason there is the cankred flesh of Errors and Herefies, and in the Will there is the dead flesh of Impotency, and the proud flesh of Obstinacy against the Will of God. Hence the Apostle tells us of a ves oraginos, a mind of flesh, Col. 2. 18. and of Θελήμαζα σαρκός, wills of flesh, Eph. 2.3. And thereforethe true Circumcifion is in the heart and in the Spirit, Rom. 2.29. even in the highest Faculties and Powers of the Soul.

3. A natural Man being estranged from God, who is the Beauty of Holiness, must needs be very impure; he is filthy or stinking, Psal. 14.3. an unclean thing, Job 14.4.

he lies polluted in his blood, with a Leprose in his head, and a Plague in his heart, clothed in filthy rags of Sin, and rolling in the mire and vomit of Corruption; so great is his filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, that he taints whatsoever he touches; his very Prayers are an abomination, and his Services as dung before God:
Neither is this pollution only in the sensitive Soul but also in the rational, there is filthiness of spirit, 2 Cor. 7.1. and desilement in the very mind and conscience, Tit. 1.15.
there is no sound part, but all over wounds and bruises and putrifying sores.

4. A natural Man being estranged from God, who is Jehovah or Beingness, must needs be a very Nullity in spirituals. If a Creature be separate from the God of Nature, 'tis a Nullity in naturals; and if a rational Creature be separate from the God of Grace, he is a Nullity in spirituals. Sure, if he were any thing at all, he might speak or think, but he can do neither: As running a sountain of Words as his tongue is, he cannot say, Jesus is the Lord, I Cor. 12: 3. and as swarming a Hive of Thoughts as his Heart is, he cannot think any thing as of himself, a Cor. 3.5. The great Apostle gives a double account of himself, an account count what he is in himself, I am nothing, faith he, 2 Cor. 12.11. and an account what he is by Grace, by the grace of God I am what I am, I Cor. 15. 10. all his nothingness is in and of himself, and all his spiritual essence is in and of Grace. A mere Natural man is nothing in Spirituals, his eyes are on that which is not, Prov. 23.5. his joy is in a thing of nought, Amos 6.13. and all the false Gods in his heart are Ariting nibilitates, nothingnesses, Pfal. 96.5. As they are Creatures in the World, they are Beings, but as they are Idols in his art, they are nothing, nothing to make a God of, and he, who makes them fuch, is like unto them, even nothing in Spirituals.

2. Tis a State of Enmity against God; he is not only a Stranger but an enemy too, Col. 1.21. nay, which is more, his carnal Mind is enmity against God, Rom. 8.7. Enmity is irreconcileable, it is not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be, not unless the Enmity be slain in it; nay, further the Apostle call the Gentiles Stosuyes haters of God, Rom. 1.30. and Hatred is Enmity boiled up to the height. Hatred (saith the Philosopher) seeks win ever, the Not-being of the thing hated; and such is man's Wickedness that strikes as it were at the Life and Being of God, it had rather that God should not be, than that Lusts should be restrained. The Scripture fets out some grand Enemies as opposing God openly and upon the Stage of the World, and by what they did openly, we may difcern what spirit and mystery of Iniquity is working in every Natural man's heart fecretly; there is in him some of the corrupt flesh of the old World; fomewhat of Pharaoh's spirit, which secretly saith, Who is the Lord that I should obey his voice? Somewhat of the bloody Jew, which is ready to crucifie the Son of God afresh, and trample his precious blood under-foot; somewhat of the proud Antichrift, the man of fin, which exalts it felf above God, its own Reason above the Wisdom of God, and its own Will above the Will of God. The very same Venom and Poyson of Enmity, which the Grand Enemies of God pour out openly, privily lurks and works in every Natural Man.

Thus in general, Man's State is E-strangement and Enmity. But to procede.

2. What is Man's State in particular, in relation to his several parts? Now here the same Estrangement and Enmity shews forth it self according to the Nature of each part.

1. As

1. As for the Understanding, 'tis turned away from God, the first and essential Truth, and so become a Forge of lying Vanities; 'tis turned away from God the first and essential Light, and so become a dark place, nay, darkness it felf, Eph. 5.8. and if the light be darkness, how great is that darkness? So great it is, that a Natural man fets an higher estimate on the Follies of Time than on the Bleffedness of Eternity, and rates the broken Cifterns above the Fountain of living waters. Juguids aveganos, the fonly man, who hath nothing but a rational Soul, the Spirit of a mere man in him, & Sexelau, receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, 2 Cor. 2.14. One would think that all Truths should be welcome to a rational Soul, and above all, the Mysteries of Heaven; but he receiveth them not. And this the Apostle lays down distinctly ; The spirit of man knows the things of man, because they are within his own Line; but the things of God are only known by the Spirit of God, because they are above the Sphere of natural Reason. As the things of Man are above the Sphere of Sense, fo the things of God are above the Sphere of Reason 3 and yet as if they were below it, the Natural man counts them foolith-Aa 2

ness, which evinces an extreme foolishnessin his own heart; he is not a Man, not an understanding Creature in Spirituals. Agur is a Brute in his own eyes, I have not the understanding of a man, saith he, Prov. 30.2. The Apostle proving all under sin, afferts that there is none that understandeth, Rom. 3.11. Millions of ratinal Creatures in the World, and yet there is none that understandeth; and his proof is invincible, there is none that seeketh after God, which fure would be done, if there were any spark of spiritual Understanding in him. 'Tis true there may be a mass of Notions in a man unconverted, but not a dram of spiritual Knowledge. Seeing be fees not; he fees the things of God in the image or picture of the Letter, but he fees them not in their liveliness and inward Glory: Just as the carnal Israelites who faw their Manna and Sacrifices only in the outside, but saw not Christ in them; or as those false Seekers, of whom Christ faith, Te feek me not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled, Joh. 6.26. There was a Miracle in those very Loaves, but they saw only the carnal and groffer part of the Miracle, and not the Glory and Power

Of Christ's Deity sparkling out in it. An Unconverted man knows nothing as he ought to know it; no, not in the midst of his notions, there is no savouring, tasting or practical Knowledge in him, nothing but a husk, shell or form of Knowledg, and in the midst thereof a real enmity against the things known. Whilest the light of Truth shines only in the Notion, he likes it well enough; but if it waken Conscience, check Lust, press Duty, or any way offer to affume its Supremacy in his heart or life, he instantly hates it as an enemy.

2. As for the Will, the Principle of Freedom, 'tis turn'd from God the primum' liberum, and from his fervice the vera libertas; and so it is become servum arbitrium, an arrant Slave, bound in the bonds of iniquity, and (which is the height of Slavery) 'tis in love with its Bonds; and (which is the intenseness and intimateness of that love) when Christ comes to break these Bonds, 'tis loth to be made free indeed, the iron is so entred into his soul; the Bondage is so intimate in the forlorn Will, that it looks on God's service as bondage, and Sins bondage as freedom: and hence it is dead and lame to God's ways but runs and flies in Sins. Again, the natural Will is turned away from God the holy One, and fo it's become desperately wicked, fer. 17.9. a Fountain of blood, out of which evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefis, false witness, blasphemies naturally procede, Matth. 15. 19. a Forge of iniquities. כל־יצר All the forming or framing of the heart; every purpose and defire effigiated there is only evil continually, Gen. 6.5. all's marred upon the Wheel of man's corrupt Will. Nay further, the natural Will is turned from God who is Being, and so it's become a Nullity in Spirituals. What God fays of Ifrael, he may well fay of every Natural man, לא־אָכָה לִי he hath no will to me, Pfal. 81. 11. the Object of the Will is Good, and yet all the fontal Goodness in God moves it not. Nay, lastly, there is an Enmity in the Will against God. Every Natural man, as a part of the corrupt World, lies or no movingo, in the Devil, I fob. 5.19. and his heart as a hell sets his tongue on fire, fames 3.6. Deum ipsum (quantum in ipså est) perimit voluntas propria, faith one, clearly, it would (if it could) abrogate God's Holines, blindfold his Omniscience, and chain up his Justice in order to the fruition of its lusts.

3. As for the Affections, there's nothing

but monstrous Ataxy in them. Love in a Natural Man dotes upon abomination and Hatred breaks out against goodness it selfs Hope hangs upon a broken reed, and Fear* starts and trembles at its fellow-mortal; Joy triumphs in the pleasures of sin, and therein virtually sports it self with the flames of Hell; and Sorrow which should wait upon Sin pours out it self over worldly Crosses: all the Affections are out of frame and place. At first they were born Subjects to the Kingdom of Reason, but the Rational Faculties (which are the man) rebelling against God in the first Adam, the Affections (which are the brutal part) mutin and rife up in Arms against Reason, and by an unnatural violence depose it; and so unman the man. Hence he becomes ως τα άλογα, as the unreasonable beasts that perish. What Asaph was in his Envy at the foolish, that is every man in his inordinate Affections; he is חום a great beast before God, Pfal. 73.22. Here Dinah, that is, the judgement is deflowred by the Son of Chamor, that is, an As (as his Name imports.) A generation of bruitish Lusts ravish the Soul. Here are the no. In atiplas, the vile Affections, which debase the Immortal Soul to the dust of the Aa4

the Earth. Here the Die Stercorei, those dungy Gods of sensual Lusts, carnal Profits, and worldly Honours ascend up into the heart, and as Gods assume the throne of it, command the power of it, and by a kind of omnipresence fill the whole circumserence thereof. Here is the troubled sea of passions and affections, where Satan the great Leviathan raises up the winds and waves of all inordinate motions, making the heart boil as a pot, and sporting himself in the sinful tossings thereof.

4. As for the members of the body, they are ὅπλα ἀδικίας, meapons of unrighteousness, Rom. 6. 13. The Law of Sin issues out its commands in the soul, that speeds them to the members of the body, and these are ready to put them in execution.

Thus deplorable is mans state before Conversion, which if duly weighed, is enough to make every one cry out, Oh! what shall I do to be saved? wherefore I proceed to consider the second Quare.

2. What is the nature of the Work? And here I shall unfold two things:

1. What are the preparatives to Conver-

2. What is the work of Conversion it felf?

1. What

1. What are the preparatives to Conversion? For as God makes a way to his anger in punishing, so he makes a way to his Mercy in converting finners. First, the fallow-ground of the heart must be broken up, before the Seed of God be cast into it: first, Moses must hew the Tables of the Heart, and then God writes the Law upon them. Manasseh will not humble and turn unto the Lord, till he be in chains. Every natural man is a Manasseh, a forgetter of God (as that name imports) and will not remember and turn unto the Lord, till the Spirit of bondage lay him up in chains under deep Convictions of Sin and Wrath. As when Christ came in the flesh, John Baptist prepared his way by the doctrine of Repentance: So when Christ is formed in the heart, John, that is, Gods Grace prepares his way by legal humiliations. Now the preparatory works to Conversion are thefc.

1. There is a Conviction of Sin, the Spirit ελέγξει shall convince the world of sin, Joh. 16. 8. not only of Sin in general, but in particular. The Law as 'tis in the Letter only operates little, but as 'tis in the Spirits hand it is ἐντολὰ ἐλθέσα, Rom. 7.9. it comes home to the heart, and gives it a full Charge, as Nathan to David, Thou art the Man. These are Sins, saith the Law, and these hast thou done, saith Conscience; and from particular fins, the Spirit leads up the Sinner to the fountain of blood in his Nature, it shews him a Seminary of corruption in his own heart, it makes him fmell the fink of fin in his ownbosome; neither is this conviction only rational and notional, but real and intuitvie. Sin with all its Hofts is as it were mustered and set in order before his eyes, Pfal. 50. 21. Nay, it takes hold upon him, and he is made to possess it as his own, which forces him at last to cry out, Guilty, Guilty.

1. There is a Conviction of Wrath. When Satan gave man his first fall, he instilled this Principle into him, thou shalt not furely dye, Gen. 3.4. No, though thou eat the fruit, thou shalt not. On the contrary, when God comes to recover a Soul out of its Fall, he speaks in the same language as to Abimelech, Behold thou art but a dead man, Gen. 20. 3. The wages of fin is death; and because such sins are found in thee, thou hast the sentence of death in thy self. In conviction God sets up a Judgement-seat in the heart; and there after Law-accusations and Conscience-proofs, the Sinner is sentenced to death, and after sentence he is drawn into the valley of Achor, or trouble, to be stoned with the curses of the Law, and scourged with Scorpions of Wrath; he hangs by the thred of his life over the bottomless gulph of perdition, and out of the fiery Law Hell doth as it were slash in his face.

3. Out of these convictions there arifeth legal fear. Gods judgements, which before were far above out of his fight, now approach near unto him; qualms come over Conscience, and hell-pains begin to feize the Soul : this fear hath torment, a kind of hell in it, and out of this legal fear issues a flood of legal forrows for fin, as procurative of wrath ; Gods arrows flick fast in the soul; and hence men are pricked in heart, Acts 2. 37. and which is more, wounded in Spirit, Prod. 18. 14. and thefe wounds flink and are corrupt, till the balm of Christs blood be poured into them. Such is the weight of these fears and forrows, that it presses the Soul into a felf-weariness, and by degrees breaks it all to pieces, that there is scarce left a shard thereof to take a little fire from the hearth, or water out of the Pit of any Creaturecomfort. 4. In blood, Live; and that word, as with child of Omnipotency, shall instantly bring forth the New Creature.

4. In the midst of these fears and forrows, some glimmerings and appearances of mercy in Christ offer themselves to the Soul, and the Soul begins to have fome velleities and imperfect wouldings after Mercy, anguish and bitterness make it cry out, Oh! What shall I do to be saved? The searching flames of Gods wrath leave a thirst in the heart after the coolings and refrigerations of pardoning Mercy, and in proportion to these wouldings and velleities, there are some light touches and tasts of Free Grace, some flashes of joy in the Word, and Christ the marrow thereof; and yet all this while there is no root of Spiritual life in the heart. These are the preparatories of Conversion, only we must not conceive them to be fuch formal immediate dispositions as infallibly inferr Conversion after them; for such prepared ones, though not far from the Kingdom of Heaven, may yet possibly never enter into it: neither must we look on these preparations, though Gods usual method, as necessary on Gods part; for if he please to use his Prerogative, he can make even dry bones to rattle and come together again without any previous dispositions. He can Gy unto men, even when they are in their blood.

2. What is the work of Conversion it felf? I answer, 'Tis that inward Principle of Grace, whereby a man is made able and willing to turn from all Creatures unto God in Christ. Conversion is a motion of the Soul, and therefore there must be an inward Principle, called in Scripture a Root; The root of the matter is in me, faith Job, 70b 19. 28. Friends, you look upon me as if I were nothing but leaves of hypocrifie, but the inward Root of Holiness is in me. Conversion is a supernatural motion, and therefore there must be an inward Principle of Grace, called by the Apostle, the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. the Humane Nature cannot elevate it felf fo high as Conversion, but the Divine Nature can do it. By this inward Principle of Grace man becomes able, he hath an active posse convertere, and which is more, a velle too, he becomes able and willing to turn. Conversion is called in Scripture a returning unto God. Mans Natural state wants a Turn, and Gods Supernatural Grace effects it. Motion is between two terms; the terminus à quo in converfion fion is all Creatures. Creatures as Creatures are the footsteps of Gods Power and Goodness; and so we must not turn from a worm, but see God in it : but Creatures as they are deifyed and idolized in the heart become lying vanities and empty nothings, and so in Conversion we turn from them all. The world without us is a Glass of the Divine Wisdom and Goodness, and so Conversion gives a fanctified use of it; but the world within us, the world in the heart is nothing but a lust, 1 John 2. 16. fitting in the place and Throne of God, I mean, the chief and uppermost feat of the Soul, and so Converfion casts it out of the heart. The Soul in Conversion moves towards God as its true centre, and therefore must leave all the world behind its back. The terminus ad quem in Conversion is God. A man before Conversion walks in an Image, Pfal. 39. 6. he thinks that he moves towards happiness in this or that Creature, but all the while he is but in an image or picture of happiness: but in Conversion he moves really to God the Centre and Sabbath of Souls. Lastly, in Conversion there is a turning unto God in Christ. To turn to God is a most rational Act, for he is the only only true end of the Soul; and to turn to-God in Christ is a most Regular Act, for he is the only true way to that end. The way into the Holy of holies is only through the vail of Christs sless. If we go to God out of Christ, we go to a consuming sire; but if we go to God in him, we go to a reconciled Father, who is ready to fall upon our necks, and kiss and welcome us with his Love revealed in the face of Christ.

Now in Conversion there are two instants or moments to be distinctly considered.

1. The first instant is habitual Conversion, or the habits or vital Principles of Grace which incline and dispose the Soul to actual Conversion.

2. The second instant is actual Conversion, or the actuation and crowning issue of those Principles in an actual turn to God.

of Grace I shall do two things.

1. Ishall demonstrate that there are habits or Principles of Gracé.

2. I shall particularly unfold what they are.

I I shall demonstrate that there are such fuch things. The Remonstrants mince the business; There is (say they) potentia supernaturalis concessa volun-

All Synod in Art. tati ad hoc ut credere & be-3. 6.4. ne agere possit; but as as for any habitual Grace, they tell us, Scholasticorum figmentum est, & eorum qui simul & Semel optant infundi omnes illos habitus, quos actibus crebris comparare nimis laboriosum esse arbitrantur. Now there is a vast difference between a mere posse convertere, and those Habits or Principles of Grace which dispose and encline the Soul to actual Convertion. A mere posse convertere doth not include in it any inward disposition or inclination in the Soul to turn to God, no more than the posse peccare in innocent Adam did include in it an inward disposition or inclination in the Soul to depart from God; but the Habits or Principles of Grace do incline and dispose the Soul to actual Conversion. Again, a mere posse convertere doth not denominate a man gracious no more than the poffe peccare in innocent Adam did denominate him finful; but the Habits or Principles of Grace do denominate a man gracious. And the Reason is, a mere posse may be abstract from the Nature or Essence of the

thing into which it is reducible, but the Habit or vital Principle hath something of the Nature or Essence of the thing in it; nay, it is virtually and seminally the thing it self. A mete posse peccare in Adam before his Fall did not denominate him finful, because it had nothing of the nature of Sin in it; but the Habits and Seeds of Corruption after the Fall did denominate him very finful, because they were virtually & feminally all Sin. A mere poffe convertere doth not denominate a man gracious, because it is abstract from the Nature and Essence of the thing ; but the Habits or Principles of Grace do denominate him, fuch, because they were virtually and seminally all Grace. Now that there are such Habits or Principles of Grace, and not only a naked Power, Ishall thus demonstrate.

1. Out of the Scriptures, which do elegantly and emphatically decypher out those Habits or Principles to us. Wonderful is the variety of Expressions to this purpose. These Habits or Principles are called, the new heart and new spirit, Ezek. 36.26. the new man, Eph. 4.24. the new creature, 2 Car. 5.17. the hidden man of the heart, 1 Pet. 3.4. the good treasure of the Bb beart, Matth. 12.35. the glory within, Pfal. 45. 13. eternal life abiding in ws, I Joh. 3. 15. a well of water springing up into everlasting life, Joh. 4. 14. the teaching and abiding anointing, 1 Joh. 2.27. the renewing of the hely Ghost, Tit. 3.5. the feed of God remaining in us, I Joh. 3.9. the life of God, Eph.4.18. and, which is the sublimest word of all, the divine nature, 2 Pet. I. 4. And is all this glory of words poured out upon a mere pose; which doth not so much as encline to Conversion? Are not here the noblest and highest Inclinations set forth unto us? Hath not the new heart, which hath eternal life in it, a propenlity to Acts of spiritual life? Will not the new creature renewed by the holy Ghost, and sweetned by the holy Unction have some Odours and Fragrancies breaking forth from it? Can the hidden man be ever hid, the good treasure ever sealed, and the glory within ever shut up? Must not the Well of life break forth, the seed and life of God fpring up, and the divine nature shew forth it felf? and do not these denominate him gracious in whom they are? What doth a new heart speak him? How doth the good treasure enrich him, the glory within illustrate him, the holy unction persume him, the the life and feed of God quicken him, the renewing of the holy Choft alter him, and the divine nature glorifie him? Here are pregnant denominations indeed, but there is not a tittle of this in a mere posse convertere; wherefore these expressions are of a nobler emphasis than so. You'l say, 'tis true, these expressions shew forth has bits or principles of Grace, but not such as go before the actual consent of the will to Gods Call, but such as follow after it, nay, after frequent acts thereof.

Unto which I shall answer two things:

t. The habits and principles of Grace decyphered in the Scriptures aforesaid, are there fet out as the royal acts of pure Free Grace, and not as pendents upon mans Will; and for this I shall give two eminent instances, omitting others; The first is in that famous place, Ezek. 36. where God promises a new heart, ver. 26. and bis own Spirit, ver, 27. but withal he enters a double protestation, one before the Promile, This faith the Lord, I do not this for your sakes O house of Israel, but for mine own boly names fake, ver. 22. and another after it, Not for your fakes do I this, faith the Lord God, be it known unto you, bo afhamed and confounded for your own wayes B B 5 O house

o house of Israel, ver. 32. What could be more faid to exalt God and his Free Grace, and to annihilate man and his Works? How could the True God enter fuch protestations, if the great promise of a new-heart hang in suspence upon mans actual consent? When a man without the new-heart gives that actual confent, there is something, which instead of shame and confusion, is worthy to be noted as a matter of Praise and Glory. But you'l fay, these protestations respect not the way or order of working these gracious habits, but exclude mans worth or dignity in the business. Now albeit God do not give the new-heart for mans consent, yet he may do it upon or after mans consent. I answer. these protestations shew, that before the new heart there is nothing in man but what is matter of shame and confusion, and by consequence the actual consent of the Will, which is a matter of Praise and Glory, cannot so much as in order exist before the new-heart. The fecond instance is that, Tit. 3. 5. where the Apostle opens the fountain of Regeneration; Not by works of Righteousness which we have done, but according to his Mercy be faved us by the washing of Regeneration and renewing newing of the Holy Ghoft. We are laved by washing and renewing, but in what way or method is this wrought? The Apostle tells us, not by works of Righteoufness, but of mere mercy. Surely if there be any Righteousness in man, it must be in his Will, and if any work of Righteousness be in the Will, an actual consent to Gods Call must be such a work. Yet the Apostle afferts that our Regeneration was not by works of Righteonliness but of Gods Mercy. Again, 'tis observable, that the Apostle doth not say, Not for works of Righteoufness, as only excluding the meritorious dignity thereof, but he faith, Not by works of Righteousness, as denying the very existence thereof in order to Regeneration.

2. If the actual confent of the Will to the Calls of God do indeed precede the habits or principles of Grace, then what is that which gives an actual confent to Gods Call? What else but the stony heart, the old Creature, the wisdom of man, and the humane nature? For the mere posse convertere doth not include in it a heart of sless, a new Creature, an holy Unction, or divine Nature; therefore the consent precedent to these Gracious Principles must B b 3 be given by the stony heart, old Creature, humane Wisdome and Nature, which is very incongruous. Let us hear Anselms determination in this case, Voluntas non videt acute, fed ided widet acute quia acutus est; ita voluntas non est recta, quia vult recte, sed recte vult, quo-niam est recta. To the same purpose is that of our Saviour ; A corrupt tree & SURAT Tol cannot bring forth good fruit, Mat. 7. 18. that is, whill it is corrupt, it cannot, A sorrupt tree may become a good tree, but whilst it is corrupt it cannot bring forth good fruit; as when the Apostle faith, The carnal mind cannot be subject to Gods Law, Rom. 8.7. the meaning is, that whilst it is carpal it cannot; and how then can the Will, whilst it is a corrupt tree, bring forth to precious a fruit as an affent to Gods Call? How can fuch a grape of Heaven grow upon the thorns of an unregenerate heart? You'l fay, I must not call the Will a corrupt tree, when there is a posse convertere supernaturally poured into it; but if that posse do not denominate it gracious, furely it is as yet but corrupt, and whill it is such, it may be fo called. 2. I argue

2. I argue from the Glory of free Grace, one of its Crown-jewels is, that it makes gracious Principles where there were none before; it new creates in Christ, and so gives Principles of Spiritual being; it quickens the dead, and so gives Principles of Spiritual Life: thus free Grace is bleffed from the fountain of Israel, from the fontal Principles of the new Creature. But those which deny gracious Principles, darken free Grace in that which is its prime lustre, But here I shall be asked whether that poffe convertere be not such a Principle? I anfwer No; a Principle is more than a bare pose. There was in Adam in innocency a posse peccare, and yet there was no Principle of fin in him; after the fame manner, there is (fay the Remonstrants) a posse convertere given to fallen man, but this is no Principle of Grace in him. But not to strive about words, suppose it might be called a Principle, yet what a grand difparagement to free Grace is it, to fay, that there was as much of Principle in innocent Adam by Nature towards his finful transgreffion, as there is in fallen Man by Grace towards his actual Conversion? Such as deny gracious habits, and grant only a naked power must say so.

3. I argue from the sweetness of Providence. As 'tis the Glory of free Grace that there are gracious Principles made, fo 'tis the sweetness of providence, that those Principles are made first; and then congruous acts iffue from thence. The only wife God disposes things in the sweetest method. In the body of Nature first a Sun and then a beam, first a Fountain and then a stream, first a Root and then a fruit. In the Soul of Man negative faculties precede acts of life, fensitive acts of sense, and intellectual acts of reason. Hence those acts issue forth in an easie connaturalness to their Principles. And can there be less of the beauty of providence in the Spiritual world than in the natural? Should there not be as sweet an order in the new Creat ture as in the old? Ought not supernatural acts to iffue forth in as great connaturainess to their Principles as natural? If fo, then there must be habits of Grace to precede the acts; if not, then those acts, which are above nature in facto effe, as to their essential excellency, must be below it in fieri, as to their procedure from causes; nay, 'tis hardly imaginable, that those acts should at all come forth into being without gracious Principles. If the Will be not changed changed by regenerating Grace, how is it constituted in ordine agentium supernaturalium? And if not, how can it actually turn to God, feeing that is all w ording Supernaturalis? Every one that doth rights oufness is born of God, 1 Job. 2. 29. To turn unto God is a prime act of Righteoufness, and how then can it be done before Reges neration? Wherefore the Scripture me thod is clear; first a good treb and then good fruit, Mat. 7. 17. first a good treasure in the heart, and then good things out of it, Mat. 12. 35. first me are created in Chrift, and then we walk in good works, Epb. 2110. And thus Spiritual acts are done in the easiness of the new Creature, because in a way connatural to Spiritual Printiciples.

4. If there be no habits or principles of Grace, what is that that makes the grand difference between a godly and an ungodly man? Surely, either it must be the acts of Faith and other Graces, or else the habits and principles thereof. Tis not the acts of Faith and other Graces, for two Rea-

rence must be somewhat permanent; such was Caleb's other spirit which differenced him him from the murmuring Congregation, Numb. 14. 24. Such was Job's Root which differenced him from the leavy hypocrite, Job 19. 28. But the acts of Faith and other Graces are transient; wherefore if these be all the difference, what becomes of a Godly man in his sleep or phrensie, wherein no such acts are put forth? Doth he drop out of the state of Grace without any apostalie, or continue in it without eny differencing quality? neither is posfible; he back-flides not from God, and how can he be out of the state of Grace? he is but as other men are, and how can he be in it? It remains therefore that the habits of Grace make the difference; for by reason of these he is not as other men are, no, not when the Acts of Grace are Suspended, because he hath another fpirit in him. It waller made to de sedan that which chiefly makes the difference must denominate a man changed. Now in every change the Terminus is somewhat permanent; in Alteration it a permanent Quality, in Augmentation it a permanent Quantity, in Generation it a substantial Form, and in Regeneration it a new creature born of the incorruptible seed feed of the Word, 1 Pet, 1.23, The Terminm of this gracious Change is fet out in Scripture as a permanent thing ; fometimes 'tis called light ; ye were darkness but now light in the Lord, Epb. 3. 8. fometimes life; this my fou was dead and is alive again, Luk. 15.24. fometimes the new man 5 old things are past away, behold all things are become new, 2 Cor.5.17. Still it is somewhat parmanent. Hence it appears, that the Acts of Faith and other Graces (which are transient) do not so properly denominate a man changed, as improve the Change already made. The wild Tree is changed by the Graff, and not by the After-fruit; the Natural man is changed by the ingrafted Word, and not by the fruits of Faith and other Graces, which naturally grow upon the Root of habitual Grace. That a corrupt Tree is made good is a great Change; but that a good Tree brings forth good fruit is altogether connatural.

If there be no Habits or Principles of Grace, how can the Natural man's deadly Wound, I mean Original Corruption ever be healed? Habitual Corruption cannot be healed but by habitual Grace, the Plague of the Heart cannot be healed but by

by the holy Unction; instead of the old Heart there must be a new one, or else there is no healing, and without healing how can fuch a found Act as Converfion come forth? It remains therefore, that there are Habits of Principles of Grace.

2. Having proved that there are fuch Habits or Principles, I come to unfold what they are ; and this I cannot better do, than by shewing what they are in the several Faculties. Wherefore Faculties.

1. As to the Understanding, there is a Principle of excellent Knowledge; I fay, excellent, not only in respect of the matter of it, being heavenly Mysteries; but alfo in respect of the Nature of it, tis too high for a fool; nay, tis a Story higher than the Knowledge of all the unregenerate Rabbies in the World: Tis not a mere literal Knowledge, a knowing of Christ after the flesh, but a spiritual, a revealing spiritual things in their spiritual Glory; 'tis not a dead Knowledge called by the Apostle μέρφωσε γνώσεως, a form of knowledg, Rom. 2.20. fuch as is but a liveles figure or appearance, but 'tisa lively Knowledge called by the Wiseman a well-spring of life, Prov. 16.22, and by our Saviour the light of life, Joh. 8. 12. 'Tis not a Knowledgewithout Sense, but such as hath Sense, nay, all the Senses of the inward man in it; 'tis a seeing of the just one, Acts 22.14. a hearing and learning of the Father, Job. 6. 45. a smelling and savouring the sweet odours of the Gospel, 2.Cor. 2.14. a tasting how good and gracious the Lord is, Pfal. 34. 81. ata-Etual knowledge, a spiritual touching and handling of the word of life, I Joh. I. I. here are feminally and virtually all those spiritual Senses which discern good and evil. 'Tis not a dark and duskish Knowledge, but clear and lightfome ; 'tis feeing with the veil off and face open, 2 Cor. 3. 16, 18. tis the day dawning and the day-star arising in the heart, 2 Pet. 1.19. Here God shines into the heart, and things are feen eye to eye, as the expression is, Isai. 52.8. that is, in a clear evidence of the truth. 'Tis not a Knowledge at a distance and afar off, as Dives faw Abraham, and as every natural man fees the things of Faith, but a near and intimate Knowledge. 'Tis wisdom in the hidden parts, Pfal. 51.6. 'tis wifdom entring into the beart, Prov. 2. 10. 'tis a reason delivered over to the power of holy truths, Rom. 6.17. 'tis Noy@ Eupolos, the word engrafted or innaturalized in the mind, Jam. 1.21: Hereby Hereby the Truth approaches and presentiates it felf to the Soul in fo clear and near a manner as that it works a firm affent and perswasion thereof, and that upon the divine Authority thining and sparkling out in the same. This Principle faith Amen to all the Truths in Scripture 5 by it we come to know truths in our felves, Heb. 10.34. and to carry the witness thereof within us, 1 Joh. 5. 10. As Jesus Christ is the Amen, the faithful and true witness who sealed the Truths of the Gospel outwardly by his Blood, fo the holy Unction dropping down fom Christ is an Amen, a faithful and true witness sealing up those Truths inwardly in the heart. And this clear and near Knowledge, as it affures and perswades a man of those Truths, is Faith in the Understanding; for this fets to its feal that God is true in them, I fob. 3.33. Tis not a mere notional Knowledge floating in the Brain, vaunting in the Tongue or flourishing in a leavy Profession; but tis a practical Knowledge influxive into the Will, inflammative to the Affections, and directive to the whole Life. This is that Principle of excellent Knowledge whereby the Soul is enabled to see God as the only supreme End, Christ as the only true true Way, and Sin as the only great Ob-

2. As to the Will there is a Principle of Holiness and Rectitude, such as makes the Heart pure and right, such as sets the Will into a right frame and posture in a threefold Respect.

1. In reference to the true End of Man.

2. In reference to the right Means.

3. In reference to the grand Obsta-in reference to Man's true End. Man's true End is God alone; for he is fontal Goodness, Allness of Persections; the primum amabile, and ultimus sinis, the great Alpha and Omega of Spirits, persectly able to still all the desires, and fill all the crannies thereof. Now this rectifying Principle in the Will, as respective to this supreme End, thews forth it self three ways.

I. In that it is a desiring Principle. Desire is the first-born of the Will, the first opening of the rational Appetite; and this Principle sanctifies it and sets it apart for God as its supreme End; it enclines and disposes the Will to pant and thirst after God, to faint and cry out for him, to enquire and feek after him with all the heart. Before the Will Cain-like did go out from the Lord's presence, but now David-like it desires to dwell in his house and behold his beauty. Before the Will lay dead in the Grave of Creature-deadness, but now it hath the life of God in it quickning it to holy breathings after him: before there was such a gravedo liberi arbitrii, such Talents of Carnality upon the Will, that it could in no wife lift up it felf, but lay among the pots and embraced dunghils; but now it hath the wings of a Dove to elevate it self to God. Here is the first resurrection of the Will; here are the avagaage or Th nagolia; ascensions in the heart, as the Septuagint hath it, Pfal. 84. 5. The nature of this Principle is to ascend up to God and leave all the World behind its back. As the Principle of perswading Knowledge is Faith in the Understanding, so this desiring Principle is Love in the Will in its primordial propensities; there is spiritual Life in primo radio, in its first Light, and here is spiritual life in primo ardore, in its first heat.

2. In that it is a purposing Principle, such as inclines and disposes the Soul to pitch by a serious determination upon

God

God as its only happiness, and to cleave unto him with purpose of heart, Act, 11.23. This renders a man a true spiritual Levite, who (as his name imports) is joined to the Lord & become one spirit with him, I Cor. 6.17. And as the first-born were dedicated to God, and afterwards the Levites; fo the defiring Principle first dedicates the Desires the first-born of the Will to God, and then this purposing Principle makes a man a spiritual Levite consecrated to God by a holy Conjunction with him. This is that Key of David or Love (as David imports) which opens the everlasting doors of the Will that the king of glory may come in, Pfal. 24. 7. This is that sweet voice of David or Love which upon mature deliberation is ready to break out, Whom have I in heaven but thee? whom on earth besides thee? Pfal. 73.25. In Heaven there are glorious Angels, and on Earth multitudes of good Creatures, but none of them all are my end or happiness; none, none but God a-Were Heaven and Earth emptied of all their Furniture, still I should have my end as long as I have my God, who fills them both with his presence ; whilest he is with me there can be no such thing as Emptiness, for he is all in all, waving all the

the World, I pitch upon him alone as my only end. I can truly fay to the Covetous, God is my gold, Job 22.25. to the Ambitious, God is my glory, Pfal. 3.3. to the Voluptuous, God is my delight, Isai. 58. 14. to the Souldier, God is my buckler and high tower, Pfal. 18. 2. to the Mariner, God is my broad rivers and streams, Isai. 33.21. to the Potentates and Emperours of the World, God is my crown and diadem, Ifai. 28.5. and to those who with Esan have enough of the World, Jacob-like, I have all, Gen. 33.11. all in one, even in God alone. Such Resolutions as these are the proper Issues of this purposing Principle, this makes the Will free indeed; before it was free in Naturals, but now in Spirituals, which is freedom indeed. When the Will fixes it felf upon the Creature as its End, it is in straits in a house of bondage. Take the World in its own place, 'tis a spacious Looking-glass of God's Power and Goodness, but take it as a man's End and Happiness, 'tis too strait and narrow for the immortal Spirit to breathe in. Hence carnal Men even in the fulness of sufficiency are yet instraits, Job 20. 22. but when the Will through this purposing Principle fixes it self upon God as its End, 'tis free indeed. The Rabbins

Rabbins call God Dipo Place, and a large one he is; no less than an Infinity and Immenfity of Goodness, such as no desire or out-going of the Will can ever pass thorough. Here there is Room enough for an immortal Spirit, Goodness enough to fatiate the rational Appetite for ever. Now as the defiring Principle is Love in the Will in its first Plantation; so this purposing Principle is Love further rooted and grounded in the same Faculty.

3. In that it is a resting Principle, such as enclines and disposes the Will to a double rest in God.

1. To a Rest of Innitence.

2. To a Rest of Complacence.

1. To a Rest of Innitence; it inclines the Will to lean and roll it felf upon God, and to fet its faith and hope in him : hereby the Heart hath an access unto God, and casts and ventures it self upon him for all its happiness, as being fully resolved in it self to be happy only in him. And this is no other than Faith in the Will confidered ut in ultimo termino, in God its only testing-place. We which believe (faith the Apostle) do enter into rest, Heb. 4.3. Faith makes a man cease from himself and enter into rest by a fiducial repose on God's All-2. To fufficiency. Cc 2

2. To a Rest of Complacency; it enclines the Will to delight in the Almighty, Isai, 58.14. and count him its exceeding joy, Psal, 43.4. Hereby the Soul dwells at ease, or lodges in goodness (as the Original hath it) Psal, 25.13. hereby it lies down in the bosom of bliss and hath peace for its tabernacle, Job 5.24. God was the Levites inheritance, Dent. 18. 2. As the purposing Principle makes a man a spiritual Levite, so the resting Principle gives a man an inheritance in God; and this is Love in its triumph and joy inheriting all things in Gods Mercy and glorious All-sufficiency.

2. This Principle of Rectitude or Holiness fets the Will right in reference to the true Means. The true Means is Jesus Christ the Mediator; the only way into the Holy of Holies is through the Veil of his flesh. We are in a treble Incapacity of returning unto God our ultimate End: We are in the Darkness of Sin and see not the right path thither, and as to this, Christ is the way, as a Prophet teaching us by his Spirit and Word : We are in the Guiltiness of Sin and dare not approach thither, and as to this, Christ is the way, as a Priest offering up his Blood and Righteousness for us: We are in the Impotency and Enmity of

Sin,

Sin, and cannot, will not of our felves return thither, and as to this, Christ is the way as a King, subduing and ruling us by his gracious Sceptre ; God hath fealed Christ to all these Offices for this very end to bring us home to himself. Now this Principle sets the Will right in reference to Christ in all his Offices.

1. Take him as a Prophet, this Principle sets the Heart right in a threefold respect.

1. 'Tis a Principle of humble Teachableness, God (who is the Soul's Centre) dwelling in Light unapproachable, and Christ (who is in the Father's bosom) being the great revealer of him, this Principle enclines the Will to hearken to Christ; the ear is opened or revealed to hear the great Prophet in all things. There is a προθυμία, or readiness of mind to let in every beam of Light and catch at every drop of Truth which falls from Christ. Before Man was a Wolf and a Lion for bruitish untractableness, but now a little child may lead him, Ifai. I 1.6. even the least truth or message from Christ; he will not be unruly or break away from it for a World, but meekness and humility make him as a little Child ruleable by every word of Christ.

2. 'Tis

3. 'Tis a Principle of Love, ready to embrace Christ as the Angel of God's face or presence, and kiss the Son as revealing holy secrets from the Fathers bosom. This Principle hangs upon Christ's myrrh-dropping lips, and when he speaks, it catches up his words as the words of eternal life; every Truth is received in Love as from Christ's hand, and above all, Christ himself is very precious, because he is the brightness of glory.

2. Take him as a Priest, this Principle sets the Heart right towards him. Under the Law the Levites were given to the Priest; under the Gospel those who are spiritual Levites, are given to Christ the High-priest. Now the Principle (whereby they are given to Christ as a Priest) is double.

the Soul to wash in the Laver of Christ's Blood, and wrap up it self in the Robe of his Righteousness. This is called in Scripture trusting in Christs name, Matth. 12. 21. faith in his blood, Rom. 3.25. receiving the atonement, Rom. 5.11. and receiving the gift of righteousness, Rom. 5.17. When a Soul comes up out of the wilderness of Sin to return to God, all the way it leans upon

Jesus Christ, Cant. 8.5.

2. 'Tis a Principle of Love enclining the Soul to love Jesus Christ as its Priest. When once there are Faith-glances in the Understanding at Christ crucified, and Faith-rollings in the Will upon him, the holy Fire (called a vehement Flame, or, as it is in the Original, the Flame of God, Cant. 8.6.) kindles upon the heart and makes it burn with true love to Christ: Oh! fays the Soul, this is he who made the Robe of Righteousness for me, and how much love was there in every thread of it? This is he who drunk off the Cup of trembling for me, and how much wrath did my fins squeez into it? When on Earth he bore my fins upon the Cross, and now in Heaven he bears my name upon his heart 3 his Person is all desires, his Blood all precioulnels, Cc 4

ousness, his Righteousness all glory, his Love all heights and depths and breadths surpassing knowledge, and who can chuse but love him? There is no high Priest or Sacrifice but himself, no Balm or healing but in his Wounds, no Intercessor above but his Blood and Righteousness, no Beauty or Glory in all the visible World like that in his Cross, and how can the heart refuse his Espousals? This is a Principle of sweet closure with Christ; this makes the Soul breathe after, nay approach to Christ, and when it hath a being in him, fuch is the holy aspiration of this Principle, that still it desires to be more perfeetly and intimately in him; no embraces near enough, there's too much distance in every union: When the Soul is brother and fifter and mother to him, still 'twould be nearer, nothing less than one spirit, I Cor. 6. 17. and when 'tis fo in some measure, still it presses hard after more oneness with him: Oh! that the Veil of darkness were quite off! that the remnants of separating Corruption were quite out! Oh! for more gales of Faith and Prayer to blow up this holy Fire! for more effusions of the holy Unction to feed and enflame it! Thus this Principle is hiatus Voluntatis, the opening thirsty gaping of the Will for more and more of Christ, and all that it may dwell in God who is Love it self.

3. Take him as a King, this Principle sets the Heart right towards him. Hence a man becomes & Detos eig seanhear to Des, in a fit posture towards the kingdom of God, Luk. 9.62. and that in a threefold respect.

1. This Principle is a Principle of Faith: God made Christ a King, & Faith owns him as fuch; God gave him all the power in heaven and earth, and Faith gives him all the power in the upper and lower Faculties of the Soul. This Principle rests upon him as a King, able to put all his enemies under his feet: Are there strong holds of Sin in us? this Principle rests on him as the power of God to cast them down: Are there Armies of temptations round about us? this Principle rests on him as the Captain of Salvation to scatter them. As soon as this Principle is in the Soul, the Soul is no longer where it was, but translated into the kingdom of Christ, Col. 1.13. Before it was in a region of Darkness, but now in a place of marvellous Light 3 its native soil was spiritual Sodom and Egypt, where Sin is a Law, but now it is in the Dominions of Christ, where the Law of the Spirit frees from the Law

Law of sin: and because, after the Law or Reign of Sin is broken, the remnants or reliques of Corruption are still in us, therefore this Principle doth in a wonderful manner rest upon Christ for a more tho-

2. This Principle is a Principle of Love, disposing the Soul to love Christ as a Melchifedek, a king of righteousness, and to kiss his sceptre as a sceptre of righteousness. This Principle desires and delights above all places to dwell in Immanuels land, and by a holy acquiescence under his Law, it sits down (as it were) in the kingdom of God. Hence the Heart is willing that Christ should reign over it, & that all his Enemies should be made his footstool, even those that dwell in its own bosom; if he come & fearch for darling Lusts there, this Principle will open every fold, and unlock every secret place of the Heart to discover them: If he come and flay them with the Sword of his mouth, this Principle will be consenting to their death, and pray, So let all thine enemies perish, O Lord, even all the remainders of Corruption lying in my Heart.

3. This Principle is a Principle of Obedience; and this is no other but the two former former Principles of Faith and Love conspiring together to do the Will of Christ. Christ is at the right hand of God, and the Soul by Faith and Love is at the right hand of Christ, Psal.45.9. ready to hear and do all his pleasure, Ver. 10. Faith hath two Eyes, & whilest one is upon the propitiatory Cross, the other is upon the holy Crown of Jesus. Love hath two Hands, and whil'st one is thrust into his side and bleed. ing Wounds, the other is busie in keeping his righteous Laws and Commands. No fooner doth a Command drop down from him, but Faith catches it up; Oh! fays Faith, this comes from the King of Kings and must be done; and this great King (fays Love) obeyed for me even to the Cross, and how can I do less than obey him? His commandments are all right, his yoke easie, his service freedom, and bis love constraining.

3. This Principle sets the Will into a right Frame in respect of that great Obstacle, Sin. Sin separates between God and the Soul, but this Principle separates between the Soul and Sin; and this in three respects.

Sorrow. Sin is contracted with pleasure and must be dissolved with forrow, and this this diffolution will not be kindly, unless the Sorrow be Evangelical; Legal Sorrow is a preparative to Conversion, but Evangelical is an effential ingredient in it; in Legal forrow the Heart breaks under the Fears of Hell and Death, but in Evangelical it thaws under the Beams of free Grace; it melts for the exceeding finfulness of Sin, it bleeds over the bleeding Wounds of Christ, it grieves at the grievings of the holy Spirit, it blushes and shames it self for the stains cast upon Gods Glory, & it is offended & full fraught with displicency at its many & great offences of the divine Majesty. This is Nown no Dedu, forrow according to God, 2 Cor. 7. 10. Sorrow for Sin as Sin, fuch as God would have. This turns the sweet morfels of Sin into bitter herbs, and the pleasant streams of lust into blood; hereby Sin is in some degree loosened out of the Heart.

2. As it is a Principle of hatred enclining the Will to hate every falle way. The Scripture sets out Sin as a very odious thing, 'tis the poyson of asps, Rom.3.13. the dogs vomit, 2 Pet. 2.22. a menstruous cloth, Isai.30.22. Desida kanias, the superfluity or excrement of all evil, Jam. 1. 21. enmity to God, Rom. 8.7. the abominable thing which God bates, Jer. 44. 4. and that with great batred, Hoj. 9.7. Now the Heart (when this Principle is in it) hates and abhorrs the taste of this poison, the smell of this vomit, the touch of this menstruous cloth, the sight or appearance of this silthy excrement, the thought of this enmity to God, and the very presence of this abominable thing; this hatred is the very life and spirit of Repentance: As the love of Sin is the vinculum unionis or vital spirit whereby the Soul and Sin are intimately united together, so the hatred of Sin is the folutio vinculi, or the extinction of that vital spirit, whereby the Soul and Sin are separated one from another.

3. As it is a Principle of actual Reformation or forsaking of Sin; and this is no other than the two former Principles of Sorrow and Hatred conspiring together to make away with Sin. Sorrow nails the old Man with all his members upon the Cross there to die in pains and agonies, and Hatred pierces into his very Heart and lets out his vital Blood, I mean, the love of Sin, that he may be sure to die and not revive again; where these two are, a man suffers in the sless and ceases from sin, I Pet. 4. I. he cannot reserve again, cammit sin, I Joh.

3.9. not so as he did before. Sorrow forbids it to be the joy of his way, and Hatred forbids it to be the love of his Heart, and both cast it out asan unclean thing, causing God's departure from the Soul.

3. As to the Affections, there is a Principle which tunes and harmonizes them,

1. 'Tis a Principle reductive of the Affections to the Rule of Reason. God in Creation made Man'a Lord over Brutes.& anointed Reason to reign over the Affections; but as foon as Man rebelled against God, all within him and without him was hurled into confusion: Without, the brute Beasts rebelled against his person; and within, the brutish Lusts rebelled against his Reason; but when converting Grace reduces Man into order again, then the beasts of the field are at peace with him, Job 5.23. and the Affections of the Heart throw down their arms and confess their homage to the Kingdom of Reason. This Principle makes a man able to rule over his own Spirit, Prov. 16. 32. and fay with Authority to one Affection, Go and it goeth, and to another, come, and it cometh. 'Tis true, Moral Vertue doth in its way subject the Affections to Reason, but this fuperSupernatural Principle doth it in a more excellent manner; there the Subjection is to Reason as the supreme Faculty of the Soul, but here it is to it as the candle of the Lord. even for his fake who lighted it up for the guidance of the blind Faculties ; there it is to Reason as a natural Light, but here it is to it as supernaturally illuminated. The holy Spirit makes the Truths of the Gospel to become the Law of the mind, and this Law of the mind rules over the Affections; the Affections are the to Shin, the Woman-part in us, the head of this woman is the Man or Reason, and the head of this Man is Christ and his holy unction.

2. Tis a Principle moderative of the Affections as to the things of the World. Before Conversion the Earth hath its Throne in the Heart, but this Principle shakes the earth out of her place; before, the Affections are as Sails spread open to the gales of the World, but this Principle contracts and folds them up lest the spirit of the World should fill them: Earthly things are τα ελάχισα, the smallest things of all, I Cor. 6.2. and (where this Principle is) a very small portion of them will suffice, A. gur's dimensum, Daniels pulse, our Saviours daily bread, Pauls food and raiment, Luther's

Herring,

Herring, any thing with the word of bleffing will serve the turn; when there is little or nothing without, still there is an αψτάριζα, a self-sufficiency of holy content within; and when there is a concourse or affluence of all outward bleffings, this Principle is as Balast to keep the Heart from drowning and overwhelming it self therein; there is such an holy allay upon the Soul, that in the lowest ebbs of adverfity it possesses all things in its God, and in the highest tides of prosperity it will not be possessed by any thing in the World : Alas! faith the Soul, all this is but thick clay, and why should I lade my Eagle-affections with it? All this is but mornin parlasia, much fancy, and why thould an immortal Soul be fet upon it? The whole World is but χήμα, a figure or shadow, and that Time (which invelopes it) is but name is oure sanples, time contracted, and contracted into a 70 vuv, for fo the Apostle calls the world T vũ v ciava, the now world, 2 Tim. 4. 10. Wherefore a shadow of Affections is big enough for a figure, and the shortest glance of the Heart long enough for a 70 vuv, a transient and momentany thing which perishes with the very using. The World in Scripture is fet out as a nullity, a thing that is not,

not, Prov. 23. 5. and this Principle deals with it as such; it makes a man rejoyce us if he rejoiced not, and buy as if he possessed not: the Affections, like translated Emoch, are not found here below; because God hath translated them.

3. Tisa Principle inflammative of the Affections towards God and the things of God; before, the Affections run down to the World as their Centre, but this Principle turns the stream of the Soul upward towards God; now Love, which is the Key of the heart, opens & unlocks it unto God; Defire, which is Love in motion, goes out in holy breathings and thirstings after him; and if he stay away from the Soul, Hope, which is Love in expectation, looks and waits for his approaches to the Soul 3 and when he doth approach thither, Delight, which is Love in rest or acquiescence, joys and keeps fabbath in his prefence; and left this Sabbath should be broken, Fear, which is the Soul's Sentinel, watches against Sin as the great make-bate and incendiary ; and when Sin offers to enter the Soul, Harred, which is the Soul's Guard, thuts the doors against it with an holy displicency and antipathy; and if it do enter there, Anger, which is the Soul's Sword, Strikes at it with with indignation, and Sorrow, which is the Soul's Issue, vents and lets out the corrupt blood and humours out of it; and (which is the heat and height of all) Zeal fets the Soul on fire and makes it burn er καλώ, in that which is good, for the Glory of God who is the supreme Good, and against the commission of Sin which is the fupreme Evil. Thus the whole πολίτδιμα trade or converse of the Affections is in heaven, Phil. 3. 20. This Principle fets the Heart upon God above all; it may and doth love Creatures as the Prints of his Power and Goodness, Ordinances as the Conduit-pipes of his Grace and Spirit, and Saints as the lively Pictures and Refemblances of his Holiness, but it sets the Heart upon God above all. This Principle is a Fire dropt down from Heaven into the Heart to confume the drofs of Corruption, and inflame the Affections towards God; 'tis a touch from Christ risen and sitting in Glory to raise up the Affections out of the Tombs and Graves of earthly Vanities, and to quicken and inspire them with the life of God, that God may be all in all therein.

In the first instant the Lamps of Grace are made, in the fecond they are lighted up; in the first instant the new Creature is begotten of God in all its parts and proportions, in the second it is born into the spiritual World; in the first instant the Tree of Righteousness is planted, in the second it buds and bloffoms and brings forth precious fruit; there is an actuation of gracious Principles, an actual turning of the Soul to God. The Understanding doth actually fee God as the fupreme End, Christ as the true Way, and Sin as the great Obstacle. The Will, as to God the supreme End, doth actually breathe after him in holy defires, fix on him by ferious purposes and rest in him fiducially and complacentially for all happiness. As to Christ, the true way, it doth actually embrace and receive him as a Prophet for Guidance and Instruction, as a Priest for Satisfaction and Intercession, and as a King in the Government of his Spirit and Word. And as to Sin, the great Obstacle, it doth actually furround it with Sorrow, fight against it with Hatred, and overcome it by a real Reformation. The Affections do actually bow down under Reasons Scepere, come off from the World's Breafts, Dda and ascend up in holy Flames towards God; and under this sanctified and actually returning Soul, the members of the Body become on a discussion, meapons of righteousness, actually performing and executing the commands thereof. Thus all the Habits and Principles of Grace are actuated, and all the Powers and Faculties of Man are actually returned unto God. Now this actual Conversion comes into Being three ways.

1. As from the inward vital Principles of Grace; there is a divine Life and Vigour in them putting forth the Soul to Acts congruous and connatural thereunto; the divine nature will be shewing forth it felf, the well of living water will be springing up, the feed of God will be shooting forth, the kingdom of heaven, though but as a grain of Mustard-seed, will at last become a Tree. When there is a Principle of right Knowledge in the Understanding, it is a well-spring of life, Prov. 16. 22. and the wife (who have it) shall understand, Dan. 12 10. When there is a Principle of Recitude in the Will, integrity will guide it and direct its way, Prov. 11. 3, 5. the the rectitudes or rightnesses will love Jesus Christ, Cant. 1.4. that is, such hearts as have right Principles in them will ale furedly love him, for the Byas of those Rrinciples draws to it; converting Ifrael will cast forth his roots, Hos. 14.5. the root of Faith casts forth it self in actual believing, the root of Love in actual loving; The root of the righteons yieldeth its fruit, Prov. 12.12. The very Nature of these Principles is to dispose the Soul to actual Conversion. Even moral Vertues dispose to moral Acts, how much more do supernatural Principles dispose to spiritual Acts? Moral Habits are of our own house, but supernatural Principles are of a higher Extraction, coming down from Heaven and Stiled the vertues of God, I Pet. 2.9. therefore there must needs be more Vertue and Vigour in them than in moral Habits, which come forth out of Principles of Reafon and are the Vertues of Men.

2. Actual Conversion comes into Being, as from the assistant and auxiliary Grace of God. When the Apostle gives account of himself as to the Principles of Grace, he saith, By the grace of God I am that I am; all his spiritual Essence was from free Grace: When he gives an account of himself as to the exercise of Grace, he saith, I laboured, yet not I, but the Grace of God which was with me, 1 Cor. 15. 10. auxiliary Grace (which was with him) moved the Principles of Grace (which made up his spiritual Essence)into actual exercise. The new Creature can no more do ought of it self than the old : As natural Agents live and move in the God of Nature, fo spiritual Agents live and move in the God of Grace. Wherefore, that there may be actual Conversion indeed, there is help from the holy One, a quickning wirtue from God, Pfal, 119. 37. a stirring up and fluttering over the neft of gracious Principles, Dent. 32.11. a supthe of the Spirit, Phil. 1. 19. and grace with our spirit Philem. Ver. 25. nay, in a fober fence, Immanuel, God with us, יהוה עפט the Lord with us to encline our hearts to him, I Kings 8. 57,58. God himself is as dem to Israel, and then the roots of Grace cast forth themselves, Hof. 14.5. God blows and breathes upon his garden by auxiliary Grace, and then the spices thereof flow out in the actual exercise of Grace, Cant. 4.16.

3. Actual Conversion comes into Being as from the Soul it self. Timothy must avagance, stir or blow up his grace, 2 Tim. 1.6. auxiliary Grace stirs and blows up the Principles of Grace, the Principles of Grace stir and blow up the Soul, and the Soul

Soul, by virtue of those Principles and Asfistances, stirs and blows up it felf unto actual Conversion. Anima (as a Learned Man hath it) priùs acta agit, & priùs mota movet, & prius à Deo conversa convertit se ad Denm. Hence in Scripture Conversion is stiled man's act, he believes to righteousness, Rom. 10.10. he returns to the Lord with all his heart, I Sam. 7.3. he gives himfelf unto the Lord, 2.Cor.8.5. he obeys to the form of Gospel-doctrine, Rom. 6.17. Still it is man's act: Where we may note a remarkable difference between habitual and actual Conversion; in the production of actual Conversion Man is active, but in the production of gracious Principles he is passive. We read in Scripture of men believing and repenting, but we never read of any man who made himself a new heart and a new spirit; these are of God's make only, but being made, the man (in whom they are) through auxiliary Grace doth actually turn to God.

3. Who is the Worker of Conversion? and this I shall cleave asunder into three Questions.

1. Whether

1. Whether God be not the Author of Conversion?

2. After what manner it is wrought?

Whether God's Will be not always accomplished therein?

I. Whether God be not the Author of it? And to this Scripture and Reason anfwer in the affirmative.

1. Scripture afferts it; there Converfion is painted out under various Notions. With reference to our old Corruption, 'tis called a new heart; with reference to the Seed of the Word, 'tis a generation; with reference to our natural Birth, 'tis a regeneration; with reference to the Law in the Letter, 'tis the Law in the heart; with reference to the World, 'tis a heavenly call out of it; with reference to Satan, 'tis a translation out of his kingdom; with reference to Christ, tis a coming to him by faith ; with reference to God, 'tis a returning or conversion to him; with reference to our death in Sins, tis a resurrection, a quickning. of the dead; with reference to our nullity in Spirituals, 'tis a creation or a new creature. The Scripture phrases it many ways, but still it sets forth God as the supreme Author of it: Be it a new Heart, God is the giver of it, Ezek. 36.26. be it a Generation r. Whether ration or Regeneration, God is the father of it, fam. 1.18. be it the Law in the heart, God is the mriter of it, Heb. 8.10. be it a Call out of the World, God is the caller, 2 Tim. 1.9. be it a Translation out of Satan's Kingdom, God is the translator, Col. 1.13. be it a coming to Christ, God is the drawer, Job. 6. 44. be it a turning or returning to God, God is the converter; to him the Church prays, Turnus, O Lord, and me shall be turned, Lam. 5.21. be it a Resurrection, God is the quickner, Eph.2.5. be it a new Creation, God is the creator and me are ποίνμα αὐτε, his workmanship created in christ Jesus, Eph. 2.10. Every way God is the Author of Conversion; even in Actual Conversion, whilest the Act is Man's, the Grace is God's; for he worketh the Will and the Deed.

2. Reason evinces this, and that 3 ways.

1. Creature-weakness needs it, Man cannot convert himself; the Natural man & δέχειαι, receiveth not the things of God, 1 Cor.2.14. nay, & δύναται, he cannot be subject to God's Lam, Rom. 8. 7. as to God 27 700 he mants a heart, Prov.9.4. a Stone he hath, which resists God's Will, but a heart he hath not to obey the same. His Will is tota cupiditas, a Lust rather than a Will, no wonder if he cannot by his own power convert himself. Conversion is a thing above the Sphere of lapfed Nature, nay, beyond the line of Angels; Man's Heart is To dark, that those fars of light cannot irradiate it, and so cold, that those flames of love cannot warm it & there is fuch an Ironfinew in it, as the heavenly hofts (which excel in ftrength) cannot bow, but must leave it to the Arms of the Almighty, and when he doth it, they joy over the Convert as a wonder of Power and Grace.

2. The Excellency of the Work calls for it. The Body of Nature is a rare piece, but the Soul of Man is of a nobler value, and in the Soul, converting Grace (which is but an Accident) is worth more than the Soul it felf, 'tis the Soul's Rectitude, 'tis glory within, 'tis the prectous hidden man of the heart, 'tis the very image of God, 'tis Christ formed in wo, 'tis anima in centro, the Soul centred in God, joined unto him, and after a wonderful manner becoming one spirit with him, 'tis Faith in the true one, Love in the effential Love, a mind light in the Lord, and a Will at liberty in the Will of the primum liberum, and who can be Author thereof but God alone? God made all things ah

ab Angelo usque ad vermiculum, from the Angel in Heaven to the Worm on Earth, but in Conversion he makes a poor Worm angelize: God must be owned in every Atom of Nature, how much more in the great Work of Grace? This is one of the Ta meyada To Des, the wonderful works of God, Ads, 2.11. St. Auftin tells a Story of one, who was fedu-ced at first but to deny God's Traff.in Folian Creatorship in the Fly, afterwards came to deny it in the Bird, and then in the Beaft, and at last in Man: But if any one should procede so far as to deny him in Conversion, it would be more prodigious Blasphemy than all the rest. Saving Grace is a ray or sparkle of the Deity, a thing merely T' Seov, according to God, Eph. 4.24. there is more of God to be feen in it than in all the World of Creatures besides, and by consequence to deny him in that is more

3. The Almightiness of Grace can only effect it. As the Scripture sets out Conversion as a great Work, so it sets out an almighty Grace as the Cause thereof. He that believes according to some Scriptures, that in the work of Conversion there is a resurrection of the soul from the dead, a transformation of a stony heart into sless, and a Creation of a new heart and new firit, must also believe, according to other Scriptures, that in the production of that Work there is put forth a divine power, excellency of power, and exceeding greatness: of power, such as raised up Christ from the dead. In Conversion there is not only a light shining round about the Sinner, but a fight shining into him ; not only a waking of a fleepy Will, but a quickning of a dead one; not only a proposal of divine Objects, but an insusion of divine Principles: therefore the Grace effecting it must be almighty. That in the Prophet [I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, Ezek. 36.27.] is as much a word of Power as the Fiat which made the World; that in the Gospel [the hour cometh and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live, Joh. 5.25.] founds out as great an efficacy as that other, Lazarus come forth; nothing less than almighty Power can effect it.

Our Saviour sets out the Mystery of Regeneration by the Wind, the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit, Joh. 3.8. In Regeneration the Spirit blows with fuch a found as breaks the Stone in the Heart, and with fuch lively gales as quicken the dead Soul, but the manner of this Work is in a great measure secret and incomprehensible by us. If we know not how the Bones grow in the Womb, how much less how Christ is formed in the Heart. No man perfectly knows the least Atom or Dust in Nature. how much less the grand Mystery of Grace? Here then we must procede with great modesty and sobriety, keeping as close as may be to the line and level of Scrip-Now here I shall make a threefold Enquiry.

1. Whether the Word of God be the Means or Instrument of Conversion?

2. Whether the Will of Man be converted by the Intervention of the enlightned Understanding?

3. Whether the Work of Conversion be wrought in an irrelistible way ?

1. Whether the Word be the Means or Instrument of Conversion? And here I shall endeavour two things.

1. I will prove that it is fo.

2. I will enquire how far or in what sence it may be called so?

1. I

1. I shall prove that it is so, and that by three Arguments.

1. Plain Scripture afferts it.

2. Succeffive Experience shews it.

of the new Creature and the Properties of the Word induces it.

1. Plain Scripture afferts it. Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God, Rom. 10.17. the holy scriptures are able to make wise unto salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. the Law is perfect converting the soul, Psal. 19. 7. the Gospel is the power of God to Salvation to the believer, Rom. 1. 16. and for the Unbeliever who accounts it foolishness and weakness, the Apostle assures us that the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men, I Cor. 1.25. fo much wifer as to out-reason their carnal Understanding, and so much stronger as to out-wrestle their carnal Wills and Affections. The Gospel 'tis Ministerium Spiritus, the ministration of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3.8. the Golden Pipe, through which the Oil of Grace is emptied out into mens Hearts, and the great Organ, through which the holy Ghost breathes spiritual Life into them; 'tis the feed of the new creature, we are begotten by the

the word of truth, Jam. 1.18. born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth for ever, I Pet. 1.23. 'tis the white horfe upon which Christ rides conquering and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2. Conversion is a Conquest over the Minds and Wills of Men, and for the obtaining thereof, Christ rides 27-19 upon the mord of truth, Pfal. 45.5. and because there be high things and strong holds in mens Hearts, the Word is as a mighty Engine in his hands to cast down those beights and holds and captivate every thought to himself, 2 Cor. 10.4,5. The Apostle taking notice of the work of Faith, labour of Love and patience of Hope in the Thes falonians, I Thef. 1. 3. gives us a clear account whence those choice Graces came, the fontal Cause of them was Election, Ver. 4. and the instrumental the Gaspel, Ver. 9. For (faith he) our Gospel came unto you not in word only, but in power and in the holy Ghoft, and in much assurance. In a word: All the Current of Scripture seals up this Truth.

2. Successive Experience shews it. St. Peter at once caught 3000. Souls in the Net of the Gospel, Acts 2.41. St. Paul came to the Romans on mangapada direction, in the fulness

Julness of the evangelical blessing, Rom. 151 29. the Corinthians were his feal, I Cor. 9. 2. and the Theffalonians bis joy and crown, Theff. 2. 19. In all Ages of the Church, God's Ministers have had a proof of Christ speaking in them, and God's People have felt the Word to be Spirit and Life to them; in all places where God's Name hath been recorded, his bleffing hath been afforded; where the Seed of the Word hath been fown, new Creatures more or less have sprung up out of it. Were there a general Assembly of the First-born, what stories would they tell us about the power of the Word? One would fay, Hell flashed in my face out of such a Threatning; another, Heaven opened to me in such a Promise; a third, the Beauty of Holiness appeared to me in fuch a Precept: every one in the Language of his own Experience would speak forth the wonders of the Word. How many have been forced by the power of it to fall down, and work thip, and fay, God is in it of atruth? How many have experimentally felt it, pointing out their darling Lust, placking again and again at the Iron-linew in their Wills, lift's ing and thrusting hard at the World in their Hearts, and at last carrying away their Souls

Souls in a fiery Chariot of holy Affections towards God in Christ? The common sense of Christians bears witness to the Efficacy of it.

3. The Analogy between the Principles. of the new Creature and the Properties of the Word induces it. If we compare the Understanding of the new Creature with the Word; there is a Principle of excellent knowledge, and here is the word of truth, Eph. 1.13. there is a lively and spiritual Knowledg, and here are lively oracles, Ad.7. 38; and words which are spirit and life, Job. 6. 63. there is a near and intimate knowledg, and here is a word quick and powerful, piercing into the very foul and spirit, Heb. 4. 12; there is a divine Faith of perswasion, and here are faithful sayings worthy of all acceptation, I Tim. 4.9. there is a clear Vision, an open-fac'd Knowledge, and here is a clear Revelation, a pure glass reflecting the Glory of God upon the heart, 2 Cor. 3.18: there is a practical Knowledge, and here is a doctrine according to godlines, i Tim.6. 3. Again, if we compare the Will of the new Creature with the Word; there are holy Defires breathing after, and holy Refolutions fixing upon God as the ultimate Etid, and here are the goads and the fails ; Ettl:

Eccl. 12. 11. which stir up those Desires, and fasten those Resolutions in the Heart ; there is Freedom indeed, spiritual Liberty in the ways of God, and here is freemaking truth, Joh. 8.32. and a law of liberty, Jam. 1.25, there is a fiducial and complacential rest in God, and here are hoyou πίσεως, words of faith to lean upon, I Tim. 4.6. and יברי בים words of delight to take pleasure in, Eccles. 12.10. there is a closing with Christ in all his Offices, as Prophet, Priest and King, and here is this Prophet speaking to us, this Priest dying and as it were crucified before our eyes, & this King upon his Throne with a Sceptre of Righteousness in his hand; there is a sorrow for,& hatred of Sin, and here is that which pricks us at the heart, and shews us Sin as an abominable thing. If we compare the Affections of the new Creature with the Word; there is a reduction of the Affections unto Reason, and here is Reason in its height and pureness; there the World hath but a very low place, and here it hath but a very mean character; there the Affections are inflamed towards God, and here's the holyFire which makes our hearts burn within us towards him. Every way there is a wonderful Analogy between the Principles

Principles of the New Creature and the Properties of the Word, which plainly speaks forth the aptness and congruity of the Word to be a Means or Instrument of Conversion.

2. How far or in what sence may the Word be called a Means or Instrument thereof? In answer whereunto I shall first lay down two things as common Concessions, and then come to the main Quere.

The two Concessions are these.

1. That the Word is a Means or Instrument of the Preparatives to Conversion; tis as a fire and a bammer, fer. 23.29. When the holy Ghost blows in this Fire upon the Confeience, every Sin looks like a Spark of Hell; when the Almighty Arms fet home this hammer, it breaks the rocky. Heart all to pieces. No sooner doth the Commandment come home to the Heart, but fin revives and the finner dies, Rom. 7. 9. the Sin, which before lay as dead in the fleepy Conscience, now lives and gnaws upon the Heart, as if the neverdying Worm were there; the sinner, who before was alive in his own Self-righteoufness and Self-sufficiency, now is a dead man, one who hath the fentence of death in. himself, and feels as it were the pangs of Hell in Conscience. Eca

. 2. That the Word is a Means or Instrument to reduce the Principles of Grace in-to actual Conversion. When God stirs up and flutters over the Nest of gracious Principles, 'tis by the wings of the Spirit and Word; when the Spices of the Garden flow out, 'tis from the North and South wind, the Spirit blowing in Threatnings or Promises. That which makes the Roots of Graces cast forth themselves into Acts, is the Dew of auxiliary Grace, and that Dew falls with the Manna of the Word. That Grace with our Spirit, which stirs up the Principles of Grace into exercise, comes in the clothing or investiture of some holy Truth or other. Hence the Apostle counts it one of his Master-pieces, dieyelgen, to stir up pure minds by his Epiftles, 2 Pet.3.1.

These two Concessions being laid down, the main Quere is touching the production of gracious Principles, Whether as to that, the Word may not be an Instrument in God's Hand? Many learned Divines speak of the Word as operating only morally and objectively. Mr. Pemble distinguishes thus; Instruments are either cooperative or passive, and the Word must be one of the two; cooperative it is not, moving or working on the Soul by any inward force of it felf, it is therefore in it self a passive instrument working only per modum object is now no Object whatfoever hath any power per fe to work any thing on the Organ, but is only an occasion of working. And a little after, he faith thus, I cannot better express the manner how the holy Ghost useth the Word in the work of Sanctification, than by a fimilitude; Christ meeting a dead Coarse in the City of Nain, touches the Bier and utters these words, Toung man, I fay unto thee, arise; but could these words do any thing to raise him? No, 'twas Christ's invisible power that quickned the dead, not his words which only declared what he meant to do by his power : So in this matter of Conversion, Christ bids us believe and repent, but these Commands work nothing of themselves, but take effect by the only power of God working upon the Heart. Thus that learned man. But methinks this is too low; the Word of it self operates morally and objectively, and shall it do no more as clothed and accompanied by the holy Spirit? Surely the Scripture-strains touching the Words Efficacy are so high, that it cannot be nudum signum, no, not as to the production of gracious Ec 3 Principles ;

Principles; St. James is express, of his own will begat be us, hoyo anderes, with the word of truth, Jam. 1.18, and St. Paul is more emphatical; In Christ Jesus. I have begot-ten you dià Te diasyes is, by or through the Gospel, I Cor.4.15. 'tis not at To dialyenion, according to the Gospel, but Sià 78 d'asyt-N's, by or through the Gospel, as pointing out the Instrumentality of it in the Generation of the new Creature. And St. Peter is yet in a higher Strain ; We are born again not of corruptible feed but of incorruptible, Dix Noysby the word of God which liveth and abideth for ever, 1 Pet. 1.23. where, belides the emphatical sia, the Word is stilled no less than the incorruptible Seed; not only'a Sampler externally thewing the figures and lineaments of the new Creature, but a feed too springing up into, and for ever living in the new Creature, Faith (which is the new Creatures Head) is is anous, by or out of hearing the word, Rom. 10.17. and so are all those fanctifying Graces, which as it were make up the new Creatures Body: For thus our Saviour prays; Sanctifie them through thy truth, thy word is truth, Job. 17.17. and thus he practi-Tes too, he fantifies & cleanfes bis Church by the word, Eph. 5.26. Surely those Scriptures which which are able opploat, to make wife to falvation, 2 Tim. 3.15. must do somewhat as to the Principles of Knowledge in the Understanding; that Law, which is namo converting or restoring the foul, Pfal. 15.7. must do somewhat as to the Principles of Grace in the Will; that Word, which is δυνάμου σώσαι, able to fave the foul, Jam. 1.21. must also be able to sanctifie it, because without holiness there is no seeing of God; that Doctrine, which is vyalvsou Spasnalia, healing dottrine, I Tim. I. 10. must operate somewhat as to the Principles of Grace which heal the deadly wound of Original Corruption. The converted Corinthians were Christ's Epistle, and the Apostle's too, written by the holy Spirit, and ministred by the Apostle alfo, 2 cor. 3. 2, 3. The Apostle's weapons were mighty through God to captivate every thought to Christ, 2 Cor. 10.4,5. which could not be if they were not also mighty through God to set up Christ's Throne in the heart. These Scriptures constrain me to believe, that the Word doth operate in the production of gracious Principles, only not as it is alone or feparate from the holy Spirit, for so it operates only morally and objectively; but as it is clothed Ee 4 clothed in the power and virtue of the Spirit, for so it becomes spirit and life to the Soul. As for the Similitude used by Mr. Pemble, I conceive that the raising of the young man from a natural Death, and the raising of a sinner from a spiritual Death are not every way parallel; For in that there was no capacity at all in the naturally dead to receive the wordsof Christ, in this there is a passive capacity in the spiritually dead to take in the Word of God as from a divine Impression; in that the words of Christ entred not at all into the naturally dead, in this the Word of God enters into the spiritually dead, even intimately into his very heart; in that the words of Christ were transient and passed away, in this the Word of God though it may pass away as to its sounds and sylla-bles, yet as to its substance it lives and abides for ever in the new Creature : Wherefore (these differences considered) I conclude, That Christ's words were only declarative in that Resurrection, but God's Word is operative also in this. The manner how God works gracious Principles in and by his Word as an Instrument, is a Secret which I dare not pry into; only for a little more illustration of the Words Efficacy

1. The first Instant or Moment is that wherein there is a close Application and intimate Inning of the Word in the Heart; in common Auditors the Word is upon the Heart, but here it is in it; in temporary Believers the Word is in some degree in the heart, but here it is in it intimately. This close Application is excellently set out in Scripture ; 'tis a nail fastned, Eccles. 12.11. 'tis a word engrafted, Jam.1.21. 'tis instruction sealed, Job 33. 16. 'tis the Law put and written in the heart, Heb. 8. 10. 'tis wisdom entring into the heart, Prov. 2. 10. tis the Apostles cordas, or entrance into kis auditors, I Theff. 2.1. 'tis the word having a place in us, Joh. 8.37. and fuch a place as to root in our hearts; thus Job says of himfelf יבר the root of the word is found in me, Job 19.28. and this Root is fuch as will abide in us and become the incorruptible feed of the new Creature. This close Application is a glorious work of God, and the Word is not altogether passive therein, but in the hand of the Spirit 'tis quick and powerful, as a sharp Sword piercing and cutting its way into the heart, Heb. 4. 12.

and as a mighty Engine casting down imaginations and high things there, 2 Cor. 10. 5. that it self may have a place and Throne in the same.

2. The fecond Instant or Moment is that wherein God in and by the Word, so intimately inned in the Heart, doth produce the Principles of Grace there; in the first Moment the indwelling Word makes the Heart a spiritual Bethlehem, a House of Bread, in the second Christ is spiritually born there; in the first Moment the incorruptible Seed is fown in the Heart, in the fecond it springs up into a new Creature. The Scripture feems to me to hold out this Method very clearly, the engrafted word is able to fave the foul, Jam. 1.21. the Word faves the Soul, but not merely as outwardly expressed, but as inwardly engrafted. Faith comes by hearing the word, Rom. 10.17. but is that a mere outward hearing? No furely, there is a hearing of the Father and so a coming to Christ, Joh. 6. 45. There is the powerful and intimate demonstration of the Spirit, and so faith stands in the power of God, I Cor. 2. 4, 5. that is to fay, in that power of God (which intimately demonstrates and closely applies the Word unto the Heart) as its true Caule

Cause and Foundation. When the Apoftle speaks of the Thessalonians Faith and Love, I Theff. 1.2. he there opens the causes thereof, viz. the fontal Caufe God's Election, Ver. 4. and the instrumental Cause the Gospel, Ver. 5. but how could the Gospel be an Instrument? The Apostle tells us, that it came to them not in word only, but in power and in the boly Ghaft ; it was strongly and sweetly set home upon the Heart, and from that Impress came Faith and Love. The Wife Man would have the Word kept in the midst of the beart, and his Reason is, because it is life, Prov. 4.21,22. The Word in the Ear only is but a transient 3 di, but the Word in the midst of the Heart is Spirit and Life. Job proves the truth of his Grace thus, The root of the word is in me, Job 19.28. The Word as shining on the Head lights up Notions, but as rooted in the Heart springs up in Graces. St. John tells the Young Men that they are strong, and for a Reason adds this, the word of God abides in them, I Joh. 2. 14. St. Paul first speaks of his doodes, or entrance into bis anditors, and then of their turn to the living and true God, I Theff. 1.9. The entrance of the word into the Understanding giveth light, light, Pfal. 119. 130. and when it passeth from the Understanding to the Will, 'tis spiritually a word upon the wheels, and inwardly becomes free-making truth, Joh. 8. 32. ennobling the Will with true Liberty in the ways of God. Epaphras was in an Agony of Prayer for the Coloffians, that they might be filled in all the will of God, Col.4.12. the more filling with God's Will, the more true Liberty in ours. St. Peter clearly afferts, that we are born again of the incorruptible feed of the word, I Pet. I. 23. In which words his plain meaning is, that the Word being intimately fown in the Heart, doth under the warming influences of the hospirit spring up into the new Creature; and to make this the plainer, he adds, that the word lives and abides for ever, speaking (as I take it) not of the Words living and abiding in it felf, but of its living and abiding in the new Creature: As it is with natural Seed or Grain sown, the Husk or outward part passes away, but the lively or substantial part springs up into the Stalk, Blade and Ear; so it is with the Seed of the Word, the letters and syllables, the noise and sound of words passaway, but the lively and substantial Truth springs up into the

new Creature, and in it lives and abides for ever. God made two great Promises of Regeneration, the one, That he would write the Lawin the heart, and the other,
That he would give a new heart, and the latter he fulfils by the former.

In these two Instants, distinguishable at least in Nature, doth God by his Word bring forth the Principles of Grace. Now here I would conclude this point, but that I am obviated by two Objections.

The one absolutely against the Words Instrumentality.

The other against the Method proposed

1. Object. That against the Words Instrumentality is this; The Production of gracious Principles is a Creation, and in Creation there can be no Instrument at all, and therefore the Word cannot be an Instrument in that Production.

In answer to which Objection founded on Philosophical Principles, I think it were enough to say with the Psalmist, Thy testimonies are wonderful, Psal. 119. 129. or with the convicted man, God is in it of a truth, I Cor. 14.25. or with the Apostle, The foolishness of God is wifer than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men, I Cor.

mentality, what if this Philosophical Objection could not be answered, must therefore the holy Oracle be rejected? What if Reason cannot comprehend it, must therefore Faith renounce it? How much better is that old Glos, Taceat Mulier in Ecclesia, Let Reason be silent in the Church. But for some satisfaction, I shall offer four things to your consideration.

1. Consider who is the principal Agent, who but the Almighty? and if he will appear in the word (as the Expression is, Acts 26.16.) what may not be done by it? The Apostle was but an earthen vessel, yet a Minister of the quickning spirit, because God indvoor, made him sufficient to be such a one, 2 Cor. 3.6. If he make the Word sufficient to regenerate, who can gainly it?

2. Consider what the Instrument is, 'tis the Word of God; the two grand Truths therein are the Law and Gospel, and what are these in their eternal Idea? The Law is an ἀπαθρασμα or eternal Off-shining from the divine Will as Righteous, and the Gospel is an ἀπαθρασμα or eternal Off-shining from the divine Will as gracious, and what are they in their external Revelation? The Scripture is Θεδπνόσος, breathed out from the very mind and beart of God, and therefore cannot be less than a lively Picture or Image of the divine Will: Wherefore that such a Word, as is the Image of the divine Will, should instrumentally produce the new Creature, which is the Image of the divine Nature feems to me rather congruous than impossible.

3. Consider what the Principles of Grace are, they are not Substances, but Accidents, depending upon their Subject in effe & operari, and may more properly be faid to be increated than created; now if there could be no Instrument in the Creation of Substances, yet why may not there be one in the Increation of Accidents?

4. Confider what a kind of Creation the production of gracious Principles is: Is it every way pure Creation? How then is it Generation? how Resurrection? Pure Creation can be neither of these: You'l fay, 'tis Generation and Refurrection but meraphorically only; very well; if it be but so, the Metaphor must be founded on some true likeness or analogy between these and the production of gracious Principles, which is altogether unimaginable in a pure Creation. It remains there-therefore that the production of gracious Principles is stilled all these in Scripture, partly to import the excellency of the work, fuch as cannot be fully expressed by any fingle one of these, & partly to hint out the nature of the work, fuch as hath in it fomewhat analogous to every one of these: Wherefore I take it to be thus, 'tis a Creation, because a real production of gracious Principles by Almighty Power, tis a Generation, because of the immortal Seed of the Word, and 'tis a Refurrection, because a man spiritually dead is raised up to divine life: Now if there could be no Instrument in a pure Creation, yet may there be one in the production of gracious Principles, because that is not purely Creation, though there be a creating power put forth therein.

2. Object. The other Objection is against the Method proposed in the two Instants, viz. That first in Nature the Word is put into the Heart, and then the Principles of Grace are produced, which is contrary to that, the natural man receives not the things of God, 1 Cor. 2.14. and contrary to that, the word did not prosit them not being mixed with faith, Heb. 4.2. and also contrary to the scope of that Parable, where

where the Seed of the Word only fructifies in a good and honest heart, Luk. 8. 15. for according to the Method of the two Instants, the Natural man doth receive the things of God, the Word doth profit before it is mixed with Faith, and the Seed doth fructifie in a Heart not good or honest.

In answer whereunto, I conceive that the Method proposed in the two Instants doth not contradict any of these Scriptures. As for the first place, The natural man receives not the things of God, Ianfwer that the Things or Truths of God may be received in the Heart two ways; either passively by way of Impression from the holy Spirit, or actually by way of actual discerning them in the Understanding, and embracing them in the Will: the former is a reception of them according to the obediential Capacity of the Heart, the latter a reception of them according to the spiritual Faculty thereof: the former doth at least in Nature go before the Principles of Grace, in order to their Productionsthe latter doth follow after the Principles of Grace, as the fruit thereof. The former is that which is done in the first Instant abovementioned, the latter is that which is Ff fpoken spoken of by the Apostle in the Text aboyenamed; for there he faith, that the natural man receiveth not the things of God, neither can be know them, because they are spiritually discerned, where evidently he speaks of such a receiving as is an actual knowing and spiritual discerning of the things of God: Wherefore according to the Apostle, this active receiving doth presuppose the Principles of Grace already in Being 5 but the other passive receiving (of which the Apostle there speaks not) doth only presuppose an obedienti-al Capacity in the Soul. There is a double obediential Capacity in the Soul to receive the Truths of God as by way of Impression; the ultimate and radical Capacity is the Rationality of the Soul, and the next and immediate Capacity is that Softness of Heart which is wrought in the preparatory work of Conversion. The Soul as rational is capable to receive an impression of Truths from God, and as foftned it is yet further disposed thereun-This is that obediential Capacity which is required in the Method of the two Instants, and which the Apostle in that place doth not fo much as touch upon.

As for the second place, the word did not profit them, not being mixed with faith; I answer, that the Word may be considered under a double Notion, either as it is operative of Faith, or as it is promissive of Rest to Believers: Take it as operative of Faith, and so it profits not being mixed with Faith, otherwise faith could not come by hearing, as the Apostle afferts, Rom. 10.17. but take it as promissive of Rest to Believers, and so it doth not profit not being mixed with Faith; that is, Faith (which is the Condition of the Promife) not being performed, the eternal Roft (which is the thing promised) cannot belong to them: and this is clearly the Apostle's meaning; for having spoken of a promise of rest, Heb. 4. Ver. 1. he adds Ver. 2. the word (that is, the Promise of Rest spoken of before) did not profit them not being mixed with faith, that is, the promiled Rest was of no effect to them because they were Unbelievers; and in this fence the words no way oppose the Method in the two Instants.

As for the Parable where it is said that the Seed of the Word fructifies in the good and honest heart, I answer, that the Seed of the Word may be said to fructifie two ways, either internally in the production of inward Graces, or externally in the production of outward good Works: Now our Savioursscope in this parable; at least in the latter part thereof, touching the good Ground, was to shew how the Word did fructifie in the production of outward good Works; this is clear, because it is such a fructification as presupposesa good &honest heart: so that our Saviour doth not here deny the Words fructification in the production of Graces, but affert the Words fructification in the production of good works. Nay, in the former part of the Parable touching the three forts of badGround, laying down the impediments of the Words fructification, and those impediments being in themselves impediments to all kind of fructification, as well that which is in the Production of Graces, as that which is in the production of good Works; he seems by way of implication to hint out the Words frudification in the production of Graces, according to the Method of the two Instants; for he faith, that the word did not fructifie in the stony ground, because they had no root, Luk. 8.13. intimating that the Word must first root, before it can fructifie at all: So that if we might gather out of this Parable the whole Method of the Words fru-Clification. DIGWEE dification, it seems to be thus; first, the Word must be notionally understood, which was wanting in him by the way-side; then it must be inwardly rooted, which was wanting in the stony Ground; then it must cast the choaking World out of the heart, which was wanting in the thorny Ground; then it makes the Heart a good and honest Heart; and lastly, it makes that good and honest Heart fructisse in all outward good Works: Wherefore this Parable is so far from contradicting, that it seems rather to illustrate the Method proposed in the two Instants abovesaid.

Having passed the first Quare, I procede

2. Quere, Whether the Will of Man be converted by the Intervention of the enlightned Understanding?

In answer to which I shall lay down two

and necessarily follow the practical Understanding.

2. That the Will of Man doth foin the

But that there may be a clear Foundation, I shall first lay down some differences between theoretical Knowledg and practical as to the Truths & Things of God. And

1. These differ subjective ; not as if these were not both in the same Understanding, but that their way of inhesion there is different. Theoretical Knowledge is in the Understanding but superficially, a flash and away, a light taste, such as was in those Apostates, Heb. 6.5. a word fown but unrooted, such as that in the stony ground, Matth. 13.21. but practical Knowledge is deeply radicated in the Understanding; tis truth in the hidden parts, wisdom entring into the soul, and a word sinking down into the heart, and (which is a second difference springing out of the former) theoretical Knowledg, being but superficial, hath much of doubtings and fluctuations; it sees and sees not, it is a dark and half vision, a perswasson er odiyo, in a little, as the expression is, Ads 26.28. but practical Knowledge being deeply radicated hath much of certainty and affurance in it; 'tis instruction sealed; a vision unveiled and with open face: a man need not fay, who shall ascend into beaven? or who shall descend into the deep? the word is in the heart in fuch a fensible Presentiality as makes a thorough perswasion of the truth thereof.

3. These differ Objectivé. Theoretical Know-

Knowledge represents things as good or evil only in the general, but practical Knowledge represents this or that as good or evil in its individuality and as cloathed with all its circumstances. In Herod's theoretical Knowledge 'twas evil to kill John Baptist, but in his practical Judgment, with the circumstance of his Oath, twas good in his eyes to do so. The theoretical Knowledge in the stony Ground pronounces the Word to be good, but the practical Judgment sentences it evil with Persecution. But to carry on the difference a little further: Theoretical Knowledge, representing things as good or evil only in the general, speaks little or nothing to Practice, but practical Knowledge representing this or that as good or evil in its individual circumstances speaks absolutely and with a kind of Authority; this must be done, and that must not be done: When it says, This must be done, it is promotive of the duty 3 They that know thy name will trust in thee, Pfal. 9.10. and by the same Reafon will do other duties required by thee: When it fays, That must not be done, it is preventive of Sin; If they had known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory, I Cor. 2.8. that is, a practical Know-Ff4 ledge

ledge would effectually have impeded that sin, and by the same reason will it impede other sins; both ways it hath a great influence into Practice.

3. These differ essentially. Theoretical Knowledge is in some sence but knowledge falfly so called, because it knows not the things of God as they are proposed to be known; those things are proposed to be known not as mere Notions, but as practical things, to be above all other things chosen, loved, embraced and practifed: Wherefore a theoretical Knowledg, knowing them notionally only, even whilest it is materially true, hath a secret lye in it, because it judges of them theoretically only, of which it should judge pradically. Thus the Apostle, He that faith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a lyar and the truth is not in him, I Job. 2. 4. not in him as it should be; for in the midst of all his puffing Knowledge, he knoweth nothing as he ought to know, 1 Cor. 8.2. because not in a practical way; but practical Knowledge is a true Knowledg, it knows the thir gs of God as they are proposed to be known, that is, not as mere Notions, but as things to be practically improved in heart and life; it knows them them as it ought to know them. And out of this difference arises a second: Theoretical Knowledge being but a falle Knowledge is but a weak and dead thing, able to put forth no vital or spiritual Action: Just as a flash of Lightning in the night, it makes all the way plain, but before one step can be taken, all is in darkness; such a vanishing vapour is mere Notion, which puffs. the Head but penetrates not into the But practical Knowledge, being a true Knowledge, hath strength and life in it, it puts forth vital and spiritual Actions. Hence our Saviour calls it no less than eternal life, Joh. 17. 3. it forges out the blood and vital Spirits of the new Creature, strengthens him with spiritual Bones and Sinews, and fets him in Motion towards the Crown of Life in Heaven.

1. The first was this, That Man's Will doth infallibly and necessarily follow the practical Understanding, and this I shall endeavour to make out,

1. From God's Ordination, in which there are two things to be considered.

1. God never made the Will of Man to

2. God

2. God never made it to go alone:both which may yet be, if it follow not the pra-

Cical Understanding.

f. God never made the Will of Man to frand alone, but he would have it depend upon the Understanding: As he made the Sensitive Appetite to depend upon the Senses, so he made the Will to depend upon the Understanding. Hence the Will, which is in it self but caca Potentia, a blind Power, in its dependance is see Rhin. Li. 1. Jeegis µēlà hôys, a rational Appetite. If the Will do not depend upon the Understanding, where doth it stand but upon the Base of its own Independency? You'l say, No, not so, for still it is under the guidance of Providence. I answer, That Providence, which rules all things in a sweet Congruity to their Natures, rules the Will, not as a Brute but as a rational Appetite; and how that can be without its dependance on the Understanding I know not.

2. God never made it to go alone; 'tis in it self but a blind Power, and God never made the blind to go alone. Even in Brutes there is Sense to light the appetite, much more in Man Understanding to light the Will. Hence the Understanding is called to inpercounder, the leading or ruling Faculty, and lucerna Domini, the candle of the Lord, Prov. 20.27. without it the Will is all in the dark. If the Will can go alone in any Acts, furely it must be in Acts of Sin, which have much of darkness in them; but even there, whilest the holy Law of God is violated, the Dictates of the corrupt Understanding are observed: If the Will can go alone in any Acts of Sin, furely it must be above all in such Acts 49 are most against Knowledge; but even there, whilest theoretical Knowledge is opposed, the practical Judgment is suf-filled. Hence such presumptuous sinners as rebel against the light, are yet said to walk in their own counsels, Pfal. 81.12. because they follow their practical Judgement ; and to erre in their hearts, Pfal. 95. To because that practical Judgment which they follow is corrupt and erroneous; and to make them Idols according to their own understanding, Hos. 13.2. because first the Understanding frames the Idol, and then the Will falls down and worshippeth.

2. I argue from the Will it self, which may be considered two ways, either as it is in it self, or as it is in dependance upon the Understanding.

1. As it is in it felf, and so it is an Appetite; its Object is Good real or at least apparant, (for malum, quà malum, non est appetibile) and that Good must be propofed by the Understanding, for that is inftead of Eyes to the Will. Suppose then that the Understanding do shew forth to the Will such a thing as good pro hic & nunc, and that so good, that it is immediately to be embraced, and cannot without a present evil be neglected, no not for a moment; if in this Case the Will may sefuse this Object, it may appetere malum Sub ratione mali, that is, appetere non appetibile, and in so doing it may cease to be, what it effentially is, an Appetite.

2. As it is in dependance upon the Understanding, and so it is a rational Appetite, and (which results from thence) it is a free Appetite; the root of its Freedom is in the Understanding. Why hath a Will a liberty of Spontaneity to some Objects, but because the Understanding represents them as good pro hic or nunc? Why a liberty of Contradiction to other Objects, but because the Understanding looks on them as matters of little or no moment? One would think so odious and detestable a thing as Sin, could not be chosen by the

the Will; but the erring Understandinggilds and glosses it over with a shew of Good. One would think, fuch glorious and all-defirable Objects as are in the Gofpel could not be refused by the Will, but the blind Understanding sees little or no worth at all in them. But now if the practical Judgment propose a thing as Good, and the Will reject it, 'tis no longer a rational Appetite but a Brute; neither is it any longer free, but cut off and in statu separato from the Root and Fountain of its Liberty; neither is its Act a free Act, but belluinus impetus, a brutish violence, for it hath no Understanding at all at the root and bottom of it, no more than the Act of a Beast hath. What then shall we say? Can the Will cease to be a rational and free Appetite? Or may it be rational and free without an Understanding? Neither of these can be: Wherefore it remains that it must follow the practical Judgment, and so continue free and rational.

3. I argue from the Effect, which shews much of harmony between the Posture of the Understanding and the Posture of the Will. Is the Understanding determinate? So is the Will: Hence if the Understanding represent a thing as good, the Will embraces it as fuch, if as a greater good, it embraces it the more, if as a fummum bonum, it embraces it summo conatu. On the other hand, if the Understanding represent a thing as evil, the Will starts back from it; if as a greater evil, it flies yet further from it; if as malum maximum, it can never fly far enough from it. Is the Understanding pendulous? So is the Will too: Hence if the Understanding represent a thing as a matter indifferent, having little or nothing of moment in it, one way or other, the Will doth not infallibly will it as it doth the good, nor nill it as it doth the evil, but in a pendulous way it hangs off and plays on, because the Understanding doth not pronounce it good or evil, but only indifferent. The Will observes every motion of the practical Judgment; if that fay, Yonder is such a good, the Will cleaves to it as Ruth to Naomi; if that fay, There is such an evil, the Will flies from it as Moses from the Serpent; if that say, Such a thing is indifferent, the Will stands as the King of Babylon, at the parting of the way, Ezek. 21.21. it may will or not will; for there is an aquilibrium in the Will answering the aquilibrium in the Understanding. 4. I

4. I argue from the confequent Abfurdity: If the Will do not follow the practical Judgment, then although the pracical Judgment be never fo right, yet may the Will transgress, and by consequence a man may be a finner and no fool, which is impossible. In Scripture Sin is אַנְּחָשְׁתְּחַ מְאַנִי aberration, Ifai. 5. 18. auagla, a miffing of the mark, I Joh. 3. 4. ayvonua, an ignarance, Heb. 9.7. πλάνη, an error, Rom. 1.27. error in heart, Heb. 3. 10. and error of may, James 5.20. and (which is the fullest expression of all) folly, foolishness and madness, Eccl. 7.25. as if all words were too little to express the folly thereof: Also sinners are straglers or manderers, Isai. 53. 6. avontos, without mind, Tit. 3.3. simple ones such aswant beart, Prov. 9. 4. атты, unreasonable men, 2 Theff. 3.2. fools, nay madmen, Ads 26.11. nay, as if there were nothing of Man in them, aλογα ζωα, brute heasts, 2 Pet. 2. 12. Even in the first Sin of Man the Apostle tells us, that the moman analubeioa, being deceived, was in the transgressian, 1 Tim. 2.14. First there was an Error, a false End in her mind, and then the forbidden fruit was embraced by her Will. But now after all this, if the practical Judgment be right fet, and yet the Will may turn away unto Sin,

Sin, then that which is impossible in Scripture may be possible in Nature; there may be a Sinner and no Fool, Sin and no Folly, Wandring without Error, missing the Mark without any false End, Transgression and nothing of Deception in it, a Man and a Brute coupled together in the same Act, the Understanding playing the Man in its right directions, and the Will playing the Brute in its irrational aversation: All which Absurdities are unavoidable by such as affert, that the Will doth not follow the practical Judgment.

2. Posit. Leaving the first Position, I procede to the second, viz. That the Will of Man doth infallibly follow the practical Understanding in the matter of Con-

And here again I might reinforce the former Arguments with an Emphasis: If the Will cannot stand alone and upon the bottom of its own independency in other matters, much less can it do so in Conversion, to which the working and drawing of Almighty Grace is requisite: If in other matters the Will cannot go alone without the Torch of Reason, surely in Conversion it cannot go alone without the Torch of supernatural Illumination. If the Will by deferting a leffer good propoposed by the Understanding do appetere malum sub ratione mali, then the Will by deserting God proposed as the summum bonum by the Understanding doth appeteresummum malum so; if the Will by rejecting an inferiour Good proposed by the practical Judgment must become bruitish and irrational, how much more bruitish and irrational must it become by rejecting the summum bonum so proposed? If the Will may be determined by the Understanding as to a leffer Good, nay, as to a false lying Good, as in the Case of Sin, how much rather may it be so determined as to the summum bonum? If by the Wills turning away from the Understanding right set, there may be Sin in the Will, and no Folly in the Understanding, which is impossible; then by such turning away there may be no Charity in the Will, and yet true Faith in the Understanding, which is also impossible. But pretermine ting thefe, I come more closely to the Thefis, that is, That the Will doth follow the Understanding in the business of Conversion. Now whereas the Conversion of the Will is double; either it is the production of gracious Principles in the Will, or it is the actual Conversion of the Will: in the first the Will is Passive, in the other Active. The Wills following the Understanding is double also; as to the Principles of Grace in the Will, the Understanding is as the Channel through which those Principles are infused into the Will; as to the actual Conversion of the Will, the Understanding is as a potent Perswader inducing the Will unto actual Conversion. In the first the Will follows the Underflanding paffively only and by way of reception of Principles 5 in the second the Will follows the Understanding Actively and by way of free Actuation of those Principles.

I shall speak somewhat to both these.

I. As to the Principles of Grace in the Will, the Understanding is as the Channel through which those Principles are transfused into the Will. God doth not insuse the Principles of Grace into the Will a weaks, but he puts in his hand by the hole of the door, and so the churches bowels are moved for him, Cant. 5.4. he puts in his Grace at the Understanding, and so the Will and Affections are turned to him; he purifies the heart by faith, Acts 15.9. that is, through Faith in the Understanding he influences Holiness

Holiness into the Will, and this Holiness is called by the Apostle holiness of truth, Eph. 4.24. not only because 'tis a real Holiness, but especially because 'tis wrought through the Truth, first entring in at the Understanding, and so passing on to the Will: and that this is the Apostle's meaning appears, because he opposes holines of truth, in the 24. Verse, to the lusts of deceit in the 22. Verse. As those are lusts of deceit, because the lusting Will follows upon the erring Understanding, so this is koliness of truth, because the holy Will follows upon the true Understanding. The practical Knowledge of God is stiled eternal life, Job. 17.3. and a well-spring of life, Prov. 16.22.8 the reason is, because through it all quickning Graces do as a River of Life flow into the Will. Above all that of the Apostle is most pregnant, Beholding as in a glass the glory of God, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory as by the spirit of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3.18. The Glory of God is reflected from Christ upon the Gospel, and from the Gospel upon the Understanding, and from the Understanding upon the Will, and so we are changed into his glorious Image. In Man's first Transgression Death entred in at the Windows of the Gg 2 Mind,

Mind, and so got into the secret Closet of the Heart, and in Man's first Conversion Life comes in at the Mind and so passes down into the Will. All the Grace that a man hath (faith Dr. Preston)paffes in through the Understanding; and if it were not so, how could the Word be an Instrument of the Wills Regeneration? There is no paffage for it into the Will but through the Understanding. In Regeneration the Law is writ in the heart, and how can that be but through the Understanding? The appetitive Faculty is naturally crooked, and if ever it be made right, it must be through the apprehensive Faculty: all the things of Godliness are given δια π βπηνώσεως, through the knowledge of God, 2 Pet. 1. 3. that's the great Channel by which all Grace passes into the Will.

2. As to the actual Conversion of the Will, the Understanding is as a potent Per-swader effectually inducing the Will thereunto. There are three principal things in the Wills actual Conversion, viz. a turning to God as its supreme End, an embracing Christ as the only Way, and a rejection of Sin as the great Obstacle; and in all these the Will doth follow the Understanding.

1. The Will doth follow the Understanding in its turn to God as the supreme End, and this appears divers ways.

1. The Scriptures clear it to us; there we find in conjunction bethinking and turning, 2Chron. 6.37. remembring and turning, Pfal. 22.27. considering and turning, Ezek. 18.28. understanding and turning, Mat. 13. 15. and opening the eyes and turning, Act. 26.18. in all which places the Understanding goes before, and the Will follows after. There we find Conversion to be a thing wrought by Perswasion, God shall persmade Japheth, Gen. 9. 27. by Inshining, God bath shined in our hearts, 2 Cor. 4. 6. by Teaching, they shall be all taught of God, Joh. 6.45. by Anointing, you have an uncti-on from the holy one, I Joh. 2. 20. and by coming to a mans self, Luk. 15. 17. first the Prodigal came to himself, and then he returned to his Father: the import of all which is plainly thus much, That God doth actually draw home the Will unto himself through the Understanding; Thy people (saith the Psalmist) shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness, from the womb of the morning thou hast the dew of thy youth, Pfal. 110.3. here are a willing People like the Dew for multitude, Gg 3 but but whence are they? Whence, but from the momb of the morning? The morning of supernatural Illumination is the Womb out of which they issue: As long as there is no morning in men, as the Expression is, Isai. 8.20. there is no Will at all to God; but as soon as the day dawns in their hearts, out comes a willing People as Dew from

2. The Nature of the Will holds forth thus much: The Will naturally wills Blefsedness or the ultimate End in general, because it is a Good perfective and expletive of the Soul, but the Will doth not naturally fix on this or that thing as its bleffedness or ultimate End in particular. Man fixes on Mammon as his chief Good, another makes his Belly his God, a third is all for the Pride of Life; whence is the Will thus determined? Either it must be determined by it felf, or else by the Understanding; not by it self, for it is a blind Faculty, and cannot of it felf judg any thing to be a chief Good, much less can it fix it felf on it as fuch; wherefore it must be determined by the Understanding. One Man chuses Mammon to be his chief Good, · because (as the Psalmist hath it)his inward thought is that his bonfe shall continue for ever, ever, Pfal, 49. 11. that's lasting happines, faith his carnal Understanding. Another makes his Belly his God, because his inward thought is, Eat, drink, and be merry, Luk.12.19. there is nothing better, faith his bruitish Understanding. A third is all for the Pride of Life, because his inward thought is, to be a Lucifer in Self-excellencies, that's the top of Blis, saith his soaring Understanding. In every one of these, first the Understanding makes the Idol, and then the Will doth fall down and worthip. Now if the Will may be determined by the Understanding to such false Beatitudes as these, how much more may it be determined by the Understanding to God who is the true bleffedness?

3. This appears from the Excellency of that practical Understanding which draws the Will unto actual Conversion. 'Tis an excellent Understanding for the Object of it; being in the Mount of Transfiguration it shews forth unto the Will, not Creatures, Chips of Being, in the shell of Time, but a Jehovah of Self-beingness, a God of Allsussiciency dwelling in Eternity; not Streams of Life or Goodness in the Creature-channel, but a Fountain of living waters, an Ocean of immense Goodness, such as cannot be failed over by Faith or Visions not golden or pearly Mountains, but an infinite Mass of free Grace, unsearchable riches of Mercy, such as cannot be told over to all Eternity; not shadows or little portions of Being, but the To av, Revel. 1.4. the true I am, the To molifa, or the all things, 1 Cor. 15. 28. in whom are all the rich Mines of univerfal Bleffedness; and (which is the sweetness of all) it shews forth this God not as referving himself only to himfelf, but as freely offering himself to poor worms. Oh my Soul! Stand Still and adore the opening of his Bowels and Self-motion of his Grace; this Jehovah of Selfbeingness and All-sufficiency will make over himself to thee, this Fountain of Life and Goodness will flow out to thee, this rich Mass of Grace and Mercy will portion thee, this I am and ever-bleffed All is an inheritance for thee, and in inheriting him thou maist after a wonderful manner inherit all things. This is the infinite Excellency of the Object; but after what manner doth the Understanding shew it forth unto the Will? Surely, though as much below his worth as finite is below infinite, yet in an excellent way; the Understanding shews forth God unto the Will not in a dead or literal manner, but with spiritual liveliness and (as I may so say) in sparkles of Glory ; for it is eternal life, and Heaven it felf dawns in it, not darkly or at a distance, but clearly and closely; the day-ftar is up in the heart, and God approaches near unto the Will, his goodness passes before it, and leaves some holy touches and favours thereupon; not in a weak and languishing manner, but powerfully and effectually. The Apostle joins the demonstration of the Spirit and power together, 1 Cor. 2.4. There is such a Demonstration of the Spirit in the Understanding as cannot be denied, and from thence such a Power upon the Will as cannot be frustrated, not notionally only but practically; it feriously presseth in upon the Will. Here, O rational Appetite! here is a God indeed; his Grace free, his Mercy Self-moving; take him and thou hast all, lose him and thou hast nothing : Now, Oh! now is the accepted time, the day of Salvation; in his Favour there is Life, in his Wrath nothing but Death: If he bless thee, none can curse, if he curse thee none can bles; now or never turn and live. After this manner doth it practically press in upon the Will. Now when the

the Understanding holds forth such an excellent Object in such an excellent manner unto the Will, already principled with Grace, how can it chuse but actually close in with it? Such a Knowledge being really actuated, can the Will turn alide to other Objects for its happines? The simple one may turn away, Prov. 1. 32. but shall a man of understanding do so? A deceived beart may turn aside, Isai. 44. 20. but shall the wife in heart do so? A heart of unbelief may depart from the living God, Heb. 3. 12. but shall a man of precious faith do so? But whither can be turn? What, to the Riches of the World? 'Tis but dross to the unfearchable Riches of Christ, saith the Understanding: What, to Honours? 'Tis but a blaft to the true Honour which cometh of God only, faith the Understanding: What, to Pleasures ? These are muddy Puddles to the pure Rivers of Pleasure above, faith the Understanding. This Understanding doth as it were blast all the World, crucifie the Universe, and by a prospect of Faith see the Heavens on fire, the Earth burnt up, and the Elements melting with fervent heat, and can the Will fall in love with the Dust and Cinders of it? Surely it will not. But if the Will cannot turn turn afide to such false Beatitudes, yet may it not suspend its Act as to the true? Sufpend!what from its own bleffedness verily, thoroughly believed? What from God the all in all plainly, powerfully demonstrated to be such? And what for just nothing, for a sic volo? Can it be so brutishly free at so dear a rate as to be eternally miserable? Will it hang off from perfect Bleffedness ? or can it do fo, and the fummu malu not fall into its embraces? And may a Will renewed with the holy Ghost, and right set by gracious Principles do thus? Surely it cannot, They that know thy name will trust in thee, Psal.9. 10. and (which follows upon Trust) will love thee, and (which streams from Love) will obey thee, and (which is the Crown of Obedience) will refign up themselves to thee for all their happiness. Where such an excellent Understanding goes before, there the Will doth infallibly follow after, even in actual Conversion unto God as its fupreme End.

2. The Will doth follow the Understanding in its embracing of Christ as the only way, and this appears

1. From several Sciptures. To know fefus Christ is eternal life, Job. 17.3. it quickens the Will to embrace him. Christ told the the Woman, If thou hadst known the gift of God, and who it is that faith unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water, Joh. 4. 10. A true Knowledge of Christ would have inflamed her defires after him, and those desires would have breathed out prayers for the living Water. Our Saviour quotes that in the Prophets [And they shall be all taught of God] and and what follows upon that teaching? Every man therefore (faith he) that bath beard and learned of the Father cometh unto me, Joh. 6.45. True Knowledge makes a man come to Christ, and that without fail, for 'tis so in every man that hears and learns of the Father, not in one or two, but in every man, and how doth Knowledge do this? How, but by glorifying Christ unto the Will? The Spirit (faith Christ) shall glorifie me ; how fo? He shall take of mine and shall shew unto you, Job. 16. 14,15. the holy Spirit takes Christ and shews him after a wonderful manner, it glorifies him in the Understanding, and through the Understanding it glorifies him before the Will, and so the Will is sweetly and strongly drawn unto him.

2. From the Will it self. If the Will be determined

determined by the Understanding, unto God as its ultimate End, then is it also determined by the Understanding, unto Christ as the only way thereunto. Indeed if the Understanding did propose an End, and withal two distinct ways of equal tendency thereunto, then the Will might be free to either of those ways: But when the Understanding proposes God as the End, and Christ as the only Way to that End, then the Will must infallibly close in with Christ; it must, or lose its End or Blessedness; it must, or the summu malu will fall into its arms. When the Understanding tells the Will in good earnest, there is no other way but one, there is no other Name under Heaven but Jesus only, the Will is fweetly constrained into his embraces.

3. From the Understanding which shews forth Christ to be the perfect Way sutable to all our wants in our passage to God the true End. Thou wouldest come to God but for the weight of Sin and Wrath, Loe, here is an High-priest with Expiating Blood; thou wouldst come to God but thou knowest not the way thither, here's a Prophet with words of Light and Life; thou wouldst come to God but for the pressure of thy reigning Lusts, here's a King with a Sceptre of Righteousness to subdue them; thou wouldst come to God but for want of a gracious Heart, here's a Treasury of all Grace and Holiness. The Understanding still points at Christ; Art thou in darkness? he is a sun of righteousness; Art thou in death?he is the resurrection and the life; Art thou a withered branch? he is a root offatness and sweetness; Art thou a lost and halfdamned Crearure? he is a Saviour able to Save to the uttermost. This Understanding glorifies Christ in all his Offices, fings the long of the Lamb, and cries him up for altogether precious; this is the Window or Lattels at which his all-fair Person looks in upon the Will, the Conduit through which the sweet Ointment of his Name is poured out unto the Will, and the Crucifix which shews forth his bloody Passion in lively colours before the Will. This Understanding practically presses the Will to embrace him; O my Soul! now hear and live 3 take him and everlasting Mercy meets thee, leave him and devouring Juflice overtakes thee; catch hold on this Prince of Life, or die for ever; look up to this Brightness of Glory, or be in utter Darkness; wash in his Blood, or bleed in in eternal Flames; put on his righteoufness, or be naked to all Eternity; there is no way into the Holy of Holies, but through the Veil of his Flesh; enter, and thou halt an ever-bleffed God to make thee happy neglect, and thou hast a righteous God to make thee for ever miler-When Christ through the Understanding thus pours out his precious Name as an Ointment unto the Will, how can it chuse but love him? When through this hole of the door he thus drops in his sweetsmelling Truths upon the Will, how can it chuse but rise and open to him? If it do not, whither will it turn? What, to the Creatures? they are all Blackamoors to this all-lovely Jesus; What, to repentant Tears? those want washing in his Blood; What, to its good Works and Righteoufness? they are but a filthy Rag. There is fuch a to capezor, fuch a transcendent Excellency in the Knowledge of Christ, that it makes all other things but as dung before the Will, Phil.3.8. Hence the Will hath no whither elfe to turn : But if it turn no whither else, may it not suspend its Act as to Christ? Suspend! what from the only way to Blessedness evidently pointed out? What from him who is all desires really believed lieved to be fuch? Can it thus wave Happiness and embrace mere nothing in the room thereof? and can it do thus when a right-set Understanding is really actuated, and it felf truly principled with Grace? Surely it cannot be. No fooner did Christ fee the budding Graces of his Church, but his foul made him like the chariots of Amminadib, Cant. 6. 11, 12. and no fooner do Christians see the lovely Excellencies of Christ, but they will become an Amminadib, a willing people, and their Wills as so many swift Chariots to convey them unto him. Thus the Will follows the Understanding in its embraces of Christ as the Way.

3. The Will follows the Understanding in its rejection of Sin as the great Obstacle,

I. From several Scriptures; there we find on the one hand that Folly is the root of the Commission of Sin, The foolishness of man perverteth his way, Prov. 19. 3. Why doth the Atheist say in his heart, there is no God? Because he is a fool, Psal. 14. 1. Why do the Mammonists boast and trust in their uncertain Riches? Because their way is their folly, Psal. 49. 13. Why doth the blind Idolater fall down to the Stock of a Tree & Because a deceived heart bath turned bim afide, Ifai. 44.19,20. Why did the rebellious Ifraelites grieve their good God forty years together? Because they did err in their hearts, Mal. 95.10. On the other hand, there we find that true Wifdom or Understanding is the root of the rejection of Sin, To depart from evil is understanding fob 28.28. the pollutions of the world are escaped through the knowledge of. Chrift, 2 Pet. 2.20. through thy precepts (faith David) I get understanding, what then? therefore I bate every false way, Psal. 1193 104. and again, I efteem all thy precepts to be right, and what follows? I hate every false way, Ver. 1 28. First, there was a right Judgement in his Understanding, and thence issued an hatred of Sin in his Will. For all the Wolves and the Leopards, yet (faith God) they shall not hurt nor de-Groy in all my holy Mountain; why fo? Because the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, Wai. 11.9. that faving Knowledge should turn them into Lambs and little Children, and make them leave off their barbarous and inhumane cruelty. Hence Repentance (which includes in it an hatred and rejection of Sin) is filed udávoa, a transmentation or postmentations firous becau e

2. From the Will it felf . If that follow the Understanding in turning to God as its fupreme End, and in embracing of Christ as the only way, then by necessary confequence it mult needs follow the Understanding in the rejection of Sin as the great Obstacle; for if it follow not here alfo, it must wave its supreme End and the Way thither, it must resolve upon a Happiness without God and Christ. If the Understanding say to the Will, There is no other Cloud betwixt thee and the Father of Lights, no other distance betwixt thee and the Fountain of living Waters, none but Sin alone, furely the Will must bid it be gone for ever.

3. From the Understanding which so represents Sin, as that the Will doth turn away from it, and this it doth three ways.

In as a grand evil; it fets a forth as an Atuxy in man, Rebellion against God, Spears and Nails to Jesus Christ, Quench-coal to the Spirit of Grace, Blur and Stain to the Soul, groaning Burthen on the back of the whole Creation, Venom and perfect Quintessence of all evils, a thing of such montured.

Atrons deformities, as if it did appear in its own prodigious fhape, would not be touched upon by Man, and how can the Will being a rational Appetite doat upon fuch a thing? Surely upon it as fuch it care hor; wherefore Sin (that it may be welcome to the Will) covers it felf with Figleaves as Adam, it veils its face like Tamer, It paints and tires like Jesabet, it diffailes and feigns it felf to be another like Jeroboum's Wife, it courts and flatters to Itealaway hearrs like Abfalom, It comes like grippa and Bernice with great pompin famcy of fome apparent goodness; offering it. felf to out Saviour it wrapped up it leff in all the glories of the World, nay, in the Mantle of Scripture and Angelical protection; coming to Adam, it held forth an Apple, and promifed no les than a God' head; ever it hath a lye and a cheat in it. Hence it is called a false way, Pfal. 1 19/1041 and no nes the work of a lye, Prov. 116 18. there is in it week, a fleight, as in cogging Dice, Epb.4.14. it makes every finnet believe that he shall have the cast of happines, but coggs away his Soul. This is that devertfulnefs of lin by which it infimuates it felf into the Will; but this right Under handing hath a counted work, it aideaves Hha and unveils Sin, it unpaints & undresses it, it plucks off it false appearances and disguiles, it disrobes it of all its pomps and fancy, it discovers the lye and cheat in it, and makes it appear in its own ugly hue and hameful nakedness ; Achan's Sin was wrapt up in a Babylonish Garment, but unclothe it, and it was an accursed thing ; Saul's Sin was covered over with Sacrifices, but unveil it, and 'twas witchcraft-like rebellion; Judas his Sin about the precious Ointment was painted over with Charity, but unpaint it and 'twas arrant thievery; Paul's Sin wore a Cloak of Zeal, but undress it, and twas bloody persecution. This right Understanding plucks the lye out of Sins mouth, and the paint off from its face, and all the Robes of apparent Goodness off from its back ; and fo constrains it to go naked before the Will, and thereby it appears what it is, αμασίωλος αμασία, sinning sin, Rom.7.13. the evil of evils, Hof. 10.15. altogether evil, and nothing but evil; and now how can the Will embrace it as good? How can it chuse but reject it as evil? Now, if ever, shall Sin be crucified. Malefactors were first stripped and then crucified : Sin in its Attire is a King in its Robes fitting 111 fitting on the Heart as a Throne; but Sin' stript naked by the Understanding is a Malefactor ready for the Cross, and there the Will will furely nail it; the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing, faith the Prophet, Ifai. 10.27. Sin is a Yoke upon the Will fastened there by a lye, an appearance of some false Good, but the Anointing (which is truth, 1 Joh. 2.27.) reveals the lye, and then off comes the yoke. Doth Sin profer a World? This Anoint, ing is an inward Ecclesiastes crying out, All is vanity; Doth it profer Honors or Riches or Pleasures? What for a Soul, a Christ; a God? No cheat like that, faith the Anointing; Doth it promise Happines? You do but flatter and lye, faith the Anoining, you have nothing but Death and Hell to beflow. Christ was manifelted, iva Nuona that be might diffolve the works of the devil, that is, fins in men, t Joh. 3. 8. and he dissolves them by this Anointing. Sin is in union with the Will, because Sin is in compofition with some seeming Good; break the composition between Sin and the seeming Good, and you dissolve the union between Sin and the Will. The worldly Man's Will is in union with his Sin, because his Sin is in composition with the World; Hh a break kanding, make him indeed fee that the World is but without a figure or fashion, and Riches but attained that is not a difficive the World by Faith, and instantly the Sin will drop out of his Will, for Sin as mere Sin will not down with the Will. If therefore the compound of apparent Goodness be once broken by the Understanding, the Will must needs cast it out as altogether evil, because it is an Object capable of its embraces.

The Understanding doth represent Sin as the Devils Work. Should the Devill visibly appear, and offer to the Covecoush's Bags or to the Drunkard his Cups, forely they would hardly take them at his hands. Wherefore Satan transforms him-Telf into many shapes, and puts on Changes of Raiment that he may act invitible. But on the other hand, Christ commonwalles, foils, or more property, and lother him, col:2.15. he spoiled him metroriously on the Cross, and unclothes him efficaciously in the Hearts of Men. Christ was fo mick of under fanding, that he found out Sarah even in Peter's tender indulgence; and Christ gives such a true Understanding unto the Heart, that it fees Savan lurking In every Sin: Oh! fays the true Understanding, there is a bloody Devil in all thy Malice, a blasphemous Devil in all thy Prophaneness, a lying Devil in all thy Hypocrifies, a proud Devil in all thy Selfexcellencies, a Devil in the Swine in all thy Sensualities, and in every Sin Satan stands at thy right band, Now when the Devil thus appears in Sin, surely the Will

3. The Understanding doth represent Sin as the way Obltacle of Happinels. The Understanding views the all-bleffed God with his infinite Bowels, and the all-precious Jesus with his infinite Merits; it lets in some Glimpses of Glory, and takes as it were a Profpect of Evernity ; it travels over the Land of Promile, and falles the Milk and Honey of free Grace flowing theres and after all this it cries out. Oh! my Soul, nothing can hinder thee from all these bur Sin, nor Sin neither, unless in-dulg'd this is the only Gulf between thee and thy God, the only Diftance between thee and thy sweet Jesus, the only Bar to the Heaven of Glory, and the only Flaw in thy title to the Land of Promise. When the Understanding shews Sin to be such indeed, surely the Will cannot but reject it.

Thus

Thus the Will follows the Understanding, in turning to God the supreme End, in embracing Christ the only Way, and in rejecting Sin the great Obstacle, which are the three grand things in actual Converfion.

Now here I would have closed up this Point, but that there are two main Obje-

ons to be lolved.
Object. 1. This Thesis of the Wills following the Understanding takes away the necessity of gracious Principles in the Wills

Object. 2. This Thefis overturns the Liberty of the Will.

. This Thefis takes away the necessity of gracious Principles in the Will; what need of any there, sceing the Will is fo good a follower?

As to this I shall answer two things.

1. This Thefit is fo far from taking away the necessity of gracious Principles in the Will, that it discovers the way how those gracious Principles come to be wrought there. Tis in this Case between the Understanding and those gracious Principles, as'tis between the beams of Light and the accompanying Heat: As Heat comes down from the Sun into the lower World in the Vehicle

Vehicle of natural Light, fo Holine's comes down from the Sun of Righteousness into the Will in the Vehicle of Supernatural Light. When the Day dawns in the Heart, the Heart waxes warm with spiritual Life; Give me understanding, faith David, and I hall keep thy Lawyeast shall keep it with my whole heart Pfal. 119.34. Why is he fo carnest for Understanding? Is the Understanding all? May not the Will hang back for all that? No, Give me Understanding and I shall keep thy Law; yea, I shall keep it with my whole heart: that will fer all my Soul in a right posture towards the Law of God. o Ready by which fraise wardoir

2. Notwithstanding this Thesis, there is yet a treble Necessity of gracious Principles in the Will; for

1. God calls for them.

2. The Will it self stands in need of them.

3. The Perfection of the new Creature

ne calls for a heart, a pure heart, such as works out the mixtures of Corruption; a right heart, such as lies level to the Rule of Righteousness; this he desires, he desires truth in the inward parts, Pfal. 51,6. this he delights delights in, he bath pleasure in uprightness, 1 Chron. 29. 174 where this is found, he passes by many infirmities ; I have eaten (faith Christ) my boney-comb with my honey, Wax and all, Wax and all, Game. 5. T. Infirmities do not hinder acceptance; but where this is wanting, he fots a black mark upon men, even whilest they do that which is materially good. Amaziah did that which was right in the light of the Lord, but not with a perfect bears, a Chron. 27.2. there is a black mark fet upon him for want of Inregrity. But now without gracious Principles in the Heart, how can the Heart be right or pure? which way can God's Call be uniwered, or his Defire or Delight ateccliny of gracious (bonier

2. The Will it self stands in need of them. The Will of fallen Man what is it but a very Shoal of inordinate Affections, a Womb of evil Concupiscence? Here is the Earth place on Nation, the conceiving last, Jam. 1.15. that which teems out a generation of wickednesses: Here is an Abys, a bottomies Pit of evils, such as smoaks and vomits up all manner of Abominations. Every earnal Heart hath in it a plague of Rottemess which is still starting from God, & an Iron-sinew of Rebellion which is still concontradicting God; and how can this Hell of Lust in the Will ever be quenched but by the clean water & How can this deadly wound of Corruption there ever be healed but by gracious Principles? c. abido

- 13. The Perfection of the new Creature cannot fland without them. The new Creature is a new man, all over new, new in its Defires as well as in its Intellectuals; tis a perfett man in Chrift , perfect in all its parts 3 it hath a Heart as well as a Head. Should the Will want gracious Principles, the new Creature must want a Heart, the old Heart will not ferve the turn; the new Man is but balf a Man withone a new bearing There was put into the Breast-plate of Judgment the Vrim and the Thumming that is, Lights and Perfectione, both were in it or elfe it had nor been perfect : The full substance of this Type was only in Christ, who was full of all Grace and Truth & but there is a measure ofit in every true Christian, who puts on the breast-plate of faith and love, Theff. 3. 8. Faithis w kind of Vrim in his Under-Standing, and Love a kind of Thummin in his Will; and both together make up his complete Breaft plate. But if there were no gracious Principles in his Will, he should have have an Orim without a Thummim, Light in the Mind without Integrity in the Heart; and by consequence he could be but one half of a Christian.

Object. 2. This Thesis overturns the Liberty of the Will; for if the Will be determined by the Understanding, how is it free? and if free, how determined?

I answer; There are three things, which well weighed give a perfect Solution to this Objection.

Abfurdity.

Notion of Liberty

stating of Liberty. mebal to an in-

Abfurdity of If the Will being determined by the Understanding lose its Freedom, then it loseth its Freedom by an adhesion to the Root of its Freedom; and it cannot be free, unless it can turn Brute, which is a great Absurdity. You'l say, Is this so absurd? Doth not the Will turn Brute in closing with sensual Lustwand doth not the Scripture call men Beasts upon that account? I answer, that the Will in closing with its sensual Lusts is brutish as to the Matter

Matter of its choice, but not as to the Manner of it, because it hath an humane Unstanding (though corrupt) going before it; but if it can turn away from the Understanding, it can turn Brute even as to the Manner of its Acting: for then its Act hath no Understanding at all at the bottom of it, no more than the Act of a Beast, which is very abfurd in a rational Appetite.

2. This Objection stands upon a falle Notion of Liberty, viz. That the Liberty of the Will doth essentially consist in an iσοξοσεία or άδιαφοεία, in an equilibrium or indeterminate Indisferency, whereby it may will or not will a thing; for why, according to this Objection, is the Will not free? Why, but because it is determined? And why is it not free, if determined? Because its Freedom doth consist essentially in such an equilibrium, as cannot stand with any determination but what is merely from it self. Now that this is a falle Notion of Liberty doth appear many ways: For

3. If Liberty do essentially consist in such an Indisserency, then what shall we say to Jesus Christ on Earth? Had not he as Man all the Essentials of Liberty? Was not all his Obedience perfectly free? and yet did not his humane Will indeclinably follow his divine? Was there a posse peccare in that spotless Lamb? Could that humane Nature (conceived by the holy Ghost, and inseparably united to the Godhead) could that also transgress? Surely, it could not. I do nothing of my felf, saith Christ, Joh. 8.28. nay, & odvapan, I can do nothing of my felf, Joh. 5. 30. nothing; in such perfect dependance was his humane Will upon his divine, not the shadow of an equilibrium there, and yet the substance of perfect Liberry.

2. If Liberty do effentially confift in fuch an Indifferency, what fay we to the bleffed Saints in Heaven? Have not they all the ellentials of Liberty? Are those Spirits made perfect in every thing elle but that? Is that the thing that is wanting in Heaven? No furely ; glorious Liberty cannot but be there, and yet what of an adiapogla; There God is All in all, and the Saints cannot take off their Eyes from him for ever; his Will is perfectly triumphant over theirs, and their Will is perfectly determined by his, so determined, as not to glance alide from it to all Eternity : And yet in this Determination Liberty is not deltroyed but perfected, the Will is not in ftraits ftraits or bonds, but in a Sabbath of Rest and Joy. Here's nothing of an equilibrium; that kind of Liberty is so magnissed on Earth, that it shall never be glorised in Heaven; and if it be not glorised there, sure 'tis no Essential here.

3. If Liberty do effentially confift in fuch an indifferency, then how shall the divine Proscience be salved? God knoweth all the free Acts of men, even the Thoughts as a roff, from the high Tower of his Eternity: But if the Will be in equilibrio, its Acts (before they come into Being) must be mere Contingencies, and without any determinate Verity at all in them, and how then are they knowable as Certainties? To know Contingencies as Certainties, is to erre and not to know.

4. If Liberty do essentially consist in such an Indisferency, then what becomes of divine Providence? Providence hath a Kingdom over men's Hearts. We find in Scripture God touching the heart, I Sum. 10.26. stirring up the heart, 2 Chron. 36.22. opening the heart, Adia 16. 14. enclining the heart, T Kings 8. 58. and turning the heart whithersever he will, Prov. 21.1. And after all this, is the Will in equilibrius If not, where is the supposed Liberty? If so,

where is the divine Providence? All its touching, firring, opening, enclining and turning the Heart fignifies litle or nothing. Infinite Wildom and Power feem to have posed themselves in making such a Creature as they cannot govern, or at least not govern without destroying its faculties; the infinite Spirit hath then nothing to rule of ver but the brutal World, and the rational is loft, out of his Dominions; Men must fubfilt like Creatures, and yet may act as Gods ; their Being is within the Realm of Providence, and their Acting without it. In a word; when we read of God over all, we must ever except the rational Greature. Wherefore that is no true Notion of Liberty, which is so opposite to the Sceptre of divine Providence

5. I shall add but one thing more: Every Man is born under a Futurition of all the Acts which he will produce, or elfe those Acts should be present in Time which never were future, which is impoffible ; and every Futurition implies in it a necessity of Immutability, or else that which is future might cease to be such without coming into actual Being, which is impossible: Hence it appears, that humane Liberty doth well confilt with a necellity ceffity of Immutability; nay, it cannot stand without: Take away all Necessity, and you take away all Futurition; take away all Futurition, and you take away all the free Acts of the Creature; for those free Acts could not be Acts, much less free Acts, in time, unless they were future before; and future they could not be without fuch a Necessity : Therefore liberum and necessarium may, nay, must stand together; and iffo, the Will may be determined by the Understanding, and yet be free without an aquilibrium, and by consequence, an equilibrium is not essential to its Liberty. This falle Notion of Liberty maintained upholds the Objection, but dissolved breaks the same in pieces.

3. This Objection vanishes quite away by the true stating of Liberty. Liberty is double; Ethical as to that which may be done de jure, and Physical as to that which may be done de fatte. God is perfectly free both ways; Ethically, because under no Law but the Perfection of his own Nature, and Physically, because Almighty. Man is not Ethically free, because under a Law; not yet altogether Physically free, for some things he cannot do, if he never fo much will the doing thereof, because they

they are not within his power. Libertas (as the learned Camero hath it) est facultas faciendi quod libet, or more largely, facultas qua quis tantum possit quantum velit, tantumque velit quantum esse volendum judicavit; It is that Faculty in Man, whereby within his own Sphere he can do as much as he wills, and will as much as in his Understanding he judges sit to be willed. Now that this is a right Desinition of humane Liberty doth appear three ways.

1. Tis bottomed upon Scripture.

2. Tis commensurate to the Nature of

3. 'Tis proportionable to both the Acts of the Will.

Scripture there are various Expressions touching Liberty, congruous to the several parts of this Definition. In the Definition Liberty is a faculty of doing, & in Scripture 'tis a having a thing in our power, Acts 5.41 or in the power of our hand, Gen. 3 1. 29. In the Definition 'tis a faculty of doing as much as we will, and in Scripture 'tis a doing according to our will, Dan. 1 1. 36. or all that is in our heart, 2 Sam. 7.3. In the Definition 'tis a power of willing as much as in our

our Understanding we judge fit to be willed, and in Scripture 'tis doing what is right in our own eyes, Judg. 17.6. or what seemeth good and meet unto us, Jer. 26.14. Thus all the Definition is founded on Scripture.

2. This Definition is commensurate to the Nature of Liberty. What is Liberty in Man in the full compass of it, but that whereby he becomes wegos of πράξεως αὐτε, Lord of his own act, and such he truly is, when within his own line he can do as much as he will, and will as much as in his Understanding is fit to be willed. When the Scripture paints out that glorious 70 wingsmov, or supreme Liberty in God, what doth it say, but that be worketh all things according to the counsel of his own will Eph. I, II. and doth what be pleaseth in beaven and earth, Pfal. 135.6. Wherefore if a man can work according to the counsel of his Will, and do what he pleaseth with in his own Sphere, he must needs be truly free, and so much is allowed by this Definition.

3. This Definition is proportionable to both the Acts of the Will. There is Adus imperatus, an Act commanded by the Will, such as Speaking or Walking, or the like; there is Adus elicitus, an Act produced in the Will, such is the Act of willing. quoad Actum imperatum, the Definition says, that a Man can do as much as he wills; and quoad Actum elicitum, it says, that he can will as much as he judges fit to be willed. These two Acts must be carefully distinguished, for the Will is not alike free in both: As to the imperate Act, the Will is the Mistress and Commandress of that, that procedes from it per modum imperii, and it is truly faid to be done quia volumus; but as to the elicite Act, the Will is not properly the Mistress or Commandress of that, that procedes not from it per modum imperii; for then it should be Allus imperatus rather than elicitus; neither can we be faid truly to will quia volumus, for fo the fame Act of willing should be the Cause of it self: Wherefore the Liberty of the Will, as to the Act of willing, doth not confilt in a Self-motion, for the Will doth not move it self. To which purpose I shall quote two testimonies, one out of Camero, Nulla mera potentia semetipsam propellit in actum ; quicquid enim ejusmodi est, id in actu effe necesse eft. Voluntas autem (id eft, volendi facultas) mera potentia est ; ergò non potest semetipsam excitare ad agendum : Si enim hoc facit, facit per aliquem actum; at quod quod est in mera potentia, illud non agit. And again; Non potest dici que sit Voluntatis seipsam determinantis actio; non est volitio ipsa, est enim volitio ipse terminus; ergo non ipfa determinatio. Another out of the French Divines in their Thefes Salmurienses; Nulla potentia sesemet educit in actum; Sensus moventur à rebus sensibilibus, Phantasia à phantasmatibus, Intellectus ab object is intellectualibus, locomotiva à Voluntate, volunt as quipote à seipsa? And indeed, if the Will do move it felf to the Act of Willing, then (because it cannot move it felf, as quiescent) it must move it self by some Act, and what is that Act but an Act of willing? Therefore by an Act of willing it moves it felf to an Act of Willing, which is very abfurd. Wherefore the Will is free in the Act of willing, not in respect of its Self-motion, but in respect of its lubency and spontaneity; what it wills, it doth incoactively will according to the dictate of the Understanding. Now this being the true Nature of Liberty, the determination of the Will by the Understanding doth not overthrow it 5 for (notwithstanding this determination) Man is free still, because he can, within his own Sphere, do as much as he wills, and will as Ii a much much as he judges fit to be willed. His Will is free, because in its imperate Acts it commands what it pleases, and in its elicite Acts, it wills what it wills spontaneously, according to the dictate of the Understanding; therefore the determination of the Will by the Understanding doth not at all destroy the Nature of Liberty.

Thus passing over the second Quere, I

Quere 3. Whether the Work of Conversion be wrought in an irresistible

I am for the Affirmative in a right sence. A work may be faid to be done irrefiftibly two ways; either when there is no refileance at all: thus the Apostle saith, ye have killed the just, and he doth not refift you, Jam. 5.6. that is, not refift at all ; or elle when there is no fuch reliftance as to impede the work's thus they were not able to relist the wisdom and spirit of Stephen, Att 6.10. there's an irrefictibility ; but what without any refistance at all? No, they disputed against him with might and main, but because their disputes could not impede his work in propagating the Gospel, therefore it is said, that they were not able to refift bim. Thus when I fay that Conversion

version is wrought in an irresistible way, I mean not, that there is no relistance at all, for even in the Regenerate there is fielh lufting against the spirit, the old Man and the new strugle in the same Faculties, like Esan and Jacob in the same Womb; but I mean, that there is no fuch relistance as to impede the Work of Conversion. In meekness (saith the Apostle) instructing those that oppose themselves, if peradventure God will give them repentance, 2Tim. 2.25. here is a relistance, but for all that the work will be done, if God give repentance : He went on (faith the Prophet) frowardly in the way of his heart, but what faith God? I have feen his ways and will heal him, Ifai. 57. 17, 18. here was a great resistance, but for all that God will heal him. God works Conversion in such an insuperable way, that (notwithstanding all the opposition made thereunto) it doth infallibly come to pass. Now this I shall endeavour to demonstrate first in general, and then in particular with respect to the two Instants of Convertion.

1. I shall demonstrate it in general, and

1. From God's Election. He hath chosen some before the foundation of the World, chosen them to boliness as the Way, Eph.1.4. and chosen them to Salvation as the End, 2 Theff. 2.13. But if Conversion be not wrought in an insuperable way, how doth the foundation of God fland sure, 2 Tim. 2. 19? How is that golden Chain kept entire, Whom he did predestinate, them he called, whom he called, them he justified and glorified, Rom. 8.30? Were not these called ones (who have Predestination going before them, and Justification and Glorification coming after them) called in an insuperable way? If not, the Chain cannot hold together. The Apostle makes a plain difference between men; he opposes those of the election of grace to the oi hornoi, who were blinded, Rom. 11.7. and those on whom God will have mercy, to those whom he hardens, Rom. 9. 18. But if Conversion be not irrelifibly wrought, this difference falls to the ground; those of the Election may be blinded, and those on whom God hath mercy may be hardened as well as others; For my part I should as soon believe that a little Child may put up his finger and rowl about the Spheres, as that the Will of Man may stay or turn aside the Influences of electing Grace.

2. From Christs Redemption. If we consider consider the preciousness of his Blood, furely he must have a Body; every little Seed in Nature hath a Body given to it, and the Son of God fowing his Blood and Life cannot want one: If we confider the Promise of God, surely he must have a feed, Isai.53.10. and what else is the Fulness of the Gentiles and the Conversion of the Jews, but this promised Seed ? But if Grace be not wrought in an insuperable way, Christ might fow his Blood and Life in a wonderful Passion, and yet have no Body springing out of it; nay, God might engage himself in the Promise of a Seed, and yet nothing at all come of it; if the Grace of God be reliftible, lieve must be asked of Man's will, that Christ's Blood may be fruitful, and God's Promise Faithful.

3. From the Spirit's Work. The three glorious Persons in the sacred Trinity shew forth themselves in three glorious Works; the Father hath a special Shine in Creation, the Son in Redemption, and the holy Spirit in Sanctification. In the first Work we have God in the World, in the second God in the Flesh, and in the third God in the Heart or Spirit. When God came forth in Creation, Oh! what an Heaven and Earth full of admirable Creatures and Harmonies iffued forth? When God came in the Flesh, what out-breakings of Glory were there? What sparklings of the Deity in Miracles upon the Bodies of Men? The blind received their sight, the lame walked, the lepers were cleanfed, the deaf did hear, the dead were raised, and the Devils were ejetted with power : And when God comes in the Heart or Spirit, what planting of a new heaven and a new earth? How much of Glory and spiritual Miracle breaks forth in the Souls of Men? Even here also the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf bear, the dead are raised, and the devil is cast out with power. The very same Miracles which Christ in the flesh did do on the Bodies of Men in a visible manner, the very same dothChrist in the Spirit do on the Souls of Men in a spiritual way. This is the pro-per Work of the Spirit to fancisse Mens Hearts; the Spirit doth not appear any where in all the World fo much as in a true Saint: Look into a godly Man's Understanding, there's the Spirit of Revelation; look into his Will, there's the Spirit of Holines; look into his Affections, there's the Spirit of Love and Joy; look into his Conscience, there's the Spirit of Consolation 3

lation; look into his Prayers, there's the Spirit of Supplication; look into his Conversation, there's the Spirit of Meekness and all Righteousness. Thus the holy Spirit hews forth its Glory, and flows in Men as rivers of living water, and this Glory and Out-flowing is so precious, that before it came in Effe, according to the rich Measures of Gospel-grace, it is said of the eternal Spirit, έπω μν Πνεύμα άγιον, the boly Spirit was not yet, Job. 7.39. as if the Spirits flowing in Men were a kind of fecond Being to it. But now after all this, if Conversion be not wrought in an insuperable way, the holy Spirit may be barred out of every Heart, and then how shall his work be done? Where thall his Glory and spiritual Miracles appear? The Father hath a World to appear in, the Son hath Flesh to tabernacle in, but possibly the holy Spirit can get never an Heart to inhabit in, never a Temple to fill with his Glory; the holy Spirit would tabernacle with Men, but what if the Iron-sinew in the Will will not come out? What if the Stone in the heart will not break? Then the holy Spifit is robbed of his Glory. But is this fo strange a thing (will you fay?) What saith holy Stephen? Te Stiff-necked and uncircumcised cumcised in heart and ears, you do always refist the holy Ghost, as your fathers did, so do ye, Ads 7. 51. To which I answer, That the Spirit may be faid to be refilted two ways ; either as it is in the external Ministry, or as it comes in the internal Operations: It may be faid to be refisted in the external Ministry; He that despiseth you, despiseth me, saith Christ, Luk. 10. 16. He that despiseth, despiseth not man but God, faith the Apostle, I Theff.4.8. When therefore it is faid, that they refisted the holy Ghost, the meaning is not that they relisted him as to his internal Operations, but that they relisted him as to the external Ministry: This appears by the Context, for they relisted him as their fathers did, ver. 51. and how was that? The next Verse tells us, Which of the Prophets have not your fathers persecuted, Ver. 52? Their relitance of the Spirit was in persecution of the Prophets. But you'l fay, Might they not also refift him as to his internal Operations? I answer; so much doth not appear in the Text; but however the internal Operations of the Spirit are twofold; some are for the production of common Graces, some for the production of faving Graces, such as the new Heart and rew Spirit, Now if the holy holy Ghost may be resisted as to the former Operations, yet it cannot as to the latter; for in these it takes away the heart of Stone, the resisting Principle, and gives an Heart of Flesh capable of divine Impressions.

4. God doth insuperably remove the Obstacles of Conversion. What, is thy Mind dark, nay, darkness it felf? God can command the light out of darkness and sbine into the heart, 2 Cor. 4.6. Is thine Ear deaf? He can say Ephatha to it, and feal instruction, Job 33.16. Is thy Heart hard and stony. I He can take away the stony heart, and in the room of it give an heart of flesh, Ezek. 36.26. Is thy Heart barred and thut upagainst God? He can open it as well as Lydia's, Atts 16. 14. he opens and none can Shut, Rev. 3.7. Doth thy Will hang back? He can draw thee, Joh. 6.44. and reveal such day of power upon thy heart as shall make thee truly willing, Pfal. 110.3. Doft thou go on frowardly in the way of thy heart? Yet he can see thy way and heal thee, Isai.57.17,18. Dost thou oppose the precious Gospel? Yet peradventure be will give thee repentance, 2 Tim. 2. 25. Whatever the Obstacle be, he can remove it, he can cast down πῶν ὑγαμα, every beight in the the heart, 2 Cor. 10.5. and then what Obstacles can remain? Now if God do infuperably remove the Obstacles of Conversion, then he doth insuperably produce the Work of Conversion.

5. If God do not work Conversion in an insuperable way, then what doth he produce towards it but a mere poffe converteres According to the Remonstrants Doctrine, he doth not infuse Habits or vital Principles of Grace, neither will they in plain direct terms affert, that he doth produce actual Conversion; what then doth he produce towards it but a mere paffe convertere? and is not a pose peccare from him also? Voluntatem (say the All: Synodal, Art.

libertatem vocamus, à qua Voluntas dicitur esse potentia, que positis omnibus prerequistis ad agendum necessariis, potest velle & nolle, ant velle & non velle. And again: Semper & in omni statu bujus vitæ (ubi legislatio, pramiorum promissio, panarum interminatio, hortationes, preces & similia locum babent) voluit Deus libertatem Voluntati adese, qua objectu ab intellectu monstratu velle potest & nolle, aut velle & non velle. Surely if the Nature and inseparable Proper-of the Work of Conversion. ty of the Will be such, and such by the Will of God, then according to the Remonstrants Doctrine, a posse peccare is from God as the Author of Nature, as well as a posse convertere is from him as the Author of Grace; and by consequence it follows, that he doth act as far towards Transgreffion, as towards Conversion. No, by no means, will you say, it cannot be; for God by his Commands, Promises and the Spirit's Motions doth promote Conversion, but by his Prohibitions, Threatnings and the Spirit's Counter-motions doth beat back Transgression. Very well : these things shew that God's Actings touching Conversion and Transgression are not the fame as to the Manner, nevertheless they still remain the same as to the Terminus or product : For after all the Commands, Promifes and Motions towards Conversion, still the Terminus or Product is but a poffe convertere; and notwithstanding all the Prohibitions, Threatnings and Motions against Transgression, still there is the Terminus or Product of a posse peccare, and by consequence he acts as far towards Transgression as towards Conversion. Will you yet reply, that God gives a posse convertere, and without this, Man could not

convert, and when he doth actually convert, God concurrs thereunto. I answer, that according to the Remonstrants Doctrine, God gives a posse peccare also, and without this, Man could not sin; and when he doth actually sin, God concurrs to the material Act thereof, and where then is the Difference? By the Doctrine of resistible Grace God seems to act as far towards Transgression as towards Conversion.

6. If God do not work Conversion in an insuperable way, then he works it in a dependent way, putting Man's Will in aquilibrio, as it were in an eaven Ballance, that it may turn or not turn to God ad placitum. Now that this last is none of God's Method clearly appears, because God (asbeseems his infinite Wisdom) works Conversion in such a way, as is most depressive of the Creature, and exaltative of himfelf; the Man (whom he indeed converts)doth lick the Dust; the fountain of Blood in his Nature is broken up, and the super-fluity of Naughtiness in his Life set in order before him; he falls down in felf-abhorrencies, and cannot deny but that he is a Beast in his sensual Sins, and a Devil in his spiritual; he perceives his spiritual Poverty verty to be extreme; formany thousand Talents owing to divine Justice, and nothing at all to pay; a shameful nakedness in his Soul, and not a rag of Righteoufness to cover it; as a wretched half-damned Creature down he goes to the brink of Hell, and from thence he hath a prospect of Heaven; down he goes into the Abyss of his own Nullity, and from thence hath some glimpses of Christ's Allnes. His first breath of spiritual Life is a groaning under the weight of Sin: Oh! the intimate love of Sin, fays he, 'twill never out unless my heart be broken all to pieces; Oh! the obdutate Stone in my Heart, it cannot be mollified but by Almighty Grace; Oh! my dead Heart, nothing can quicken it but a resurrection; Oh! my nothingness in Spirituals, there must be a creation, or I shall never be any thing; Oh! the miserable down-cast, when I fell from God into my felf, I can never get up again unless I be unhinged and unselved, unless the Spirit lift me up out of my own Iness and Egoity ; Oh! that I were once out of my own carnal Reason, and in the light of life, that I were once out of mine own rebellious Will, and in the will of God; if ever I live, 'tis not I but Christ in me, if Kk ever I labour, 'tis not I but Grace in me y I can write an I upon nothing but my fins 3 if ever I be true to God, 'tis the holy anointing wif ever I be willing, 'tis the day of God's power. Oh! the Cros-bars in my perverse Heart, none can shoot them back but the Almighty fingers; Oh! the Plague of Apoltalie in my lying Heart, nothing can heal it but the holy unction ; if God do not write his Law in my heart, there will be nothing but wickedness there; if he do not let down some holy Fire into my Affections, there will benothing but Earth there. Flesh is Grass, and God Glory; Man nothing, and Grace all 5 God's Mercy is all, and the Willer or Runner nothing; God's Encrease is all, and the Planter or Waterer nothing. I Thus in Conversion all glorying is cut off, and pride stained ; God as a God is very high upon his Throne-of free Grace, and Man as Man very lowalpon the Dunghill of his own baseness: The little ones enter into the Land of Promise, the poor are evangelized, the dry Wilderness gapes for distillations of Grace, the poor meeping Sout (which bears the precious feed of Self-nothingness, and mourns after a supply from free Grace alone) shall be fure of the sheaf of comfort at laft. 2070

last. But now if God in working Conversion doth only put the Will in aquilibrio, whether it will turn or not, then the Method is quite another thing! Lie not, O Man, upon thy face, shake off the dust of Creature-weakness, talk no more of thy poverty and wretchedness, cry not out for a Refurrection or Creation, thouble not the Almighty Spirit and Grace, all's in thine own power already; will, and five for ever in the sweat of thine own improvements, nill, and all the power of Grace cannot change thee's will, and take the Crown of thy felf-differencing Glory, fill, and all the breathings and inspirations of the holy Spirit must fly away from the Birth and from the Womb. Adam left thee in the common Mass, God gives thee the common Grace; but thou, O Man, must make thy felf differ from others by a right use of that Grace which they neglect. Beatæ vitæ firmamentum eft sibi fidere; truft in thy own heart, thy way is in thy felf; thy Will is the great Umpire, whether thou wilt be God's or not: After all the swalions of Precepts and Promifes, after creating and quickning Grace hath done its utmost, after the living Spirit hath tried to write the Law in thee ; shall all this be Kk a fomefomething or nothing? Shall the new Creature come forth or not? Which shall abide in thy Heart, Law or Luft? Thou thy felf must determine the business; God made the Heart and all the Wheels therein, but the Motion is thine own; Christ hath all the power in Heaven and Earth, but the actual Turn is in thine own hand alone. Thus according to this Doctrine, Man is exalted and God is abased; free Will hath the Throne, and free Grace waits upon her. Man in his first Transgression would have been a God in his Understanding, and now in his Conversion he becomes one in his Will, turning the Scale of Grace one way or other as he pleaseth.

2. Having proved in general that God works Conversion in an insuperable way, I procede to prove it in particular with respect to the two Instants of Conversion.

1. As to the first Instant, God works the Habits or Principles of Grace in an insuperable way; and to make this appear,

r. Let us compare them with the Remonstrants posse convertere. They (because they would own somewhat more than mere moral Grace in Regeneration) tell us, potentiam credendi ante omnia conferri dicimus per irresistibilem gratiam. Now if the posse convertere be wrought in an insuperable way, why should not the Habits or Principles of Grace be so wrought, how is the Wills Liberty impeached by the one more than by the other? Which way can the Will resist the insusion of the one more than of the other? I know no difference between them as to these things: Wherefore (supposing what I have proved before, that there are such Habits of Grace) it follows that they are wrought in an insuperable way.

2. There is in Man's Soul an obediential Capacity to receive the Habits or Principles of Grace; there is a Capacity, and therefore God (who fills all things) can fill it; there is an obediential Capacity, and therefore God, when ever he fills it, fills it in an insuperable way: for this obediential Capacity is no other than that, whereby the Squl, as to the receiving of gracious Principles, stands in obedience to God's power, and as it stands in obedience to God's power, it cannot refist. To have an Obediential Capacity and not stand in obedience to God's power, is one Contradiction, and to stand in obedience to Gods power and yet to refift, is another: Wherefore the Soul receiving gracious Principles Kk 2 from

from God in its obediential Capacity, receives them in fuch a way as excludes refistance. Add hereunto, that if the infusion of gracious. Principles can be hindred, then it must be hindred either by the har bitual pravity of the Soul, or by the finful Act of the Will; but neither of these can do it t not the habitual pravity of the Soul, for then it thould hinder always and in all persons; for it is in all, and whilest it is there, it hinders, and whilest it hinders, it cannot be removed, because there is no other way of removing it but by those gracious Principles, and by consequence there fliould be no Capacity at all in the Soul to receive gracious Principles; nor yet can the finful Act of the Will hinder it for the Will doth not receive gracious Principles by its Act, and those which it doth not receive by its Act, it cannot refuse by its Act; but it receives them in its obediential Capacity, and therefore in an insuperable way.

3. The Covenant of Grace evidences this to us. I shall instance in two famous places; the one is that, A new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you, I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and give you an heart of flesh; I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my Statutes, Ezek. 36.26, 27. The other is that, I will put my Luws in their inward parts, and write them in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people, Jer. 31.33. Thefe Promifes do moft figually let forth the production of gracious Principles; here's the Principles themselves, a new heart and a new spirit; here's the principal efficient of them, the holy Spirit of God; here's a remotion of the Obstacles unto them, the taking away the heart of flone; here's the next immediate Capacity of receiving them, an beart of flesh ; here's the way or manner of producing them, a writing the Law in the heart; here's the effectual fruitfulness of them, a causing to walk in God's statutes ; and here's the crown or glory of all, God will be their God and they bis people. Now when there is a Worker such as the Almighty Spirit, a Remotion of the Obstacles such as the Stone of hardness, an immediate Capacity fuch as an Heart of flesh, a way of Working such as the intimate Impression of Truth, a Fruit proceding fuch as Obedience to God's Statutes, and a Crown of all fuch as an Interest in God; How can the Grace be less than insuperable? You Kk 4 will fay, These Promises were not made to the Gentiles, but to the Jews, and not to any fingular persons among them, but to the whole Nation, Lanswer; These Promiles extend not only to the Jewes but to the Gentiles ; for these are Promises of Grace founded in Christ, and in Christ Jew and Gentile are allone, Gal. 3. 28. fo one, that the Gentiles are of the Jame body and partakers of the promise, Eph. 3.6. Indeed before the middle Wall of Partition was broken down, they were frangers from the covenant of promise; but that being gone, they are fellow-beins partaking of the root and farnes of the Olive. Neither do these Promises extend to all the Nation of the Jews, but so the true Ifrael, the elect People of God, whether they be Jews or Gentiles; for in them only are these Promises fulfilled: Had these been made to all the Jews, the true God would have fulfilled them in every Jew. You will fay, No. God's Truth doth not exact fuch a performance, for he promised to do these things not absolutely but conditionally, so as men did not relift the operations of his Grace. I answer; If God only promise these things shall be done, so as men do not refift, then these Promises run thus ; 16

If thy ftony Heart do not relift, I will give thee an Heart of Flesh ; if thy old Heart do not refift, I will give thee a new one; if thy own spirit do not resist, I will give thee my Spirit; and if the Law of Sin do not relift, I will give my Laws into thy Heart. Which Interpretation dothutterly evacuate the Glory and Power of these Promises; for to be fure that Stone, that old Heart, that Spirit of our own, that Law of Sin in us, will (what it can) refift the operations of Grace. You will say, God gives unto Man a poffe convertere,a fupernatural Faculty whereby he is able to turn unto God: Now God promiles to do these things, not so as men in their mere Naturals do not relift, but so as men furnished with that supernatural power do not relift. I answer; two things overthrow this Interpretation.

of such a Condition of Non-resistency, nor of such a supernatural Power of Conversion; nay on the contrary, in stead of the Condition of Non-resistency, it speaks of a stony heart (which is a Principle of Resistency) to be removed; instead of a supernatural power of Conversion, it implies an old heart) which is powerless in the things of God) to be made new.

2. If

as men, furnished with supernatural power of Conversion, do not resist, then there is such a supernatural power in men before these things be wrought in them, that is, before there be a new or soft Heart, whilest the Heart is old and stony, there is such a supernatural power in them, which assertionis, as I take it, men into two ranks, they are clean or unclean, new creatures or old, spiritual men born of the spirit, or natural men born of the sless; but this Assertion ushers in a middle sort of men such as hang by a posse convertere between Nature and Grace; with the natural man they have an old stony Heart, and with the spiritual man they have a new supernatural Power; in the frame of their Heart they are no better than natural, and in their supernatural Power they are little less than spiritual.

2. Tis against Reason. All Powers in the rational Soul flow out of Life; the Power of knowing and embracing natural good things flows out of the natural Life of the Soul, and the power of believing and receiving spiritual good things flows out of the soul; but this Assertion supposes a supernatural Power of Conversion without any vital Root; nothing of a new Heart or Spirit, and yet a supernatural Power of Conversion: Wherefore rejecting these Interpretations I conclude, that those Promises import the production of gracious Principles

4. The Production of gracious Principles is in Scripture set out in such glorious titles as do import insuperable Grace, 'tis a creation, Epb. 2.10. 'tis a generation, Jam. 1. 18. tis a resurrection, Eph. 2. 5,6. 'tis a traction, Joh. 6.44, tis an opening of the heart, Act. 16.14. tis a translation into Christs kingdom, Col.1.13. Now if this be not insuperable Grace, then there may be a Creation on God's part, and no new Creature on mans; a Generation on Gods part, and no Child of Gracoon mans; a Refurrection on Gods part, and nothing quickened on mans; a Traction on Gods part, and nothing coming on mans; an Opening on Gods part, and all shut on mans; and a Translation on God's part, and no Remove at all on mans; and why then should such stately names of Power be fet on the head of refiftible Grace? You'l fay, all these are but Metaphors; very well, but Metaphors are Metaphors,

Metaphors, that is, they carry in them some image or resemblance of the things themfelves, but there is not the least shadow of likeness or similitude between these things and refistible Grace. What shadow of Creation in that which a Creature may frustrate? What of Generation in that which produces nothing at all? What of Refurrection when the dead need not rife? What of Traction when there is no coming upon it? What of Opening when there is a Heart still shut up? What of Translation when there is no remove by it? Take away the infallible Efficacy of Grace, and it can be none of all thefe, no, not so much as metaphorically, because it hath no print of likeness thereunto.

5. The Scripture doth not only set out Conversion under the Glory of Metaphors, but in plain terms it stiles it a Work of Power; the Gospel comes in power and in the holy Ghost, I Thess. I. 5. and in the demonstration of the Spirit and power, I Cor. 2.4. there is Power in it, nay, excellency of power, 2 Cor. 4.7. nay, speaked we have a six of power, and every a receding greatness of power, and every a receding the working of the might of power, such as raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, Eph. I. 19,20. The entire words

runs thus; What is the exceeding greatness of his power towards us who believe according to the working of his mighty power, which be wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead: the Apostle here doth not only denote Gods Power towards Believers, but also Gods Power in making them such. As there is exceeding greatness of power towards Believers, so those Believers did believe according to the working of his mighty power such as raised up Christ from the dead. Every way a Believer in sieri and in fatto effe is surrounded with Power and excellent greatness of Power; Oh! what rare Eloquence? what high strains are here? Too much and too high in all reason for resistible Grace: If the weakness of God be stronger than Man, surely the Power of God in its might and excellency put forth for the production of gracious Principles cannot be refifted and overcome by him.

6. The Heart which hath gracious Principles in it is God's Tabernacle, and all God's Tabernacles have been built in a fure way, such as cannot fail of the Effect. God (besides the natural Tabernacle of his Eternity) hath in his condescending Grace been pleased to have three Tabernacles built for him; first he had a worldly tabernacle or fanduary, Heb. 9.1. and then confvoot, he tabernacled in our flesh, Joh. 1. 14. and last of all, he hath a tabernacle in the Hearts of men, a Sanctuary, with the midft of them, that is, in the midft of their Hearts, Ezek. 37.26. the Heart, which hath gracious Principles in it, is God's Tabernacle: Hence God fays, choinhow, I will indwell inthem, 2 Cor. 6.16. Now God himfelf undertook that all thefe Tabernacles should be built: As for the first, God took care to have it made exactly to a Pin; as for the second, God engaged that a Virgin should conceive and bring forth Immain a Promise to raise up the tabernacle of David, Amos 9. 11. that is, to convert the Gentiles ; for lo it is interpreted, Ads 15. 14, 15, 16. New Creatures are the tabernacle of David; there is David the Man after God's own Heart; there Christ, the true David, dwells in the Heart by Faith Again, God fays, I will fet my and Love. Sanctuary in the midst of them, Ezek. 37.26. that is, I will by my fanctifying Grace turn their Hearts into an holy place for my own habitation. Moreover, all the Tabernaoles of God have been made in a fure way, because they have been made through through the overfladowing presence of the holy Spirit. As for the first, the Master? workman of it was Bezaleel, a man (as his name imports) in the shadow of God, filled full of the spirit of God, in all wisdom for the doing of the work. As for the fecond? there is a Bezaleel too, the holy Ghost comes upon, and the power of the highest overfladows the bleffed Virgin, and fo the boly thing, the pure flesh of Christ, was formed in her Womb, Luk. 1.35. And as for the third, there Bezuleel again; they that dwell in his shadow shall return, Hof. 14.7 the holy Ghoft comes upon the Soul, and the power of free Grace overshadows it, and and fo Christ or the holy thing is formed therein. What is faid of the Apostles as to their facred Function, The holy Choft came upon them, Atts 1. 8. the fame is true of all true Christians as to their spiritual Generation : Thus whileft Peter fpake, the holy Ghoft fell on them, Acts 10. 44. by his Grace making them an habitation of God: Lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midft of thee, Zach. 2. 10. he comes by his Spirit, and makes their Hearts a Sanctuary for himfelf! Thus this Tabernacle is built in a fure way, because pitched by God himself; but now if all the Operations of Grace be refiftible fiftible, what becomes of this Tabernacle? God may raise and raise by all the Operations of his Grace, and yet the Tabernacle not go up; the holy Ghoft may overshadow mens Souls, and yet no Christ be formed in them; a holy place in mens Hearts may be fought for the Lord, and none at all found. All these precious Promises of condescending Grace may fall to the ground. You will fay, What remedy for all this? God will not dwell in men whether they will or not: Very true; but if Almighty Power cannot make men willing, what can do it ? Christ received gifts formen, yea, for the rebellions also, that the Lord God might dwell among them, Pfal.68. 18. Observe, 'tis for the rebellions also; not that God doth dwell in them as such, but that by his gifts of Grace he turns rebellious Hearts into gracious, and so comes and dwells in them as his own Tabernacle. Wherefore I conclude that God works the Principles of Grace in an insuperable way.

2. As to the second Instant of Conversion, God works actual Conversion also in an insuperable way; so that sooner or later it always takes effect. And this will ap-

. 1. From the Vitality of gracious Principles as backed with auxiliary Grace; there is a divine Vigor in these Principles, these are a Well of living water ready to spring up, a Seed of God ready to shoot forth, and a Beam of the divine Nature ready to sparkle out; wherefore when auxiliary Grace stirs up this Well of living water, bedews this Seed of God, and blows up this Beam of the divine Nature, it is no wonder at all, that actual Conversion should infallibly follow. Auxiliary Grace ftirs up the Principles of Grace, thefe ftir up the Soul, and that by virtue of both the former stirs up it self unto actual Converfion; and fo actual Conversion comes forth into Being.

2. From the Insuperability of Grace in the Illumination of the Understanding. God doth enlighten the Understanding in an irresistible way, he shines into the heart, he puts wisdom into the hidden parts, who teaches like him, Job 36. 22? He teaches with a strong hand, Isai. 8. 11. He teaches in the demonstration of the Spirit and power, I Car. 2. 4. A Demonstration is such a thing as cannot be resisted by the mind of Man; and of all Demonstrations, the demonstration of the Spirit is most invincible.

LI

Now if the Understanding be irresistibly enlightned, then the Will (as I have before proved) doth infallibly follow it; they that know God's name will trust in it; the Stod's will come to Jesus Christ; truth, if but rightly known, will make us free; true Wisdom dwells with prudence, and practically leads in the way of Righteousness; 'tis a Suada to the Will, and draws it home to God in actual Conversion.

3. From those Scriptures which set forth God as the Author of actual Converfion. He gives To misside, the actual believing, Phil. 1. 29. he grants repentance unto life, Acts 11.18. he works to HAGY, the very act of willing, Phil. 2.13. he causes to walk in his statutes, Ezek. 36.27. In every true Convert there is more than a mere Man, the grace of God is to be seen in him, Acts 11.23. there is God in converting Paul, Gal. 1.24. In the Temple of the new Creature every thing speaks of his glory, every holy breath in the Will must praise the Lord as its Author: If God did not work the very Act of Willing, then (which I tremble to utter) all the Prayers made to him for converting Grace are but God-mockeries; all the Praises offered up to him for the same are but false Hallelujahs; then they which glorified God in converting Paul, glorified but an Idol of their own Fancy 5 they which glorified God in the repenting Gentiles, Ads 11. 18. offered but a blind Sacrifice. we pray, that God's kingdom should come into our hearts, we do not mean that God should put our Wills in aquilibrio, but our Wills should be subdued under God's. When David and his People offered willingly unto God, he falls into a kind of Extasie; Who am I, and what is my people, I Chron. 29. 14? And, Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, Ver. 11. even the victory over hearts; and, All things are of thee, Ver. 14. not only our Gold and Silver, not only our Hearts and Wills, but our very actual Willingnessalfo. You will fay, All this is true; God works the very Act of Willing, but not insuperably, but so as men do not resist the Work of Grace. But what's the meaning of this? God works the Will, so as men do not relist; not to resist is to obey: Wherefore the plain meaning is, God works the Act of Willing, fo as men do will, which is very abfurd; because it makes the very same Act of Willing to be the Condition of it self. Again; What is it for God to work the Act of Willing, so as men do not resist, but to work it in a way of dependence upon Man's Will? and what is that but to contradict the Apostle, who saith, that God works the Act of willing, water of blockias, of his own good pleasure; if he do it of his own good pleasure, surely not in a way of dependence upon Man's Will, but in a glori-

4. From those Scriptures whose truth is so founded upon insuperable Grace, that it cannot stand without it. Turn thou me, and I shall be turned, fer. 31.18. Turn us unto thee, O Lord, and we shall be turned, Lam. 5.21. If Man's actual Turn do not infallibly follow upon God's turning Grace, what truth is there in these [Ands] which couple both together? Other sheep I must bring, (faith Christ) and they Shall hear my voice, 70h. 10.16. and, which agrees with it, The Salvation of God is sent to the Gentiles, and they will hear it, Acts 28. 28. What Connexion is there betwixt Christ's bringing and Man's hearing, or betwixt Salvation fent and Man's hearing without insuperable Grace? Again; God fays, I will put my Spirit within you and you shall live, Ezek.

37.14. and I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, Ezek. 36.27. What necessity of Life or Obedience in them, if the holy Spirit be given in a resistible way? Again; God says to Christ, Thou shalt call a nation, and nations shall run unto thee , Ifai. 55. 5. and the Church prays, Draw me, we will run after thee, Cant. 1.4. Where's the truth of thefe Propositions, if God's calling and drawing do not infer Man's running ? Again David prays, Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy ftatutes, and I shall keep it unto the end; give me understanding, and I shall keep thy Law, Pfal. 119. 33, 34. Where's the confequence of David's Obedience upon God's Teaching, if Grace be superable? Moreover, God fays, I will be as dew to Ifrael, he shall grow as the lilly, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon, his branches shall spread, and bis beauty Shall be as the olive-tree, Hof. 14.5, 6. Here's Israel very florid, but that which fecures all is insuperable Grace; nothing could hinder their spiritual prosperity, who had God for their dem; I fay, nothing, not Lufts; for Ephraim shall fay What have I to do with Idels, Ver. 8? not backflidings, for God fays, I will heal their back-flidings, Ver. 4. not barrenness for God tells them, L1 3 trom from me is thy fruit found, Ver. 8. not dead-ness, for they shall revive as the corn and grow as the vine, Ver. 7. But if the Work of Grace may be frustrated, then there is no certain root for all this holy fruit to stand

5. From those Scriptures which fet forth actual Conversion as a Work of Power, Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, Pfal. 110. 3. God fulfils the work of faith with power, 2 Theff. 1. 11. the Principle of Faith is incomplete without its Act, but God by his powerful Grace actu-When our Saviour Christ ates it in us. told his Disciples, that it was easter for a camel to go through a needles eye, than for a rich man to enter into Gods kingdom, they cried out with amazement, Who then ean be faved? but our Saviour unties the knot thus ; The things that are unpossible with men, are possible with God, Luk. 18.24, 25,26,27. God by the power of his Grace can fetch off the World, the Camels bunch, from the Heart, and so make it pass as it were through the needles eye into the King-dom of God. But now the affertors of refistible Grace may turn the words thus; The things which according to the ordinary working of Grace are impossible with God,

God, are possible with Men; that crowning Work of actual Conversion, which is too hard and heavy for God's free Grace is absolved and dispatched out of hand by Man's free Will. In the Parable of the lost Sheep, we find God going after it until he find it, othen laying it upon his shoulders, Luk. 15.4,5. He goes after it in the Means of Grace, he finds it by the intimate In-Thinings of his Spirit, and he lays it upon the shoulders of his power, that he may bring it home to himself in actual Conversion. But now if Grace be refiltible, the Almighty Shoulders are only put under mans Will to bear it up in equilibrio, to see whether it will go home to God or not; it may be it will, it may be it will not : Gods Power doth but attend on Man's Will as the Umpire of all.

6. From those Scriptures which shew forth actual Conversion as a Conquest. Thanks be to God (faith the Apostle) To De Lambosovi, that triumpheth us in Christ, 2 Cor. 2.14. that is, that subdues us to the Gospel, and makes us Instruments of his Grace to subdue others thereunto. Christ rides upon his white horse, the Word of Truth, vinar is iva vinnon, conquering and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2. he leads captivity captive, tive, Pfal. 68. 18. those men, which were Captives to Sin and Satan before, now become Captives to his Spirit and Grace, and as Captives pelestor, he translates them into bisown kingdom, Col. 1.13 he carries them away out of the native Soil of their Corruption, into the land of uprightnes; and (which further hews the Insuperability of this Conquest) he binds the strong man and spoils his goods, Matth. 12.29. he casts down παν ύγωμα, every height, and captivates παν vonua, every thought to the obedience of Christ, 2 Cor. 10.5. and that this may be furely effected, there are meapons oviala To Dea, mighty to God, Ver. 4. to accomplish his Will in that behalf, he circumcises, or (as the Septuagint hath it) Dena Dagie, he purges the heart round about, Deut. 30. 6. He baptises it with the boly Ghost and fine, Matth.3.11. Fire-like he purges out the dross, and converts the Heart into his own Nature in a glorious way; he causes men to walk in his ftatutes, Ezek. 36. 27. Oh! what words of Power? What Triumphs of free Grace are these? Here's the day of Gods power; here's the Jerusalem above, the mother of true freedom. Neither is there any Shipwrack of humane Liberty in all this, for God can change the unwilling Will

Will into a willing Will; or elfe (which is durus fermo) he, that made free Will, cannot have mercy upon it; he, that made the Horologe of the Heart and all its pins, cannot move the Wheels. But if God work Conversion in a resistible way, then free Grace must lose its triumph, and free Will must take the Crown ; free Grace works only a poffe convertere, and free Will completes it in an actual Conversion; free Grace may fet the Will in equilibrio, and that's all, but free Will must do the business, and that in a self-glorying way, not in the humble posture of the Apostle, apogailes, looking off from our selves to Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, Heb. 12.2. but in the proud posture of the Pharifee, sadeis neds eautov, standing to himself, Luk. 18.11. Free Grace must not act or move the Will unto actual Conversion; for all Action or Motion of the Will, fo far as it is Action or Motion, is a determination thereof, and a determination from Grace cannot (according to the Remonstrants Doctrine) consist with the Liberry of the Will: wherefore free Grace having fet the Will in equilibrio must act or move no further, but leave it to move and determine it felf in actual Convertion, that COILthat is, in plain Terms, give up the Crown and Glory of all unto it. But how abfurd is this? God says, No flesh shall glory in it felf, and shall Man's Will vaunt it thus? God fays, καθέλιπου, I have left or reserved so many to my self, Rom. 11.4. and shall free Will fay fo? Christ's Manhood did not anoint it felf, and shall free Will turn it felf? God by his Grace begins to build a Tabernacle for the Spirit, he begins in the Understanding by Illumination, in the Affections by holy Motions, and in the Will by a posse convertere ; and is he not able to finish the Work by an actual Conversion? All Nations (aith the Prophet) are but as a dust of the ballance to him, Isai. 40. 15. and by the same reason, all their Wills are but as the dust of the ballance to his Will; and shall this small Dust turn the Scales in the weighty business of Converfion? Nay, shall it do so, after creating, regenerating, quickning, captivating, conquering, translating, renewing, drawing, powerfully working Grace hath done its utmost? Surely it cannot be: Wherefore I conclude, That God works actual Conversion in an insuperable way.

Quere 3. Whether the Will of God touching Conversion be always accomplished therein?

For answer whereunto, I must first lay down a Distinction as a Foundation. God may be said to will the Conversion of men two ways; either by such a will as is effective and determinative of the Event, or by such a Will as is only virtual and ordinative of the Means tending thereunto: Both parts of this distinction are bottomed upon Scripture.

1. God wills the Conversion of some by such a Will as is effective and determinative of the Event. There are some chosen to holiness, Eph. 1.4. called not need now, according to purpose, Rom. 8.28. predestinated to be conformed to Christs image, Ver. 29. begotten of God's own will to be sirst-fruits to him, Jam. 1.18. and within that election of Grace which doth ever obtain, Rom. 11.5,7. Touching these the Will of God is effective and determinative of the Event, in these Conversion is wrought after an irresistible and insuperable manner.

2. God wills the Conversion of others by fuch a Will as is only virtual and ordinative of the Means tending thereunto. Thus God would have healed Ifrael, Hof. 7. 1. Thus God wills the turning of the wicked, who yet dieth in his sin, Ezek. 33.11. beheal and turn them. Thus the Apostle afferts, that God will have all men to be faved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth, I Tim. 2.4. In which place, as I take it, the word [All] extends further than to the Elect; for those words of the Apostle are laid down as a ground of that Exhortation to pray for all men, Ver. 1. and that Exhortation to Prayer extends further than to the Elect : wherefore the [All] whom God would have to be faved, being parallel and coextensive to the [All] whom we are to pray for, must also extend beyond the Elect. Wherefore I conceive that the latter part of the words, viz. [and to come to the knowledge of the truth] is a Key to the former, viz. [That God would have all to be saved. God would have all to be faved, fo far, as he would have all to come to the knowledge of the Truth, and he would have all to come to the knowledge of the Truth, fo far, as he wills Means of Knowledge unto them ; for

for the true end and tendency of the Means (and that from the Will of God ordaining the same thereunto) is that men might be turned and saved: Wherefore in respect of that Ordination God may be truly said by a kind of virtual and ordinative Will to will the turning and Salvation of all men. This I shall explain

1. With reference to those in the Bo-fom of the Church.

2. With reference to those out of it.

1. God by a virtual or ordinative Will doth will the Turning and Salvation of all Men within the Bosom of the Church; for they have Jesus Christ set before their Eyes, and what was the true End of Christ's coming, but to turn every one from his iniquities, Ats 3. 26 ? They have the Gospel preached unto them 5 there we have God spreading out his hands all the day, standing and knocking at the door of the heart, crying out with redoubled Calls, Turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die? Wooing and beseeching men , be ye reconciled unto me; making his salvation bringing grace appear unto all men, even to the Non-elect themselves, and causing the kingdom of God to come nigh unto men, even to such as for the rejection thereof have the dust of their city wiped off against them ; and what is the meaning of all this, if God no way will their Conversion? Take away God's ordinative Will, and then God (as to the Non-elect) spreads out his hands of Mercy that he may shut them; knocks, that he may be barred out; cries and beseeches, that he may not be heard 5 makes his Grace appear and Kingdom come nigh, that it may be rejected, and not received: All which is to evacuate Scripture and put a lye upon the offers of Grace. Neither will it falve the business, to say, there is a Voluntas signi in all this; for what is Voluntas signi, if it be not signum Voluntatis? If it be only an outward Sign or Appearance, and there be no Counterpane or Prototype thereof within the divine Will, how is it a true Sign? Which way could it be breathed out from God's Heart? When God makes his great Gofpel-supper, and says, Come, for all things are ready, he is not, he cannot be like him with the evil eye, who faith, Eat and drink, but his heart is not with thee, Prov. 23. 6,7. No, God's Heart goes along with every Offer of Grace ; he never calls but in a ferious rious manner: And therefore unbelieving and impenitent Persons are in Scripture faid, not only to reject the Means, but to receive the grace of God in vain, 2 Cor.6.1. to reject the counsel of God against themselves, Luk. 7. 30. and to make God a lyar 1 70h.5.10. as if he meant not really in the Offers of his Son Jesus Christ. When God threatned the Jews with his Judgements, they belied the Lord, and faid, it is not be, Jer. 5.12. and when God offers men Grace in the Gospel, they by their Unbelief belye the Lord and fay, It is not be ; 'tis but only the Minister or outward Sign, God's Heart or Mind is not in it. Under fuch weighty words as these doth the Scripture set out the rejection of means, because of God's ordinative Will; that God who will one day mock at the rejecters of his call, Prov. 1.26. doth not now mock them in the Grace of his Call; the true end of his Call is their Conversion, & that that end is not attained, the only Reason lies within themfelves in their own corrupt unbelieving Hearts. Moreover it is worthy of our confideration, that those Scriptures (which the Remonstrants urge to prove that all the Operations of Grace, even those in the very Elect who actually turn unto God, are refiftible) fiftible) do figually fet forth this ordinative Will of God: As first they urge that Matth. 23.37. O fernsalem, fernsalem! thou that killest the Frophets and stonest them which are fent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as an ben gathereth ber chickens under ber wings, and ye would not : Here, fay they, is resistible Grace. Very well; but what Grace doth the Text speak of? It speaks only of the Grace afforded to those Jews which were never gathered or converted thereby, but not a tittle of the Grace afforded to those Jews which were thereby actually gathered or converted; and how then can it prove, that this latter Grace (of which it speaks not at all) was resistible? If it prove this Grace resistible, it can be upon no other ground but this only, That the Grace afforded to the Jews which were not gathered, and the Grace afforded to the Jews which were gathered was one and the same: but how can that be made good? Can that Text affert an equality of Grace to both forts of Jews, which speaks only of the Grace afforded to one of them, viz. to the ungathered ones? 'Tis impossible: But if it be not the Truth of the Text, is there yet any Truth

Truth in the thing? Had all the Jews equal Grace with the Jews given to Christ, with the Jews drawn by the Father, with the Jews chosen out of the world? 'Tis incredible. The Remonstrants allow that God doth irrefiltibly enlighten the Understanding, excite the Affections, and infuse a posse convertere into the Will; but was it thus with all the Jews? Were the blind leaders of the blind thus enlightned? Were the malicious scorners thus affected ? Were those which could not believe, John 1239. endued with a posse convertere? It cannot be. Wherefore this Text speak. ing only of the Grace given to the ungathered Jews, proves not the Grace given to the other Jews to be reliftible, but it genuinely proves a Will in God to gather them all under his wings of Grace; I say, a Will in God, for it cannot be interpreted of Christ's humane Will; for the gathering willed was not only a gathering by Christ's Ministry, but by the Mission of Prophets before his Incarnation, to which Christ's humane Will could not extend, because not then in being: Wherefore this Will is God's ordinative Will, imported in the Ministery of Christ and the Prophets, the proper end & tendency whereof Mm Was

was to gather them into the bosom of his This Calvin in his Commentaries upon this place calls, mirum & incomparabile amoris documentum; and withal adds, significat nunquam proponi nobis Dei verbum, quin ipse materna dulcedine gremium Suum nobis aperiat. Again, they urge that Isai. 65.2. I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people; but this place speaks only of the Grace afforded to the Rebellious, and therefore it proves not that the Grace afforded to the Elect was resistible. Neither is it imaginable, that the same measure of Grace is signified in this expansion of God's hand, as in the revelation of his arm, Isai. 53.1. The Apostle quoteth this place, Rom. 10.21. yet withal afferts, that there was a remnant according to the election of Grace, Rom. 11. 5. not a remnant according to the better improvement of the same Grace, but a remnant according to the election of Grace; fuch as pure Grace had referved to it felf, by those special Operations which were not vouchfafed to the blinded ones, Ver. 7. God's stretching out his hands is all one with his call, Prov. 1. 24. but all men are not called after the me rate as the called according to purpose: Wherefore this place proves proves not, that the workings of Grace as to the Elect are refistible; but that the Offers of Grace as to the Non-elect are ferious, God in the Means really spreading out his Arms of Grace unto them. Again; they urge that of our Saviour, These things I say that you might be saved, Joh. 5. 34. which words were spoken to them, which would not come to Christ, Ver. 40. but that the holy Spirit spake as inwardly and powerfully to them, as to the Elect who hear and learn of the Father, what Chymistry can extract it out of this Text? or from what other Scripture can it be demonstrated? God commands the light to shine out of darkness in some hearts, 2 Cor. 4.6. but doth he fo in all? Whence then are those blinded ones, Ver. 4? If there be any such, where is the Remonstrants Equality of Grace? Where, when they fay, that Illumination is wrought irrefiftibly? These things cannot consist together. Wherefore our Saviours words fhew not forth the weakness or superableness of Grace as to the Elect, but the true End and Scope of Christ's Preaching as to the Non-elect; what he spake to them was in order to their Salvation. Again; they urge that, The Pharifees and Lawyers Mm 2 rejectjested the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him, that is, of John, Luk. 7.30. Here, (fay they) is their Thefis in terminis: But this place is fo far from proving that the internal Grace vouchsafed to the Elect is resistible, that from hence it cannot be proved, that these Rejecters had any workings of internal Grace at all in them: For internal Grace runs in the Veins of Ordinances, and the Ordinance here spoken of was John's Baptism, and that these Rejecters would not partake of at all; for so saith the Text, They were not baptized of him, and then which way should they come by internal Grace? could they have it quite out of God's Way? No, furely, there is little or rather no reason to imagine that theseRejecters so far scorning God's Ordinance, as not so much as out-wardly to be made partakers thereof, should yet have the workings of internal Grace in them. But suppose they had some internal Working, must it needs be the baptism of the holy Ghost and fire, such intimate and powerful working as is in the Elect? Not a tittle of this appears in the Text: wherefore this place proves not that the working of Grace in the Elect is relistible, but it fignally shews forth the nature .

nature of divine Ordinances. Every Ordinance is an Ordinance from the Will of God; 'tis an Appointment dropt down from Heaven; 'tis divinely destinated eis oinodound, for edification and not for destruction; 'tis the Place where God records his Name; 'tis the Way where God would be met withal; 'tis the Oracle where God would be heard; 'tisa kind of Tabernacle of witness where God attesteth the Riches of his Grace. John's Baptism was not a mere external Sign or Shadow, but imported God's ordinative Counsel to bring men to Repentance; twas eig mel ávoiav, to repentance, as its proper End, Matth. 3. 11. Gospel-preaching is not a mere found or voice of Words, but it importeth Gods ordinative Counsel to turn men unto himfelf. Hence every true Minister is said to stand in Gods counsel, and for this very End, to turn them from the evil of their doings, Jer. 23.22. Every Ordinance speaks an ordinative Counsel for some spiritual End, a serious Ordination for the good of Souls. Oh! that every one would think fo indeed, how furely would they find that God is in it of a truth; who oever comes to an Ordinance so thinking, justifies Gods Institution and meets his Benediction; but Mm a he

he who comes and thinks otherwise, doth by that very thought for sake the ordinance of his God, and reject his counsel, though nor in so high and gross a manner as the Pharifees and Lawyers did, who would not fo much as outwardly partake of John's Baptism. Again; they urge that, What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes ? Ifai.5. 4. Here (fay they) were omnia adhibita, not a tantillum gratia wanting; here feems to be the ultimus conatus, the utmost Ading of Grace, even equal to those Operations of Grace which were in the Converts of the Jewish Church, and that upon a double account; First because God says, What could be done more? Secondly, because God had done so much that he expetted the grapes of Holine's and Obedience from them; and yet after all this they brought forth wild Grapes: Hence the Remonstrants conclude, that Conversion is wrought in a resistible way. I answer; those which will take the true measure of the Grace set forth in this Text, must first consider to whom this Grace was afforded; twas to the Jewish Church in common, even to every member thereof: this granted, as it cannot be denied, I procede to answer, first as to that expresfion, What could have been done more? Either the meaning of it is, what could have been done more in a way of internal Grace, or else it is, what could have been done more in a way of external Means; the first cannot be the meaning, that God could do no more in a way of internal Grace; if God had faid fo in that fence, the Jewish Church might have aptly answered, Lord! couldst thou not write the Law in every Heart? Couldst thou not make a new heart in every one of us?O how many unregenerate Souls are there found in me! But if not that, Lord! couldst thou not at least have inwardly enlightned every one? Couldst thou not have given him some inward dispositions to Conversion? O how many ignorant Souls are there, which call evil good and good evil, and put darkness for light and light for darkness, Isai. 5. 20 ! these are not so much as inwardly inlightned: O! how many Atheists are there which jear and scoffat the Threatnings of God, saying, Let him hasten his work that we may see it, Mm 4

let the counsel of the holy One draw nigh, that we may know it, Ver. 9. These are so far from any dispositions to Conversion, that they scarce have the sense of a Deity in them. Lord! thou, who didst plant me a Vineyard or visible Church, couldst have planted faving Graces in every Heart; thou, who didst gather out the stones of publick annoyance out of me, couldst have took away the privy stone of hardness out of every Heart; doubtless thou art Almighty, and therefore thou canst do it; thou art True, and therefore thou wilt do it, if thou hast said it. Hence it appears, that that Expression [What could have been done more? 7 relates not to internal Grace, but external means: 'tis as if God had said, O Israel! I have planted thee in a Canaan, I have fet thee my only vifible Church in the world, I have manured thee by my Frophets, I have betrusted thee with the lively Oracles of my Law, I have fenced thee in with my wak y providence and protection; What Nation is there fo great, who hath me jonigh unto them, who hath judgments and statutes so righteous? What National or Church-privilege is there yet behind? What sould have been done more for

for a Church under the legal Pedagogy and before the Messiah's coming in the flesh? This I take to be the proper meaning of the words. Secondly, as to God's expectation, neither doth that imply that there were omnia adhibita; for when God came and fought fruit on the Fig-tree, the feeking there was as much as the expecting here, and yet there were not omnia adbibita, no, not as to external Means; for after his feeking, he digged about it and dunged it, that it might be fruitful, Luk. 13.6,7,8,9. Now by all this it appears, that that Parable of the Vineyard proves, not that the internal Grace afforded to those lews which were thereby converted was refistible; but it proves that the proper End and Tendency of the Means afforded to the Jewish Church, was that they might bring forth good fruits to God, and in respect of that Ordination God is faid to expect those good fruits from them.

2. God by a virtual or ordinative Will doth will the Turning and Salvation even of the very Pagans. According to that Will, God would (as I have before laid down) be feen in every creature, fought and felt in every place, witnessed in every shower and fruitful season, feared in the sea-bounding fand, bumbled under in every abasing providence, and turned to in every judgment. This the very Philistines saw by the Light of Nature; Give Glory to God (fay they) peradventure he will lighten his hand from off you, I Sam. 6. 5. Also the Ninevites Counsel was, to Cry mightily to God and turn from their evil ways, who can tell (say they) if God will turn and repent, Jonah 3. 8, 9. In a word; the meaning of all God's Works is that men should fear before him, Eccles. 3.14. The goodness and patience of God leads them to repentance, Rom. 2.4. Hence the Apostle tells us, The Lord is long-suffering to us ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, 2 Pet. 3. 9. Mirus hîc erga humanum genus amor (faith Calvin on the place) quod omnes vult esse salvos, & ultro pereuntes in salutem colligere paratus est.

God in indulging his Patience and Longfuffering to men, doth virtually will their Repentance and Salvation. I know some interpret this place otherwise: God is long-suffering to us, that is, the anamioi, in the former Verse, not willing that any (viz.

of us) should perish, but that all (viz. of 16) should come to Repentance. But I conceive that there is no Necessity at all that the Text should be so straitned, nor yet Congruity for Long-fuffering towards the beloved, that they (who have already repented) should come to Repentance: Neither doth this answer the Scope of the place, which afferts, that God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, upon this ground, because of his long-suffering; and his Longfuffering extends to all, and in that extent its true End and Scope is to lead them to repentance and salvation. Wherefore the meaning is, God is long-suffering to us, not to us beloved only, but to us men, not willing our Perdition but Repentance: The true Duct and Tendency of his Longfuffering is to lead men to repentance and falvation; and therefore in willing that Long-fuffering, he doth virtually and ordinatively will their Repentance and Salvation.

Having thus at large laid down this Distinction with its parts, my Answer to the Quere proposed is this; God's Will of Conversion, as effective and determina-

tive of the Event, is accomplished in the actual Conversion of all the Elect by infuperable Grace; and God's Will of Conversion, as virtual and ordinative of Means, is accomplished in this, That there is a serious Exhibition of the Means in order to Conversion, as their proper End, and that that End (but for Man's voluntary Corruption) would be thereby attained, even in all.
